TROTSK LANDING PERFECT

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LENINGRAD, April 16.—It was a bleak and anxious day of waiting at the Trotsk airdrome, three miles from the little town of Gatchina, where the Emperor Paul I in fear of assassination built himself a chateau and fortress and where, nevertheless, he was murdered. It was white and desolate, the airdrome covered with snow three feet deep, over which the steep hangars loomed in black relief.

The Norge was expected first at noon, but 4, 5 and 6 o'clock passed and the darkness came, without news from the dirigible in which the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile expedition purpose to fly across the North Pole to Point Barrow, Alaska. The crowd of 2,000 or more that had trudged through the snow from Gatchina and the neighboring villages slowly dwindled. They were cold and weary, but unwilling to abandon hope of the airship's coming.

For hours the airdrome squadrons scoured the sky for a hundred miles around. There was no sign of the airship and the powerful radio stations at Kronstadt and Metakovselo reported no answer to inquiries.

Twice in the afternoon there was megaphoned the announcement that the airship was approaching and the crowd huddled closer toward the big wooden hangar, but each time it was a false alarm.

Red Aviator Attempts a Joke.

About 4 o'clock there was a sudden flurry of excitement when one of the planes signaled to clear the way for a forced landing. Like a falling leaf the airplane fluttered earthward, then suddenly flattened out and made a perfect landing on its ski runners and stopped within fifteen meters, and so close to a group of reporters and photographers that the wing tip smashed one camera to pieces.

The pilot naively explained that he was tired of flying round doing nothing and wanted to amuse the crowd, but M. Khalturin, the Red commander of the airdrome, did not see the joke at all and the young man went back to quarters with a severe reprimand.

At 6:30 P. M. several of the foreign Consuls and diplomats decided that it was useless to wait longer, and their special train was ordered to return to Leningrad. But twenty minutes later, before they had gone, came a message from Kronstadt that the dirigible was in touch by radio with the airship, which was rapidly approaching. At 7:30 there was a megaphone announcement that the airship was arriving, and all eyes were strained westward into the darkness.

The minutes passed—nothing, nothing. Then suddenly far down on the western horizon, below the faint, stormy moon, there glowed a tiny light in the sky. Hardly was it seen when—so swift was the airship's flight—the dark bulk of the machine showed against the sky, swooping down to reconnoitre the landing. Down within fifty meters of the ground she came, amid the cheers of the crowd; then she swung up again in a wide circle.

"She doesn't like her first look at Russia and is going on to the Pole," joked a bearded old peasant, but round she came and hovered over the airdrome. At exactly 8:10 P. M. the motors stopped and the ship came lower and lower toward the ground, standing silvery gray in the light of the huge log fires built at intervals across the field.

Red Soldiers Land the Airship.

Suddenly the hangar that had been a blaze of electric lights became darkness.

Something had gone wrong with a fuse. Then they dropped two ropes from the airship. Each was seized by fifty or more soldiers, scrambling like figures in the high, deep snow, their peaked cloth helmets showing up against the firelight. There was no wind, and M. Khalturin's arrangements worked perfectly.

"Steady, now!" he boomed through the megaphone. "Hold tight—pull on the left—pull on the right—prepare to support the gondola!" and 100 more men rushed forward to carry, as it seemed, a fragile shell upon their shoulders.

After an hour's manoeuvring the ship was pulled stern-first before the solid doors of the hangar, where oil lamps replaced the still dormant electricity.

"Careful now—it is a critical moment!" shouted M. Khalturin. "Lower it a bit more—pull to the right—steady—pull her in!" and, yard by yard, the long, shining cigar-like airship slid silently into the hangar.

The crew was half frozen and utterly exhausted. Buffeted by a tempest, lost in the clouds for thirteen hours—control, none knows why, of radio communication with the land, unable to lie or sit or smoke, they had had a

Germany Hears the Ex-Kaiser Has Crown Stolen From Palace

BERLIN, April 16 (AP).—New clews have been uncovered by Prussian State detectives in the hunt for the $875,000 jeweled crown of the late Queen Augusta, first wife of Kaiser Wilhelm II, which mysteriously disappeared from the royal palace on the Unter den Linden more than three years ago.

The information, the police said, virtually established the fact that the beautiful crown was smuggled out of the palace in 1922 and that Princess Hermine von Reuss wore it at Doorn, Holland, when she married the former monarch in exile. The crown legally belongs to the Prussian Government.

A former court jeweler told the police that the crown was brought to him in a leather hat box by a man who represented himself as an agent for the Kaiser. The man, it is said, told the jeweler that it was the Kaiser's greatest desire to see Princess Hermine wear the crown of his former Queen at the altar. From measurements the Kaiser knew the crown would not fit the Princess and asked that it be made smaller.

HOOVER'S POWERS OVER RADIO DENIED

WAVE LENGTH WAS SEIZED

CHICAGO, April 16 (AP).—The first "air piracy" case in the history of radio in the United States was decided here today in favor of the Zenith Radio Corporation and its President, Eugene F. McDonald Jr., against the Government in the court of Federal District Judge James H. Wilkerson.

The Government, in a criminal action, charged the defendants with operating radio apparatus contrary to the license issued to the corporation's station, WJAZ. Four specific allegations were made.

The Court held that Sections 1 and 2 of the Wireless act of 1912—the only laws existing that apply to broadcasting—were ambiguous, and that the act itself did not clothe the Secretary of Commerce with certain discretionary powers which he has allegedly assumed. Station WJAZ was licensed to operate one night a week or two hours on the same wave length of 322.4 meters assigned to the General Electric Company Station KOA at Denver.

Unable to obtain permission for more time, WJAZ wilfully "pirated" a wave length which was set aside for use of Canadian broadcasting stations, and, according to the briefs in the case, took this action in the hope of starting court action and bringing about legislation and clarification of the existing broadcasting laws and regulations. In addition to using the wave length the station also extended its time on the air.

Court Finds No Grant of Power.

In regard to the regulations, Judge Wilkerson in his decision says:

"There is no express grant of power in the act to the Secretary of Commerce to establish regulations. The regulations, subject to which the license is granted, are contained in the fourth section of the act.

"The defendant's license authorizes a use of a wave length of 322.4 meters on Thursday nights from 10 to 12 P. M. when the use of this period is not desired by the General Electric Company's Denver station.

"The Secretary of Commerce is required to issue the license subject to the regulations of the act. The Congress has withheld from him the power to prescribe additional regulations. If there is a conflict between a provision in the license and the regulations established by Congress the latter must control."

Regarding the division of time with another station the decision says:

"The statute is ambiguous in this respect, and, while it should be given reasonable construction, ambiguities

SHERIFF TO RULE IN PASSAIC MONDAY AS MILLS RESUME

ONE GETS AN INJUNCTION

Court Bars Picketing There, but United Front Leaders Say It Will Go On Elsewhere.

COLBY DEFENDS WEISBORD

Grand Jury Said to Have Brought In Three Indictments Against Leader—Bail Fund Sought.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 16.—At the request of Director of Public Safety Abram Preiskel, Sheriff Charles W. Morgan of Passaic County will move into this city on Monday with 150 armed deputies and also will take charge of the Passaic Police Department with its 200 regular and special policemen.

Sheriff Morgan, at Paterson today, said his investigations of the last two days convinced him that many strikers would be glad to return to work if offered protection. The mills will throw their gates wide open Monday under the protection of the Sheriff and his armed forces.

The riot act will not be read unless it is necessary, said Sheriff Morgan, whose forces will guard the mills by day and the homes of the workers in the mill district by night.

Monday is likely to see the crisis of the strike. The United Front Committee, conducting the strike, announced that picketing would be resumed at every mill in the strike area on Monday. Attempts by the police to break up mass picketing have generally resulted in rioting and the clubbing and arrest of strikers. Sheriff Morgan made no statement on his attitude toward the method of picketing followed by the textile workers, on strike twelve weeks.

Colby to Defend Weisbord.

Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson, will represent Albert Weisbord, leader of the United Front Committee, when the Harvard Law School graduate appears this morning before Supreme Court Justice Black in Paterson on a writ of habeas corpus, which alleges that he is being illegally detained.

Weisbord was arrested last Saturday in Passaic, where he assisted in the formation of a parade of children, and was held in $30,000 bail, a sum which has been attacked by his counsel as being excessive and oppressive.

The Passaic County Grand Jury for the January term completed its duties today. Before being discharged by County Judge Joseph A. Delaney it handed up numerous indictments. It is understood that these included three against Weisbord.

The indictments against Weisbord, it was reported, charge inciting to riot, inciting against the Government, and introducing Communist matter.

On the complaint of the Forstmann & Huffmann Company, one of the largest mills in this area, Vice Chancellor Bentley today issued a drastic temporary injunction restraining the leaders of the strikers, including Margaret Larkin, publicity representative, and others, from advising, encouraging or consulting with any of the employes of the defendant, or from molesting them or addressing them against their will.

Picketing the Forstmann & Huffmann mill or asking any of its employes to contribute to the strike fund is held to be contempt of Court in the order signed by Vice Chancellor Bentley and made returnable before him on April 29 at 1 Exchange Place, Jersey City.

Doesn't Affect Other Mills.

The injunction does not affect the carrying on of the strike at any of the other mills. In a supporting affidavit attached to the bill of complaint, Robert M. Reinold, personnel manager of the Forstmann & Huffmann Company, alleges that few of the employes of his company have taken active part in the strike. Affidavits of employes were presented asserting acts

Would Sell Governors Island To Help Army's Housing Plan

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP).—Arguing that funds be made available for the army's building program, Brig. Gen. Fox Conner, Assistant Chief of Staff, suggested to the Senate Military Committee today that the whole program would be put "on easy street" if the War Department were permitted to sell Governors Island, New York, and the Presidio of San Francisco.

The General estimated that Governors Island would bring $25,000,000, the Presidio $26,000,000, and other "surplus lands" owned by the department $30,000,000. He estimated that $110,000,000 would be required to complete the housing program.

Senator Bingham of Connecticut suggested that Governors Island might be converted into an airport, but General Conner said its value from a military viewpoint would be negligible. He disclosed that eventually the War Department wants to spend $4,500,000 for housing purposes at Fort Sill, Okla., alone.

CALLS LAWYER HEAD OF MILK GRAFT PLOT

Dr. Harris Sees Man Who Held a Responsible Position Under Hylan as the Master Mind.

FOUR GOT EXTORTION MONEY

Four persons were named by Harry Danziger of Middle Village, Queens, yesterday, as having received the money he admits extorting from bootleg milk dealers to insure their immunity from prosecution by the Health Department during the Hylan Administration, in the sale of adulterated milk.

As a result of his revelations, it was said last night that the milk investigation in Manhattan was now centring upon a lawyer who formerly held a responsible position under Mayor Hylan. He was credited by Dr. Louis L. Harris, Health Commissioner, with being the brains of the entire conspiracy. It was said that the plan of mulcting dealers in bootleg milk originated in his mind and that he acted as intermediary with the Health Department officials during the previous Administration when prosecution was threatened.

Danziger spent several hours yesterday with District Attorney Richard S. Newcombe and Peter M. Daly, his assistant, in Queens County. Danziger was accompanied by Joshua Bernstein, his brother-in-law. It was to Mrs. Bernstein that Danziger transferred his milk business after the investigation began. Bernstein, who is a lawyer, is said to have used his influence to make Danziger talk.

Nearly Ready for Grand Jury.

Despite Danziger's disclosure of the names of four persons he said received the money collected from the milk dealers, doubt was expressed by the authorities that he was giving all the information in his possession concerning the alleged protection fund of upward of $1,000,000. While he assumed an attitude of apparent sincerity, there was some reason for believing, it was said, that he did not wish to go so far as to furnish evidence upon which his former associates could be convicted. Notwithstanding this, Mr. Daly said that Mr. Newcombe felt satisfied with the result of the investigation thus far, and that it was likely the case would be presented to the grand jury next Tuesday.

District Attorney John E. McGeehan and his assistant, Sylvester J. Ryan of Bronx County, visited Commissioner Harris in the afternoon to discuss the milk investigation. Mr. McGeehan said that before Danziger pleaded guilty to extortion last Thursday, his counsel, Samuel Goldstein, had presented a stipulation in which it was agreed that his client would expect no consideration from the prosecutor as a result of his plea and the information he would give concerning the conspiracy.

In the stipulation Danziger expressed the hope that if he "told an honest and straightforward story," Mr. McGeehan would acquaint the prosecuting officers of the other counties of the fact, and, "if able through his influence," prevent Danziger's prosecution in Queens, Manhattan or elsewhere.

When Mr. McGeehan left Dr. Harris's office he took with him certain Health Department records covering the last two years, which he studied at his home last night. He said he would confer today with Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy, who has announced that he would instruct the Grand Jury in connection with the milk graft situation next Tuesday. Mr. McGeehan said that he would present a plan to Justice Levy, the nature of which he would not discuss.

Hard to Get Information.

One dissatisfying feature of the investigation as it existed now, Mr. McGeehan said, was the fact that various persons suspected of having information were showing unwillingness to appear before him for questioning when summoned.

"I want the public to know that these men are refusing to come to my office and I want their identity made public," he said. "I believe that the public should know everything going on in connection with the milk situation."

F. W. Kurimann, one of the Health Department inspectors who have been mentioned in the investigation, was

TWO SEATS IN MANHATTAN

Three More in Brooklyn and Two in Queens—Harlem Region Consolidated.

HAVE TWO SEATS IN ALL NOW

Democrats Preparing Their Own Measure—Smith Ready to Veto Republican Plan.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 16.—The Republican bill providing for a reapportionment of Senate districts throughout the State on the basis of the 1925 census figures was introduced in the Senate and Assembly at sessions held for that specific purpose late this afternoon. It is the last measure of primary importance likely to be placed before the present Legislature, which expects to bring its labors to a close next Friday.

There will be two reapportionment bills instead of one. When the contents of the final draft of the bill introduced today became known the Democratic leaders in the Legislature announced their intention to present a measure of their own, which probably will go in on Tuesday. Work on this eleventh hour bill, which has been under way in New York for some time, will be completed over the week-end.

In preparing their Senate map for New York City the Republican leaders there concentrated in an effort to create seven "safe" Republican Senate districts in that territory. They believe they have succeeded, and as a result the map has taken on the semblance of jig-saw puzzle, so fantastic are the district lines.

Of the "safe" districts, two have been carved out in Manhattan, three in Brooklyn and two in Queens. In the present Senate there are only two Republican members representing New York City districts.

No Compromise Spirit Shown.

It is plain from the gerrymandering of districts in New York City that the Republican majority in the Senate and Assembly approached the task of carving out the new district lines in anything but a spirit of compromise designed to enlist Democratic support for the bill.

In the territory up-State, most of which is dependably Republican, the changes are few and not of fundamental importance.

In Erie County changes have been made in all three Senatorial districts, with a view to making them all safely Republican. All are represented by Republicans at present, but usually one of the three—the present Forty-ninth—has sent a Democrat to the Senate.

In Monroe, where there are two Senate districts, there have been slight changes rendered necessary through shifts in population, but both Monroe districts are strongly Republican as it is.

Another change which may have been made with a view to making a "safe" out of a somewhat "wabbly" Senate district provides for the throwing together of Rensselaer and Saratoga into what would be known under the new reapportionment as the Thirty-second district. Rensselaer, which for the last decade has constituted a Senate district by itself, has sent a Democratic Senator to Albany on two occasions during that period.

Other changes up-State include detaching Chenango County from the Fortieth Senate District, now composed of that county, Broome and Cortland, and throwing it, with Madison, Otsego and Schoharie, into a new Fortieth Senate District.

Montgomery and Schenectady under the new reapportionment would constitute the Thirty-third Senate District. Under the present reapportionment Schenectady and Saratoga have been combined in the Thirty-second Senatorial District. None of these changes would seriously affect the status quo within the Republican State organization, or the political complexion of the Senate.

District Made for Nicoll.

20 New Yorkers in House Demand Beer and Wine; Democrats Serve Notice on Senate Committee

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Declaring their conviction that the people they represent demand beer, wine and fermented beverages, twenty Democratic members of the House of Representatives from New York City, Albany and Buffalo filed with the Senate Judiciary Committee today a statement in which they serve notice they are going to fight for these beverages. The statement read:

Sentiment of our people has been conveyed to us in no unmistakable terms. They demand wine, beer and fermented beverages. To attain their desire we believe they are willing to abide by the Constitution and forego distilled liquor and ardent spirits.

Feeling obliged and willing at all times to express the wants and desires of our people, we have come to the conclusion that the bill we have introduced best meets their desires.

Our bill does not violate the Constitution. It follows it. The bill repeals the Volstead act in its entirety and, starting out anew, prohibits the unquestionably "intoxicating liquors" which are distilled liquors or spirits. It leaves each State then free to do as it sees fit in reference to beer, wine and fermented beverages. The so-called "dry" States may remain "dry" and prohibit, if they see fit, even beer containing any percentage of alcohol, however small. The other States may likewise provide and regulate the sale of beer and wine. And all States will be protected by the old Webb-Kenyon law from interstate traffic in any beverage they prohibit.

This, we believe, is a new step in the attempt to solve this vexing problem—complete prohibition for the present, at least, of distilled liquors and ardent spirits—but vesting power in the States to permit the sale of lighter beverages as the respective States see fit.

We have no fear of the constitutionality of our proposal. We have given it a great deal of consideration and we stand ready to meet any challenge that it violates the Eighteenth Amendment.

TUG STRIKE SETTLED; MEN WIN PAY RISE

Towboat Owners Grant 10-Hour Day, $10 to $25 Increase and More "Grub" Money.

The strike of towboat men which crippled shipping in the harbor yesterday was settled last evening. The agreement was reached just twenty-four hours after the strike order, issued by Captain William A. Maher, general manager of the Associated Marine Workers, had called out approximately 3,000 workers and tied up 400 towboats.

The settlement was a victory for the workers, who will receive an advance in pay and the ten-hour working day which they had demanded. The men left union headquarters after the meeting last night pledged to report for work this morning, when the new schedule becomes effective.

The strike threatened yesterday to cause a serious situation through tying up harbor craft and holding up the arrival and departure of transatlantic liners. So serious was the outlook deemed that T. J. Williams of the United States Department of Labor and Colonel Michael J. Reagan, State Labor Mediator, arrived in New York to take a hand in the affair.

Based on 313 Working Days.

According to a statement given out at union headquarters, the ten-hour day in the new agreement is based on 313 working days a year, for which the men will be paid regardless of whether they work the full number of days. They are to be paid for a full ten-hour day regardless of whether they were required to work the entire ten hours.

The men have received an increase in pay of from $10 to $25 a month, as against their demand for from $10 to $30 a month. The men in single crew

With That Sum, He Says, Supply of Alcohol to Bootleggers Can Be Stopped.

WOULD MAKE LIQUOR PAY

Collection of Taxes on Illegal Traffic, He Declares, Would Meet Enforcement Costs.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—While some of the dry leaders were launching attacks today on General Lincoln C. Andrews, because of his testimony before the Senate committee that the distribution of light beer under Government control would help in enforcing the prohibition laws, the head of the Government enforcement agencies issued a statement telling what he hoped to accomplish if Congress granted a supplemental appropriation of $3,000,000. He predicted that traffic in beer would be stopped and diversion of industrial alcohol into the bootleg trade virtually eliminated soon, if he was let alone to carry out his program.

General Andrews said he believed a sufficient sum eventually could be collected in tax assessments on estates of bootleggers, producers of industrial alcohol and brewers detected in illicit trade to pay for the entire cost of the Federal enforcement work, and that a part of the money which he now asked from Congress would be employed to finance squads of investigators who would engage in that work.

After conferring with Secretary Mellon, General Andrews left the city. It was stated that he had gone to Philadelphia on private business.

None of the Treasury officials would make any comment today on the situation created by the testimony General Andrews gave before the Senate committee, but it was indicated that the testimony was personal with the General and should not be in any way interpreted as putting the Treasury Department on administration on record in favor of modification of the law to permit the sale of beer.

New Plans Worked Out.

"When the 1927 estimate was presented," said General Andrews, "the reorganization of the prohibition unit was not yet completed and experience therewith had not yet developed the possibilities for law enforcement. We have now worked out detailed plans along three new lines and developed the possibilities along three others to a point where we feel assured of effective results if these plans may be carried out. These plans, together with additional legislation which we are asking of Congress, should result in the practical extinction of present large sources of supply and a more satisfactory service for the legitimate industries.

"We have recently begun the organization of a special Federal squad of tried, experienced agents operating under the supervision of a chief in Washington, without regard to district lines, whose function is the supervision of the permittees using or manufacturing specially denatured alcohol.

"The work of this squad has already reduced diversion by over 500,000 gallons per month, and is reducing the number of permittees materially. We will cut down the number of permittees by several hundred. When fully organized they will be able to cut out this source of illegitimate supply and to furnish the administrators such knowledge of the legitimate permittees

EMERSON PRAISES DRY ACT

But Physician Says Lax Enforcement Causes Gain in Alcoholic Cases.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The drys, with Wayne B. Wheeler of the Anti-Saloon League, Bishop Cannon of the Methodist Church and Canon William S. Chase of the Episcopal Church of Brooklyn, in command, took the offensive against the wets today, with every indication that it will require most of next week before the last of their witnesses, who will probably be Mr. Wheeler, takes the stand.

The Senate Judiciary Committee room in the Senate Office Building seemed to be packed today with more people, if such a thing be possible, than on any other day since the hearings began last week. The applause and hisses that greeted the assertions of the dry witnesses indicated that the audience was largely composed of advocates of prohibition.

The witnesses represented the ministry, the medical profession, women's organizations, labor, settlement work and other professions, and included such outstanding dry advocates as the Rev. Dr. Charles S. MacFarland of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the Right Rev. James Henry Darlington of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Harrisburg, Dr. Haven Emerson, former Health Commissioner of New York City; Edward Keating, editor of Labor; Mrs. Helen H. Green of the "Golden Rule" organization of Cleveland, and the Rev. W. I. Haven, D.D., of the American Bible Society.

Mr. Wheeler introduced into the committee record a statement in which he denounced the modification bills now pending before the Committee on Judiciary and endorsed the bill introduced by Senator Goff, one of the dry members of the committee, which if enacted would make it much easier for prohibition agents to obtain warrants to search private homes.

Mr. Wheeler announced that he would take the stand later as a witness. Then will come his cross-examination by Senator Reed, which is expected to be one of the big events of the closing weeks of this session of Congress.

MacFarland Speaks for Cadman.

Leading off, Dr. MacFarland, who explained he was also speaking for the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D. D., of New York, President of the Federal Council of Churches, said that all the personal liberty talk now being heard throughout the country was a delusion and a snare. He pictured prohibition as the "magnificent experiment," and once while in the middle of his testimony exclaimed, "Give prohibition a chance," a plea which brought forth applause.

Another witness was Lee Beatty, Superintendent of the Madison Square Church House, who said his district includes that part of New York City that is bounded on the south by Twenty-eighth Street, on the north by Forty-second Street, on the west by Lexington Avenue, with the East River as the eastern boundary.

In that section, he declared, there is not at this time a single speakeasy or blind tiger. Mr. Beatty also expressed his conviction that the home brew and home distillery situation is much exaggerated.

Enforcement Lax, Says Emerson.

Dr. Emerson submitted statistics which showed that in 1925 the deaths from alcoholism in Bellevue Hospital were greater with the exception of the years 1910-1921 than in any years in the history of the alcoholic ward. In 1920, the first year of the Volstead law, the number had been reduced to twenty-nine deaths, but in 1925 it had climbed back to 202.

"How do you account of that?" inquired Senator Reed.

"Because alcohol is available again as it was in the past," replied Mr. Emerson.

Dr. Emerson, however, declared that prohibition is the greatest boon the nation can have if it is enforced. He insisted that the betterment of conditions among people of small means was due to it as well as the decrease in many diseases.

In Cleveland, according to Mrs. Green, the authorities in their efforts to enforce prohibition not only arrest the man who sells drunk but also the man who looks drunk, and she expressed her thorough acquiescence in

Tracker of Desert Hunts for Spanish Flier; Hamed, Egyptian 'Sherlock Holmes,' on Trail

CAIRO, April 16 (AP).—An ancient art of the desert, the uncanny skill of specially trained natives in tracking man or beast over the vast expanse of sand, has been called into play in renewed efforts to find trace of Captain Esteves and his mechanician, of the Spanish flying expedition to Manila, missing since last Sunday.

After days of steady search by British aviators, Hamed, prize tracker of the British detective force of Egypt, today was somewhere on the Syrian Desert trying to unravel the mystery of the whereabouts of the two Spanish airmen.

Hamed, who is called the "Sherlock Holmes of Egypt," in tracking, was taken today to Captain Esteves's abandoned airplane near Amman, Palestine, and there he began tracing the footprints of the two men, who had left a note saying they were proceeding afoot.

Hamed, who is gifted with an uncanny knack of following trails frequently has been utilized by the police when all other trackers have failed. He is greatly feared by the criminal class and many natives attribute his skill to black magic.

He is faced with an extremely difficult task in solving the present riddle of the sands. Not only is a man's trail quickly obliterated by the constant shifting of the sands, but sand storms have been raging over since the Spanish airmen disappeared.

Despite the failure thus far to locate the Spanish airmen, the searchers by no means have abandoned hope, believing that Captain Esteves and his companion may be sheltered with some desert tribe.

Hamed is a quiet, unassuming, black-headed man, who would scarcely be noticed in a crowd except for his deep-set black eyes, which possess an eerie, piercing look.

Stokowski Satirizes Philadelphia Audience; His Orchestra Drifts In and Out, Piecemeal

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 16.—Leopold Stokowski "turned on the audience" at this afternoon's performance of the Philadelphia Orchestra, and, playing his entire program upon the taut strings of satire and irony, "spanked" those of the Friday crowds who, it is said, have earned a "notorious reputation" for coming in late and leaving early.

The audience was amazed and dumbfounded. Many in the boxes applauded the leader's satire, but some were not so pleased with it and hissed. Forty first-row patrons walked out.

The first shock came when the curtain rose and only two players appeared on the stage, the first violin and the first cellist.

Mr. Stokowski made his appearance, raised his baton and the concert was on. The audience expected to hear the rest of the orchestra behind a backdrop. Instead, the two instruments continued alone. Later the various members of the orchestra, nonchalantly drifted in, sat down and broke in on the music.

One or two players made hurried entrances and threw themselves into the most convenient chairs when they started to play.

At the close of the piece the usual contingent of late-comers paraded down the aisles.

After two more numbers Mr. Stokowski sprang his second surprise. As the orchestra began the first movement of Haydn's "Farewell" symphony one or two members, apparently tired of playing calmly wandered off the stage. The exodus kept on, to the chagrin of the audience, until, in the last movement, only two violins remained.

One of the violinists walked off the stage, playing meanwhile. The other arose, bowed graciously to the director, and left the stage empty except for Mr. Stokowski, who kept up his "direction" to the end.

Then came the final subtle slap. Standing alone, Mr. Stokowski turned his back to the audience and, with the familiar gesture, ordered his phantom orchestra to rise to the audience's applause. The chairs were empty. The director turned, smiled and left the stage.

Germans Defend Negotiations—Polish Premier Sees No Cause for Alarm.

BERLIN, April 16.—Russia and not Germany sought the "amicable understanding" which is now being negotiated between the two powers, according to indications received from a spokesman for the Wilhelmstrasse today.

The Soviet Government, it is declared officially here, desired a formal agreement with the Luther Cabinet to offset the Locarno compacts, which in Moscow's eyes represent a westward orientation on the part of the Reich.

What form the convention, now being negotiated and fast approaching its conclusion, will take is not revealed by the German Foreign Office, but it is now conceded that it will involve definite political commitments.

Apparently a German pledge of neutrality in the event of Russia becoming embroiled with other nations is one of the foremost considerations. In this connection the Russo-Turkish Treaty is mentioned frequently at the Wilhelmstrasse, although it is insisted there is no close parallel, since Germany is not discussing anything of a military character with the Russians and there is consequently no question of a defensive alliance.

But German officialdom is remarkably vague about how the Reich can undertake to insure a neutral attitude toward the Soviet in view of the possible future application of Article XVI. of the League covenant, which obliges member States to cooperate in League enterprises against the violators of world peace.

League May Interfere With Treaty.

The Locarno powers promised to take Germany's military and geographical position into consideration in applying Article XVI, but admittedly Germany in the last analysis is bound by this article once she becomes a member of the League. Therefore, to what extent she can bind herself to neutrality is dependent upon the League Council's ultimate interpretation of Article XVI and the Reich's obligations under it.

The room for a possible conflict in the Russo-German agreement to remain reciprocally neutral and the eventuality of a League undertaking against Russia in which Germany would willy-nilly be involved, is evident.

Meanwhile, however, Berlin affects to consider that Locarno would be strengthened rather than weakened by an understanding for the promotion of peace in Eastern Europe, and that the signatories of the western security treaties have no reason to object to such a proceeding. Any convention or treaty concluded with Moscow, the Wilhelmstrasse affirms, will no more be directed against the allied countries than the Locarno compacts are aimed at the Soviets, nor, it is said, is it in any way symptomatic of a return to the pre-war system of alliances.

The setback received by the Reich at Geneva, it is also insisted, has no bearing whatever on the Russo-German parleys, which were begun simultaneously with the diplomatic moves leading up to the Locarno meeting.

Yet, in official quarters here, emphasis is laid on Germany's feeling that the Rapallo treaty was adequate to guarantee this country's amity with Russia, and that it is the Russians who desired a more binding expression of mutual friendship.

Riga, April 15.—Concurrently with the negotiations in Berlin for a Russo-German supplement to the Rapallo Treaty, the Soviet Government continues to develop plans for an understanding with Poland and the Baltic States.

Political circles in the Baltic States now confirm a telegram mentioning Soviet proposals for a guarantee compact published in THE NEW YORK TIMES on April 9. Negotiations with all these States have hitherto been only oral, but each has now been requested by the Soviet to present proposals in a definite written form.

A statement, confirmed by the Soviet Government, insists on treating with Poland separately, but is willing to bunch the others, Lithuania, Latvia, Esthonia and Finland, together and will arrange treaties with two, three or four or each singly, as may be desired.

Poland, however, shows great initiative in these negotiations and is striving to arrange a general conference of all five States with Soviet Russia to conclude treaties of neutrality and non-aggression.

Finland remains the most unresponsive, emphasizing the fact that aggression is possible only by the Soviet and that therefore any guarantee of non-aggression to the Baltic States is superfluous. Moscow, it is held, should give that kind of a guarantee in which the strongest security would be a submission of all conflicts to arbitration. But Moscow stubbornly refuses to include an arbitration clause.

Latvia appears also rather skeptical, still regarding the proposals as a tactical move by Moscow.

The most responsive State is Lithuania, and news that separate Lithuanian-Soviet negotiations have already begun is confirmed, but their existence is far from being approved by the other States.

Lithuania apparently believes a special agreement with Moscow would recognize Lithuania's frontiers as defined by the Soviet-Lithuanian peace treaty and thus strengthen Lithuania's claim to Vilna.

Altogether the opinion prevails that positive results are not likely from these Soviet-Baltic negotiations.

Skrzynski Calm on Berlin Parley.

VIENNA, April 16.—No alarm over the Russo-German negotiations was expressed by the Polish Premier, Count Skrzynski, in an interview today. His manifest reserve, however, in answering this question and others regarding the Russian refusal to attend the disarmament conference and the possibility of an Eastern European Locarno indicates they preoccupy him more than he admits.

After explaining that he lacked precise information of the objects and results of the Russo-German negotiations, Count Skrzynski said:

"It cannot be possible, however, for any agreement they reach to be in conflict with the Locarno treaties. Germany in entering the League of Nations must register all treaties openly at Geneva, so it would be foolish of her at this juncture to enter into any secret accords contrary to the Locarno spirit. This being true, Russia cannot really obtain anything important from Germany."

Count Skrzynski described M. Tchitcherin's answer to the disarmament invitation as "strange" and was very unwilling to discuss its effects. Asked if they would be harmful, he said "in some parts, yes, in others, perhaps, no." Pressed to elucidate, he explained:

"In the circumstances it would be very difficult for States on the Russian frontier to disarm. The basis of disarmament is, of course, security. However, it may be possible to reach agreements between certain States in other parts of Europe, perhaps in Central Europe."

Premier Is Vexed Over Rumors.

The Premier appeared vexed when he was asked concerning American and British reports that Poland is endeavoring to promote an Eastern Locarno with Russia and the Baltic States. He said:

"People are always supposing we diplomats are doing much more work than we really are. The first Locarno is not yet solid enough to add another one to it."

He gave the impression that the budding Eastern Locarno, much to his displeasure, had been nipped by the Russo-German parley. It is believed this deeviopment is at least partly responsible for his trip to Prague and Vienna, though he denies he has any other object than to repay friendly visits.

Premier Skrzynski's brief statement to the foreign press was confined entirely to generalizations. He criticized "realpolitik" as a policy based on hatred, declaring that all nations now recognize they must adopt a more fraternal attitude to one another. "We must learn to speak in various national languages, but we must think in European."

In this connection he took pains to emphasize the rôle Vienna could play, saying:

"Although it is no longer the capital of a great monarch, it is still unique in Central Europe. It is still the intellectual, cultural and political capital of Central Europe."

This is considered a significant explanation of his visit to Vienna—that it is part of a growing policy to use Vienna as a neutral intermediary among Central European States, in particular between Poland and Germany.

Count Skrzynski and Chancellor Ramek signed a new arbitration treaty this afternoon. It is practically the same as the one recently signed between Prague and Vienna, differences in details being largely due to the fact that Poland and Austria have no common frontier.

A gala night such as Vienna had not witnessed for years was held tonight in Court Skrzynski's honor at the Opera, with Mme. Jeritza singing for the first time since her return from New York. After the performance the Premier returned to Warsaw.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 16.—Lord Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India, was said today to be the Cabinet Minister who inherited a substantial portion of the fortune, estimated at between £6,000,000 and £7,000,000, left by Sir Robert P. Houston, Liverpool shipowner, whose funeral took place today.

LONDON, April 16 (AP).—Although it had been reported by the newspapers that the greater part of the estate of Sir Robert Patterson Houston, wealthy ship owner, who died this week, was willed to a Cabinet Minister, possibly the Earl of Birkenhead, The Daily Mail reports a denial by Sir Robert's lawyers that a member of the Cabinet would benefit by a bequest.

The Mail says that years ago the Baronet made a will bequeathing large sums to Lord Birkenhead and other friends, but that since then Sir Robert and Lord Birkenhead became estranged and the will was destroyed. It is not stated whether another was drawn, but the newspaper says that if the estate amounts to £7,000,000, as reported, the death duties will bring about £3,000,000 into the national exchequer.

The first Earl of Birkenhead has always had an air of affluence, although the expenses of his successive official positions must have been large. He has a mansion at 22 Grosvenor Garden and law offices at 4 Elm Court, the Temple, London, and a country house at Charlton, Banbury. But, like the late Lord Salisbury, when a young man, he labored early and late with his pen in order to supplement his salary.

As Solicitor General, as Lord Rector of Glasgow University, and as Lord High Chancellor in the Lloyd George Coalition War Cabinet, his name was also familiar, not only to the readers of law and educational reviews, but also to those of the weekly and daily press, as a writer on a variety of popular topics. He reviewed many books.

One of his last comments was on Lady Oxford's (Margot Asquith's) "Places and Persons," which was syndicated in England a year ago. In the following June, Premier Baldwin is understood to have had the Secretary of State for India particularly in mind when he expressed the wish, which amounted to an order, that Cabinet Ministers should not write for the press while in office. This edict is said to have hit Lord Birkenhead hard. Since then his name has been seen only on a book, published early this year, "Fourteen English Judges."

STRIKERS DENOUNCE FUR PEACE TERMS

GOLD TO KEEP UP FIGHT

Workers Insist on 40-Hour Week—"Let Them Try and Get It," Says Federation Organizer.

The terms of a proposed settlement of the fur strike, announced on Thursday by Hugh Frayne, national organizer of the American Federation of Labor, were howled down yesterday afternoon at three overflow meetings of the strikers.

Mr. Frayne's proposals were read by Benjamin Gold, head of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, at Webster Hall, 117 East Eleventh Street, Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East Fourth Street, and Beethoven Hall, 210 East Fifth Street. At each hall the crowds were so great that the entrances had to be closed and hundreds turned away. Those inside crowded the lobbies, jammed into the aisles and stood perched on railings, boxes, tables and other points of vantage.

When Gold entered the meetings to discuss Thursday's demonstration at Carnegie Hall he received a tumultuous welcome. Admirers brought him a basket of roses and carnations. Holding up his hand to quiet the applause, the youthful strike leader said that Mr. Frayne's terms were altogether unacceptable and that even though outlawed by the International Fur Workers' Union the local union would keep up its fight until the strikers' demands were met. A storm of boos and hisses broke out when Mr. Gold read the proposed terms.

Others who spoke at the three meetings were former Assemblyman August Claessens, Secretary of the Socialist Party in New York, who was making his first appearance at a fur strike meeting; William W. Weinstone, Secretary of the Workers' (Communist) Party; Robert Dunn of the American Civil Liberties Union; Benjamin Gitlow, Workers' Party candidate for Mayor last Fall; Abraham Shiplacoff, leader of the leather goods workers; Louis Heyman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, Algernon Green of the Rand School and several members of the general committee which has been conducting the fur strike.

All urged the strikers to keep their ranks intact, to maintain the picket lines and not to forget that their most important struggle was still with the manufacturers.

Mr. Frayne had no comment to make yesterday on the fur strike situation. When informed that the strikers had rejected the proposed settlement terms and were still insisting on the forty-hour week, Mr. Frayne said: "Let them get it if they can." He said the International Fur Workers' Union was continuing its poll of the workers to determine whether or not the proposed terms were acceptable as a basis for conference.

boats will receive a flat increase of $10 a month for all grades of workers from captains to deckhands. Double crew men, or those working six hours on and six hours off, will receive increases of from $15 to $25 a month.

Captains, engineers and mates on double-crew boats will receive a $25 increase, while deckhands, stewards and other workers on boats that carry two crews will receive a $15 increase.

The agreement will be effective for one year. The negotiations were carried on by representatives of the Mutual, Dalzell, Barrett and other towing companies, and the conference lasted several hours.

After the question of wages had been adjusted and the ten-hour day agreed upon the strikers advanced another demand that for a time threatened to bar a settlement. That was a demand for more "grub" money. On each boat the steward is allowed a certain sum to feed each member of the crew. The workers contended that this sum was not enough to allow them to be fed in a manner befitting their work. After some discussion the owners agreed on an increase from 75 cents to 85 cents in the allowance for food.

When Captain Maher announced at headquarters, 120 Broad Street, that the owners had granted a wage increase the men were evidently surprised at the early settlement, for some of them had looked forward to a long fight. Some tugboat captains pointed out that the Associated Marine Workers had been in existence since 1922 but that this was the first strike it had called.

Representatives of towing companies attending the conference with the Workers' Committee were G. H. Dalzell for the Dalzell Towing Company, James H. Moran for the Moran Towing and Transportation Company, James A. Ryan for the Taylor Towing Line, Edward E. Barrett for the Barret line, William T. Flannery for the Flannery line.

The arriving French liner Savoie was forced to anchor in Quarantine in the afternoon, being unable to come to her North River pier because the line's officials were unable to get tugs to assist her up the river.

The strike disrupted the business of the harbor all day and while the boat owners questioned the number of men on strike they admitted that the situation was serious. Captain Maher said that 3,000 men had obeyed the strike order and that 400 tugs had been tied up.

The Cornell Towing Company, one of the large concerns at the port, signed the agreement in the early evening. The O'Brien Contracting Company, the Tracey Towing Company and six smaller companies had signed earlier in the day. Their action released about 60 towboats and sent 650 men back to work.

The French liner Bourdonnais came to her pier at the foot of West Fifty-ninth Street in the afternoon without the aid of tugs. Her captain manoeuvred her off the pier and it was more than an hour before her nose was turned shoreward and she moved gradually alongside her berth.

CASTS PASSPORTS INTO SEA.

Steward's Mistake Gets 47 Passengers Into Trouble.

Forty-seven passengers of the French liner Bourdonnais, from Bordeaux, arrived yesterday without passports, because a steward threw the passports overboard when he mistook them for wastepaper. It was explained that "pour le poste" means "give it to the postman," and "non post" means wastepaper which the stewards are to dump overboard. The steward misunderstood his instructions.

The plight of the forty-seven passengers, of whom fourteen were American citizens, presented a delicate problem to the immigration authorities, but finally Immigration Inspector John Montgomery decided that if the unlucky passengers would make affidavit as to the correctness of the information contained in their passports he would permit them to land.

Governor A. Harry Moore, who was ill in Jersey City, made known through his secretary in Trenton that he has no authority to remove law enforcement officials in Passaic and Bergen counties, as requested by the textile strikers. He said that he had no desire to remove them, but felt that they should be encouraged in every lawful effort to do their duty.

Fund Sought for Bail.

The American Civil Liberties Union and the League for Industrial Democracy announced yesterday a movement to obtain guarantors to assure a million-dollar bail fund to assist strikers and leaders requiring bail. A mass meeting will be held soon in New York to further the idea, it was said.

The bail bond situation was discussed yesterday by Norman Thomas of the League for Industrial Democracy, who is out on $10,000 bail for testing the Riot act. He said:

"Irrespective of the merits of the strike itself, those who want to vindicate American ideals, and the tradition of a government of law and not men, can aid this bail situation. The proper way to handle bail, of course, is in general through bonds written by surety companies. The surety companies must be guaranteed either by actual securities or, what is far preferable, by personal guarantors whose assurances the company will accept.

"The Emergency Committee for Strikers' Relief, formed by the American Civil Liberties Union and the League for Industrial Democracy, of which I am Chairman and Evelyn Preston Treasurer, is seeking enough guarantors to assure us of a million dollar bail fund. We do not anticipate any loss on bail bonds that may be written, but obviously the greater the number of guarantors the less proportionately would be any loss. We are, therefore, issuing a public appeal to all those who believe that the Anglo-Saxon institution of bail should not be used to break a strike to help us obtain the necessary guarantees."

To Seek an Injunction.

John Larkin Hughes of Newark, counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union, is preparing papers in an injunction suit to restrain the Bergen County authorities from "further violation of civil rights." It will also be alleged that the Sheriff's men violated property rights in arresting Mr. Thomas on ground rented by the League for Industrial Democracy. The petition will be supported by affidavits of Forrest Bailey, director of the American Civil Liberties Union; Freda Kirchway, Norman Thomas, Arthur Warner and Arthur Garfield Hays.

Approximately 2,500 strikers attended the mass meeting at Wallington arranged by the Strike Committee. Order prevailed. No county officers appeared at the meeting. The only officers nearby were three policemen, who paid no attention to the meeting, but directed traffic. Protestant Episcopal Bishop Paul Jones of Utah, of the Fellowship of Reconciliation; the Rev. John Wroblewksi, rector of the Polish National Catholic Church of Passaic; Elizabeth Gurley Flynn and J. O. Bentha1 addressed the meeting.

The special committee of citizens and clergymen formed to mediate between strikers and mill owners met today and will meet again tomorrow.

COOLIDGE KEEPS HANDS OFF.

Turns Strikers' Affidavits Over to Department of Justice.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—President Coolidge has no information that the Federal law has been violated in the Passaic strike. If it has he thinks that the United States District Attorney should investigate and act.

The affidavits presented to him by representatives of the strikers yesterday have been referred to the Department of Justice. The Department of Labor, it was pointed out, was in touch with the situation and doing what it could in the way of mediation and conciliation.

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP).—Passaic textile strike conditions are becoming such that a Senate investigation should be authorized, Senator Borah told the Senate today, urging the Manufacturers Committee to report the La Follette resolution, calling for an inquiry without delay. Senator Borah said he had "reliable information that the employers no longer desire an investigation."

NORMAN THOMAS SUES THE SECURITY LEAGUE

Asks $25,000 for Slander by One of Its Speakers, Who Denies Report of Speech.

Joseph Cashman, a speaker for the National Security League, and the organization itself were named as defendants in a $25,000 slander suit begun yesterday by Norman Thomas, who alleges that Cashman, at a luncheon of the Lions' Club on April 13, alleged that he took college students to Passaic "to instil in them the seeds of revolution."

Mr. Thomas, who is represented by Arthur Garfield Hays, of 42 Exchange Place, caused the papers to be served on Mr. Cashman yesterday.

On information and belief, Mr. Thomas alleges that the National Security League "pretends to stand for American principles of Government, but its purpose is "to endeavor to upset the Constitution of the United States and the principles of the Government thereof by inciting persons to prevent others from exercising the rights guaranteed them by the said Constitution."

Assails Security League.

Mr. Thomas further alleges that "the said National Security League, Inc., spreads propaganda through various officials in various forms, one method consisting of calling any persons who believe or act on the constitutional guarantees of free speech, press and assemblage, revolutionists, Bolsheviks, Communists and Socialists, ignorantly asserting there is no distinction, and in other ways slandering or libeling such persons, unless such persons express the views held by members of this organization and stated in its literature."

At the Lions' Club luncheon, says Mr. Thomas, Mr. Cashman "maliciously and ignorantly made statements to the effect that the strike now existing in Passaic and Garfield, N. J., originated in Communist headquarters in Chicago, and was planned by Communists as a lesson in revolution; that the plaintiff is at the head of a plot to corrupt the morals of college boys and girls and has taken City College students with him to New Jersey to instil in them the seeds of revolution."

Mr. Cashman sent the following letter to THE TIMES yesterday:

Editor, NEW YORK TIMES,
Times Square,
New York City.
Dear Sir:

In the issue of the TIMES of even date, you report an address which I made before the Lions Club at the Commodore Hotel yesterday. You make the following statement:

"Mr. Cashman asserted that Norman Thomas, who was arrested for making a speech in the strike area, is at the head of a plot to corrupt the morals of college boys and girls, and has taken City College students with him to New Jersey to instil in them the seeds of revolution."

I beg to state that I did not make the statements attributed to me in the foregoing paragraph. What I did say was that Norman Thomas and various other persons whom I named are members of the League for Industrial Democracy, and that they and others speak under the auspices of the Student Forum at the various liberal clubs in colleges throughout the country; that such speakers as Mr. Thomas and the others named spread subversive ideas among the students of those clubs, and that constructive and patriotic speakers are not permitted to speak there. I quoted from a pamphlet by R. M. Whitney entitled "The Youth Movement in America," showing some of the types of subjects discussed at liberal clubs, including such clubs in women's colleges.

I did not, however, at any time make the statement that Norman Thomas was engaged in any such work, or was at the head of any group engaged in such work as is stated in the above quotation.

Furthermore, I did not say that Arthur Garfield Hays was a Revolutionist. I may have said that Arthur Garfield Hays was a Socialist, and a member of the American Civil Liberties Union and other kindred groups.

I might also add that I was not speaking at the Lions Club under the auspices of the National Security League, but was filling an engagement by direct invitation of the Lions Club.

I am writing this letter in justice to Mr. Thomas and Mr. Hays, whose views on political, economic and social matters are generally contrary to my own. I am quite familiar with their views, as I have debated on the platform the question of freedom of speech with both of these gentlemen, and while I disagree with their conception of freedom of speech, and their political and economic beliefs, I have no reason to feel anything but respect for them personally.

Will you kindly publish this letter in order that full justice may be done Mr. Thomas?

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH T. CASHMAN.

Greeted by the Officials.

Almost mechanically they responded to the greetings of the Italian Naval Attaché, Signor Miraglia and Consul Bombieri, the Norwegian Consul Platow and other officials, Russian and foreign. At 10:30 o'clock they piled into rough peasant sleighs to make a wary jolting trip to Gatchina, where—a startling contrast—they were lodged in the imperial bed chambers with priceless carpets, wood and painted ceilings and the furniture that was the gift of French Kings to the Russian Czar.

Colonel Umberto Nobile, the commander of the ship, and Lieutenant Riiser-Larsen, second in command, expressed the utmost satisfaction over the airship's performance over difficult conditions and with the Russian arrangements for the landing. They warmly thanked and congratulated M. Khalturin and M. Zinovief—no relation of the President of the Communist International—Commander of the Leningrad air district, for the manner in which the ship was manoeuvred into the hangar.

Then they went to sleep.

"This is the first real rest for six days," said Colonel Nobile, "and don't wake me tomorrow."

It is probable that the reception by the Academy of Science, which was planned for tonight, will be postponed until tomorrow to give the crew time to rest. They are expected to stay here for a week or ten days until informed that the new hangar is ready at Kings Bay, Spitzbergen.

Dropped Note in Esthonia.

RIGA, Latvia, April 16.—Numerous reports were received today from places along the route taken by the Norge over Esthonia yesterday, telling of the signals which the explorers made to the people below when the airship encountered the fog.

One states that near Pelkin the Norge, hovering low, dropped a packet, which the watchers found, containing a note saying that it had lost its bearings, owing to winds and fog. The note was written in English and German and read:

"Where are we, north or south of the Gulf of Finland? If south, please hold arms aloft; if north, cross arms."

Engines to Be Overhauled.

LENINGRAD, April 16 (AP).—Early from their sleepy beds in the air on the journey yesterday from Oslo to Trotsk, the officers and crew of the Norge, rested the greater part of today at the Gatchina Palace. Celebrations in their honor have been postponed until the men have thoroughly recovered from the effects of their long vigil at their posts.

Colonel Nobile said today that the motors will be thoroughly overhauled before the dirigible starts on the next lap of the voyage northward which, it is confidently expected, will eventually lead across the North Pole to Alaska.

Colonel Nobile described in detail some of the experiences of the 17-hour trip from Oslo to Trotsk.

"I am not afraid of fog," he said, "and if during the polar flight we encounter fogs like that of yesterday I shall use our British compass. The whole voyage thus far has been without a hitch. All three engines have been well tested by the flight from Rome. Between Oslo and Trotsk our speed was more than sixty miles an hour, and even during the foggy stage we kept going at nearly forty miles an hour."

Colonel Nobile and all the members of the crew withstood perfectly the heavy rolling of the Norge while passing over the Baltic, when, at one time, the airship stood at an angle of 45 degrees. The necessity of standing in the airship's gondola and the extremely low temperature encountered over Esthonia naturally wearied the crew greatly, although it did not dampen their high spirits and optimism.

Says the Norge Was Lost for Ten Hours in the Baltic Fogs.

LENINGRAD, April 16.—News from the Meteorological Institute of Oslo that it expected a change in the weather induced Colonel Umberto Nobile to leave Oslo at 11 o'clock for Leningrad, to avoid the risk of the wind catching the Norge in a dangerous position at its mooring mast.

This precaution was most fortunate, because in flying over the Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Finland a very strong gale drove the ship south in the midst of dense clouds all around her, shutting off sight of the earth and preventing the navigators from locating our position and forcing us to wander at hazard for ten hours.

Toward noon the clouds cleared and we descended as low as possible to reconnoitre the land. We found ourselves above a flat plain covered with snow and ice, across which it was possible to perceive a few scattered log cabins.

No station replied to our Marconi, and it was only a little later that we perceived a small town with a railroad and were able to read the name of the railroad station, which revealed that it was Walk, on the border of Esthonia and Latvia.

We realized that the wind had carried us south over Latvia and that we were now reaching Esthonia. We were thus able to resume our route and for upward of five hours flew over frozen Lake Peipus. We entered Russia shortly afterward, and at half past 7 in the evening located the airdrome at Gatchina, thirty kilometers from Leningrad, where a landing was successfully accomplished.

We received an enthusiastic reception from a large crowd and numerous foreign and Russian officials, including the Italian Consul, Signor Bombeiri, and his wife. Then we traveled over deep snow in sleds to the imperial palace of Alexander III, where fine quarters were prepared for us. We expect to wait here until we receive news that the hangar is ready at Spitsbergen.

GERMANS ARE ELATED AT SUCCESS OF NORGE

But Experts Still Doubt She Has Proven Her Suitability for the Flight Over the North Pole.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Co. and The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 16.—Germany, the home of the Zeppelin, is enthusiastic over the successful flight of the airship Norge of the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile Expedition from Oslo to Leningrad, overcoming heavy fogs and other adverse conditions.

Throughout the flight there were numerous rumors afloat that the Norge was lost and would be obliged to land, possibly on German soil. On account of this possibility the authorities along the Baltic Coast made preparations to give the airship every facility in making a landing, by warning all radio stations to be on the lookout for signs of the ship's approach, and sending landing squads to the airfields.

Though the news of the safe arrival at Leningrad is applauded by the technical experts in aeronautics, they are not optimistic concerning the Norge's worthiness for the forthcoming trip over the North Pole to Alaska. It is pointed out that the only real test flights which the dirigible has had were from Rome to Leningrad by way of Pulham and Oslo, which, they assert, are hardly sufficient to pass judgment. The next flight from Leningrad to Spitsbergen will be the last before the dash across the North Pole is attempted. Whether the ship can make a non-stop flight from Spitsbergen to Alaska is not yet proved, according to the experts, who point out that it is difficult to make a landing with the present ship and that a large force of men is needed, which would be impossible should a forced landing be required in the polar regions.

Though the failure of the wireless on the last trip is looked upon as only a technical fault which can easily be overcome, the German engineers believe it is a sign that the necessary coordination of the various functioning is imperfect and that small failures of this kind could prevent the successful outcome of the trip.

Under present conditions, as well as they are able to judge, the German experts believe that Captain Amundsen must have considerable luck on his side to succeed in crossing the North Pole.

ALBANY, April 16.—Salary increases totaling thousands of dollars yearly for County Judges and Surrogates were provided under fourteen measures approved today by Governor Smith. The Governor signed fifty-two bills today, bringing the total number of new laws placed on the statue books this year up to 407.

One of the measures approved by the Governor was by Senator Shackno, Democrat, providing that the salaries of Bronx County Judges shall be the same as those paid to the General Sessions Judges. Another bill by Assemblyman Kinsley, Democrat, would make the salary of the Bronx County Surrogate the same as that paid to the Surrogate of New York County.

The salary of virtually every County Judge and County Surrogate in the State will be increased by the 1926 Legislature, according to present indications. The Senate already has passed a bill by Senator Gibbs, Republican, providing increases for all except three or four County Judges and Surrogates, in addition to the measures signed today by the Governor. The Gibbs bill is still in the Rules Committee in the Assembly, but indications are that it will be favorably reported early next week and passed. The Gibbs bill, in addition to the measures just approved by the Governor, would take care of virtually every County Judge and Surrogate so far as a salary increase is concerned.

Kings Official to Get $22,500.

Under a bill by Assemblyman Evans, Democrat, which the Governor approved today, the salary of the Kings County Surrogate would be the same as that paid to Supreme Court Justices in the Second Judicial District. At present the Supreme Court Justices receive $17,500 a year, but legislation has been passed which would increase their salaries to $22,500.

Under one bill approved by the Governor the salary of the Surrogate County will be increased to $5,000 a year, while the County Judge of that county will be increased only to $4,000. Other salary increase measures approved by the Governor today are as follows:

Increases for the County Judge and the Surrogate of Steuben County to $5,000 each.

Increase in the salary of the County Judge and the Surrogate of St. Lawrence County to $5,000 each. This measure was sponsored by Mrs. Rhoda Fox Graves, Republican of St. Lawrence, the only woman member of the Legislature. Increase in the salary of the County Judge and the Surrogate of Jefferson County to $5,000 each.

Salary of County Judge and Surrogate of Oswego County increased to $4,000 each.

Increase to $3,500 each the salary of the County Judge and Surrogate of Cattaraugus County.

Increase to $3,500 the salary of the County Judge and Surrogate of Cayuga County.

Increase in salary of County Judge and Surrogate of Ulster County to $5,000 each.

Increase to $10,000 each the salary of the County Judge and Surrogate of Onondaga County.

Increase to $5,000 each the salary of the County Judge and Surrogate of Tompkins County.

Democrats Predicted Veto.

When the bills increasing the salaries of many of the County Judges and Surrogates in up-State counties came up for final action in the Assembly last week several Democratic Assemblymen predicted that the measures would be vetoed by the Governor.

Governor Smith also signed a bill by the Reorganization Committee providing that the work of eliminating dangerous railroad grade crossings shall be under the supervision of the Superintendent of Public Works instead of the Public Service Commission. This will take effect the first of next year, when the entire reorganization of the State Government will go into effect.

The Governor signed a bill by Senator Nicoll, Republican, providing for the establishment of a board of higher education in Greater New York. The real purpose of the measure is to permit the proposed board to establish a university in Brooklyn.

A bill by Assemblyman Moore, Westchester, Republican, which would make it a penal offense to destroy flowering dogwood, mountain laurel or pink lady's slipper, was approved by the Governor. Last year Mr. Moore succeeded in having a bill passed by the Legislature and signed by the Governor which would prevent the destruction of trailing arbutus.

Both branches of the Legislature held very brief sessions today. A half dozen bills recommended by the Hughes commission, and providing for the reorganization of the State Government, were advanced to the order of final passage in the Assembly.

There is every indication that the Legislature will adjourn sine die one week from today, according to Senator Knight.

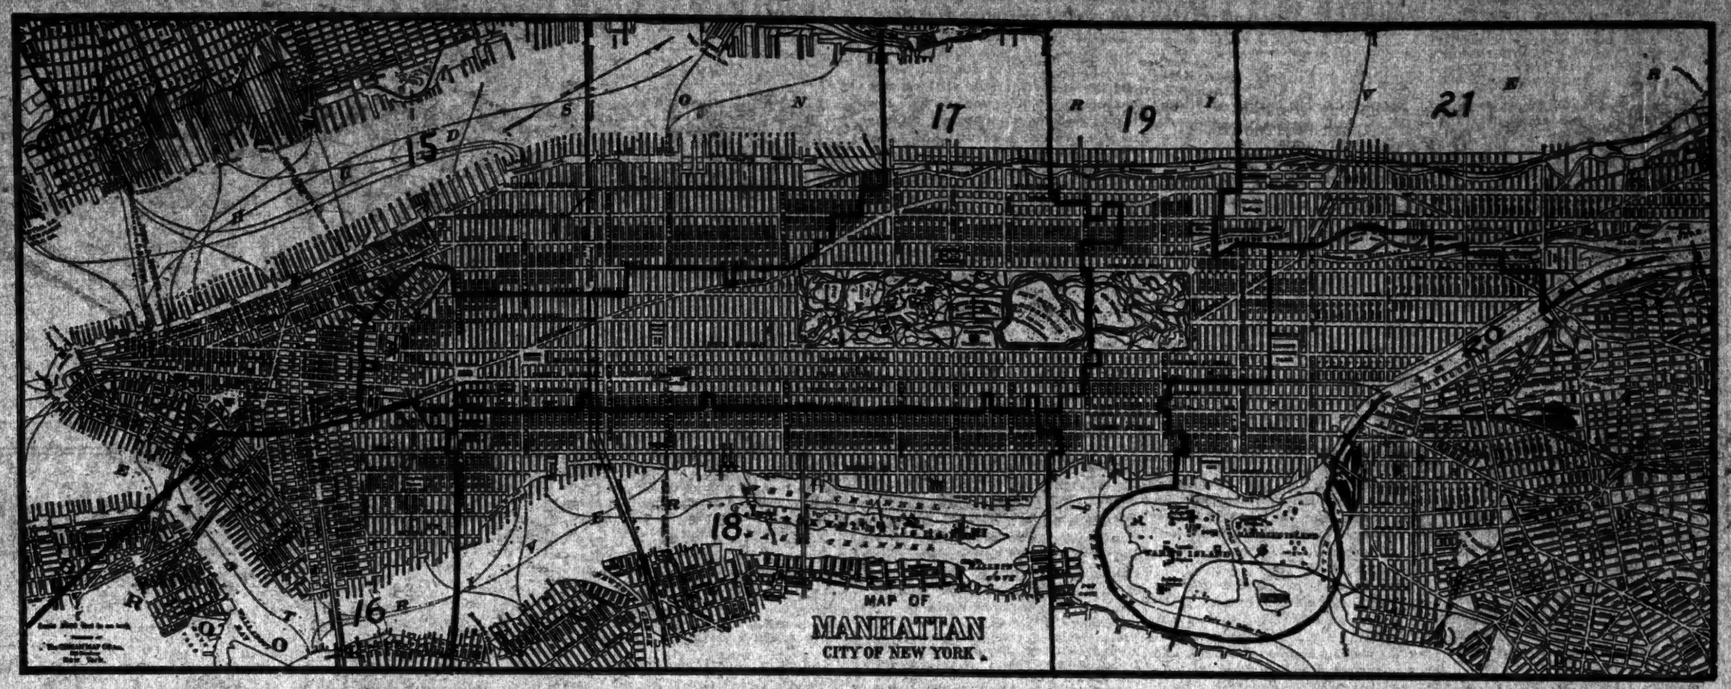
LINES OF NEW SENATE DISTRICTS IN MANHATTAN PROPOSED IN REPUBLICAN REAPPORTIONMENT BILL.



The above map shows the reapportionment of Senate districts in Manhattan as proposed by the Republican bill introduced in the Legislature yesterday. It was drawn by Percy J. Mickelbacker and Collin H. Woodward and approved by the Executive Committee of the New York County Republican Committee.

As explained by Republican sponsors of the measure, the jogs and teeth in the serrated boundary lines between districts were caused largely by the necessity of making all the districts practically equal in citizen population and observing the constitutional provision against the division of a block.

Those not caused by the necessity of equalising population, it was said, were brought about by a desire to include in the proper districts, clubhouses owned by the political organizations, both Republican and Tammany. For instance, a jog in the boundary line at Fourteenth Street was caused by a desire to retain Tammany Hall in the Senate district of the late Charles F. Murphy, in which it had been for many years.

The proposed Republican reapportionment is frankly partisan, and in addition to the new seventeenth and twentieth districts, which are expected to be Republican, the leaders of that party expect to be able to carry the new twenty-first or Washington Heights district and the new sixteenth district in favorable years. At present there is only one Republican Senator from Manhattan—Senator Courtlandt Nicoll.

Although the reapportionment of Assembly districts will be made by the Board of Aldermen, now a Tammany body, the Republican Senate reapportionment has been made with a view to obtaining Republican Assembly districts. This would be possible, if the Republican Senate Reapportionment bill should become law, by the necessity of the Board of Aldermen keeping entirely within Senate district lines in making new Assembly districts.

At present, there are three Republican Assemblymen from Manhattan—Phelps Phelps, Samuel H. Hofstadter and Abraham Grenthal. According to the Republican viewpoint, the worst the Republicans can hope for would be six reasonably safe Republican districts in a new apportionment. Two of these would be negro districts in the proposed Twentieth Senate District.

The proposed Senate reapportionment would probably also make the present Sixth Assembly District, of which Samuel S. Koenig, Republican County Chairman, is leader, safely Republican. The lines of the Senate districts have been shifted so as to make Fourteenth Street, instead of Eighteenth Street, the northern boundary of Mr. Koenig's bailiwick, thereby cutting off a normal Tammany plurality of about 2,000. Mr. Koenig lost his Assembly candidate last Fall by a margin of only a few hundred.

Governors, Ellis, Bedloe and Oyster Islands are included in the proposed Fifteenth Senate District; Blackwell's or Welfare Island in the Eighteenth District and Ward's and Randall's Islands and the Sunken Meadows in the Twentieth District.

In the proposed reapportionment Manhattan will have nineteen Assembly districts, a loss of four; the Bronx, ten, a gain of two; Brooklyn, twenty-four, a gain of one, and Queens, nine, a gain of three, while Richmond will continue to have two districts. This will be a net gain for the city of two Assembly districts.

REPUBLICANS MAP 7 'SAFE' DISTRICTS

bill was made "safe" for Senator Courtlandt Nicoll. The new Seventeenth would have its northern boundary at Ninety-eighth Street, and run, with many fantastic windings, as far south as Bleecker Street, taking in nearly all the Republican territory on the west side below Harlem.

Senator Nathan Straus, now representing the Fifteenth District, will find himself a resident of the Seventeenth in this partly new and unfriendly territory if the new bill goes through and is approved.

The new Fifteenth would sling out all the way from West Seventy-first Street to Ellis and Bedlow's Island in the lower bay. The boundaries defined would indicate that it might prove fighting ground where in a Presidential year the Republicans would have a chance of electing a Senator.

The second "safe" Republican district in Manhattan would be known as the Twentieth, and would take in the entire "black belt" in Harlem, now divided among three Senate districts.

In Brooklyn a Senate district in the Ridgewood section would be added under the proposed new reapportionment. This is the extra district made possible by increasing the number of Senators from fifty-one to fifty-two.

Of the two Senate districts lost to Manhattan, Queens will get one in addition to its present two, while the other will be the First, made up of the County of Suffolk.

Average District Populations.

District.	Citizen Population.
First	129,715
Second	185,089
Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh (Westchester)	379,378
Twenty-eighth	156,543
Twenty-ninth	145,376
Thirtieth	149,672
Thirty-first	166,214
Thirty-second	163,214
Thirty-third	178,717
Thirty-fourth	155,925
Thirty-fifth	126,432
Thirty-sixth	152,907
Thirty-seventh	178,419
Thirty-eighth	149,130
Thirty-ninth	247,203
Fortieth	149,211
Forty-first	354,619
Forty-second	197,158
Forty-third	135,726
Forty-fourth	151,560
Forty-fifth	144,292
Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh (Bronx)	357,100
Forty-eighth	148,945
Forty-ninth, Fiftieth and Fifty-first (Erie)	627,333
Fifty-second	192,244

The Republican craftsmen who have been working at the Reapportionment bill feel rather proud of the close partition of Brooklyn's citizen population achieved by them in carving out the nine Senate districts in that borough. The population of the several districts under the new apportionment would be as follows:

Sixth District, 198,904; Seventh, 199,905; Eighth, 199,902; Ninth, 199,902; Tenth, 199,900; Eleventh, 199,903; Twelfth, 199,904; Thirteenth, 199,905; Fourteenth, 199,903.

The partition in Manhattan was not so close as this, but in Queens the bill drafters were compelled to calculate with equal closeness, because there were places in the new and sparsely settled sections where an entire block might be occupied as the residence of one family. Under the constitutional provision the citizen population of a Senate district must not exceed that of an adjoining district by more than the population of any one block.

Painful Cuts for Some Democrats.

In the reducing of the number of districts in Manhattan by two, many cuts have been made which will prove painful to some Democrats now in the Senate, upon whom they have been inflicted. On the east side the "gas house district," now represented by Senator Thomas I. Sheridan, has been largely combined with the present Eighteenth District, which is represented by another young Democrat, Martin J. Kennedy. There have been changes, too, on the lower west side, merging into one district much of the territory which at present makes up the Twelfth Senate District, which, until his election as Mayor, was represented by James J. Walker, and the Thirteenth, also a strong Tammany district.

It was suggested by some Democrats that the Democratic bill, which will differ only slightly from the Republican measure north of the Bronx, but which will provide for radically different district lines in all the boroughs in New York City, especially in Manhattan, should be based on "corrected" census figures, established through the survey made on behalf of the Democratic borough organizations to check up on last year's Republican census figures. The Democrats charge that the latter were juggled to cut down Democratic representation in the Legislature.

This idea, however, was discarded when the Democratic leaders, upon reflection, realized that to use as a basis for a new Senate apportionment anything except the official census figures would render their bill unconstitutional.

If the Republicans, as they are believed certain to do, turn down the Democratic measure, despite the closer compliance with the constitutional requirement of an equal apportionment claimed for it, and insist upon passing their own reapportionment bill, this, as the Democrats see it, will furnish Governor Smith with the necessary ground for vetoing the Republican bill. Even if the figures of the 1925 census might be open to attack, this fact, according to lawyers, would afford no justification for veto action. The Constitution provides that a Senate reapportionment must be based on the official census preceding it.

The introduction of two separate bills it is believed, will at least have the advantage of making it unnecessary to prolong the Legislative session beyond next Friday. With the Democrats offering amendments to the Republican bill, the new print of the measure would have to lie several days on the desks of members before it could be taken up for final passage unless an emergency measure could be obtained from the Governor to cut the red tape of procedure. The Republican leaders are loath to ask the Governor for a message of that kind, and it is doubtful whether he could see his way clear to grant such a request anyhow where a measure which he intends to veto is concerned.

Daily Style Hint For Well-Dressed New Yorkers

NEW YORK, April 17—Take a leaf from the book of the young university man. He knows what's what and what's not. He carries his pipe tobacco in pouch covered with the same silk as his four-in-hand scarf or bow-knot tie.

BRITISH MINERS GET AID FROM CONTINENT

HELP IS MADE CONTINGENT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 16.—A promise to support the British coal miners by every possible means, in the event of a strike, was made today by a committee of the International Miners' Federation at a meeting in Brussels.

The decision means, according to the International Federation, that not only will efforts be made to stop the exportation of coal to Great Britain but the possibility of a general sympathetic strike on the Continent also is contemplated.

"Emperor" Cook, the fire-eating Secretary of the British coal miners' organization, declared that a new and powerful weapon had been placed in the men's hands. It was evident that the prospect of a strike of 700,000 miners on the Continent appealed to his imagination.

A careful reading of the resolution, however, shows that it contains much that is contingent, but practically nothing that is operative. The support of the International Federation was pained only after great concessions had been made by the British leaders. It was agreed that in the event of a sympathetic strike on the Continent the direction of the British strike would pass from the British leaders to the international committee and that there should be no separate settlement in Britain.

It will probably be next Tuesday before a meeting between Prime Minister Baldwin and the colliery owners can be held. Baldwin is devoting his energy to a procedure for the settlement of wages, which is the most contentious point.

It is expected that the employers will reluctantly consent to a national wage negotiations proceeding, but it is not known whether they will still desire to reserve some control of the wage settlements by the district, which the men doggedly oppose.

Labor troubles, like others, seldom come singly. Negotiations between the employers and trade unions in the engineering industry again broke down today, and the situation remains materially the same as it has been since the middle of March, when the employers rejected finally the demand for an increase in wages and the unions announced their intention of seeking by districts what they failed to get nationally.

Some of the districts now have exhausted the procedure for the settlement of disputes, and in the London area the men are asking the authority of the union executives to take a strike ballot.

$12,000,000 IN SHARES FOR INSURANCE FIRM

Stockholders Vote New Issue in Ratifying Plan to Restore the Automobile Company.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 16.—To rehabilitate the Automobile Insurance Company, which had such fire losses that its stock dropped from 800 to 200, stockholders at a special meeting today adopted a plan approved by the State Insurance Commissioner whereby 10,000 new shares will be issued at $1,200 per share.

The Aetna Life Insurance Company, which owns about three-fourths of the Automobile stock, will take all its shares of the new stock and whatever rights are relinquished by other stockholders.

Payments of the $1,200 for each share of the new stock, which has a par value of $100, have been arranged as follows—$600 April 20, $150 July 15, $150 Sept. 15, $150 Nov. 15, $150 Dec. 15.

Most of the $12,000,000 raised by today's action will be devoted to the reserve account of the Automobile Insurance Company. Its capital will be increased from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 and its surplus from $2,000,000 to $6,00,000.

President M. D. Brainard disclosed that the Automobile's losses in 1925 were between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000.

New directors elected today are Edward Milligan, President of the Phoenix Fire Insurance Company and a director of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and Richard M. Bissell, President of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company.

Charles H. Remington, who was the underwriting head of the Automobile, resigned as an officer of the various Aetna affiliated companies several weeks ago and a new fire underwriter has been secured from Chicago.

$500,000 INSURANCE LOSS.

Hartford Fire Company Will Change Oil Policy in California.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 16 (AP).—Richard M. Bissell, President of the Hartford Fire Insurance Company, today estimated his company's loss in the recent California oil tank fires at $500,000. He said also that as a result of the disaster in that region a general reduction in all oil lands in California has been ordered, and in some instances a cancellation of policies has been made.

Mr. Bissell predicted that because of the lightning hazard, which had been considered negligible when the policies were written, the rates would have to be raised and a more conservative policy adopted. The Hartford Fire Insurance Company wrote policies amounting to nearly $8,000,000.

"If our loss should run to $500,000 or $600,000," Mr. Bissell pointed out, "it would only mean a loss ratio for the year of 1 per cent. Last year we did a business of over $60,000,000 in premiums."

The Hartford Fire's business there is reinsured by many companies.

Guy E. Beardsley, Vice President and Secretary of the Aetna (Fire) Insurance Company, has estimated his company's loss at $962,800.

COMMONS ADVANCES DIVORCE NEWS CURB

Passes Second Reading of Bill by Vote of 222 to 3 After All-Night Session.

EXPLOITING IS DENOUNCED

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 16.—The House of Commons, after sitting all last night and until 7 o'clock this morning fighting the bills of the economy bill, but without further scenes of the sort which led to thirteen members being suspended the previous night, reassembled this morning at 11 o'clock and gave a reading to a bill to prohibit indecent reports of judicial proceedings. The second reading was passed by an overwhelming majority of 222 votes to 3, among the three being Sir Ellis Hume Williams, K. C., one of the most famous British criminal lawyers.

The bill provides that in the proceedings for the dissolution or the nullity of marriages or for judicial separation nothing is to be published except the names, addresses and descriptions of the parties and the witnesses; concise statements of the grounds on which the proceedings are brought and resisted; submissions on any point of law; and the summing up of the judge, the finding of the jury and the judge's remarks when passing judgment.

Major Kindersley, who moved the bill, argued that a small minority of British newspapers deliberately exploited unsavory cases. Publication of such details seriously damaged British prestige abroad, particularly in the East, he said. The bill deliberately contemplated punishing suggestiveness, he added.

Sir Evelyn Cecil, the real father of the bill, said the only commandment some newspapers observed was giving the public what they thought it wanted, and the public of course would read anything.

Sir Ellis Hume Williams quoted a former President of the Divorce Court to the effect that a censorship would interfere with justice because the infamy of offenders would be unknown.

Sir William Joynson-Hicks promised Government support for the bill, but stated he would resist all attempts to establish a general principle of hearing such cases in camera.

This had already made him refuse the terms of the Newspaper Proprietors Association, which had demanded a hearing in camera in return for publication of names and findings only.

On the general question of publicity for judicial proceedings, he pointed out that since adultery had ceased to be a capital offense it was no longer a crime at all and, unlike criminal offenses, did not deserve the punishment of being pilloried in the press.

THREE-TON SIGN FALLS, HITS WOMAN IN STREET

Large Timber Then Crashes Near Her From Lyric Theatre—She Is Taken to Bellevue.

The automobile metal and glass call sign of the Lyric Theatre, weighing three tons, fell forty feet to the sidewalk in Forty-second Street with a loud crash yesterday afternoon. A young woman, Antoinette A. Hess of 210 Eleventh Avenue, Astoria, Queens, was struck a glancing blow by the sign and was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

The falling of the sign was followed a moment later by the crash of a large timber from a point higher up on the face of the building, where workmen were putting up an advertising sign.

The timber fell within a few feet of where Miss Hess lay, and almost struck her and a young man who had rushed to her aid. The young man, who gave his name as L. Barbeaux of 403 Fifty-seventh Street, picked up the young woman and carried her into a shoe store adjoining the theatre.

Later, at the invitation of the theatre management, she was carried into the rest room of the Lyric, where Dr. Anderson of Bellevue gave first aid. She was suffering from abrasions of the back and possible fractures of the collar bone and wrist.

The sign became dislodged in some undetermined manner. Joseph Oppenheimer, manager of the theatre, said that so far as anybody connected with the theatre knew, the sign and its fittings and attachments were in good condition. He hasarded the guess that as a result of blasting in an excavation near the theatre the sign might have become loosened on its fastenings.

O'NEILL PLAY GOES TO JURY.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, April 16.—"Desire Under the Elms," on trial before Judge Frederickson, went to the jury at 4 P. M. today after a spirited argument, in which Prosecutor Reams pleaded for protection of the morals of the young and Defense Attorney Green quoted from the Bible and Shakespeare to prove that language as bad or worse than any in the play was to be found in both.

The actors who presented the play for the jury deliberately slurred the risque lines and considerably improved the moral tone of the drama, the prosecutor charged.

"It was a parlor version" that the jury witnessed yesterday, Reams charged, an entirely different version from the one on the night of Feb. 15 when Police Sergeant Sweetman saw the play and was so "painfully shocked" that he arrested the management and the entire cast.

HOW TO SAVE PARKS TOLD BY ROULSTONE

In Radio Speech He Reviews the Conservation Program and Praises Citizens' Aid.

WANTS POLICE IN PARKS

And Seeks Punitive Legislation for Vandalism—Looks to Walker to Keep Pledge.

How residents of New York may aid in park preservation, rehabilitation and extension through their own efforts and by impressing public officials with the city's needs in the parks was the subject of an address delivered over the radio yesterday from Station WRNY by William B. Roulstone, President of the Parks Conservation Commission.

Mr. Roulstone said that friends of parks recently formed an "anti-litter" commission, which, headed by Mrs. Cyrus Sulsberger, had effectively called the Mayor's attention to the importance of educating children on the importance of not throwing trash in the parks, and that the Mayor had responded immediately by appealing to the school children of the city to keep the parks clean.

He said the same committee advocated the abolition of vandalism in the parks, and it was hoped through its efforts to have restored park police and to get punitive legislation which would protect the parks.

He said other examples of cooperation by citizens to aid the parks were the recent preventions of park invasions through the erection of buildings, and added that even new movements have been started to reduce not only the size of Central Park but also the smaller water front parks. One of these, he said, was the application of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Robinson to take away fifty-three acres from Jacob Riis Park, a project in which the Navy has been previously rebuffed. However, he said, Mayor Walker had pledged himself to protect the parks and the public relied on him to keep his promise.

"There is ever a very pressing need for citizens to bestir themselves in these matters, to go to the officials and inform them and advise officials as to the public view about these matters," he said. "Many of us are very hopeful that if the public view indicated in this talk can be courteously and effectively presented to the new Administration, that satisfactory results from them will presently be the reward."

Kemble sings first bass in the Glee Club and the university quartet.

BROKER DIES AFTER FALL.

C. L. Horton, 78-Year-Old Patron, Fell on Restaurant Stairs.

Charles Lester Horton, a broker of 60 West Forty-sixth Street, died yesterday at Bellevue Hospital of a fractured skull. He received his injuries last Monday when he stumbled and fell down the cellar stairs of Rosoff's Sea Food Restaurant at 781 Sixth Avenue. Mr. Horton, who was 78 years old, had been in the habit of lunching at Rosoff's for more than eight years, according to the proprietor, and the same waiter, Peter Hagis, had served him during the entire time.

Mr. Horton had occupied a room at the West Forty-sixth Street address for seven years. Others living at the same place said he invariably went out early in the morning and did not return until late in the day.

After his injury, Mr. Horton gave the name of a cousin, Mrs. Alice Watermyer of 2 East Court, Hudson, N. Y., as his nearest relative. Jack Dunstan, one time proprietor of "Jack's" restaurant on Sixth Avenue, was a close friend of Mr. Horton.

FOREIGNERS NOT MOLESTED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 16.—The following dispatch has been received today by The London Times from its Peking correspondent:

Early this morning I motored around to the various city gates and found all of them closed except two. At one of these I saw remnants of the Kuominchun evacuating the city and at the other a large force of infantry was entering after a fight outside.

These oncoming troops belonged to a division that had been in the attacking Fengtien force, then joined the defending Kuominchun, but yesterday reverted to it sold Fengtien allegiance.

There was a good deal of skirmishing last night, and today in the environs between the retiring Kuominchun and the advancing Fengtien forces.

It is understood that the Kuominchun made their withdrawal in good order to Nankow Pass.

There is no complaint regarding the conduct of the troops toward foreigners. In fact, the soldiers almost invariably have shown friendly good humor when foreigners passed through their lines or encountered them otherwise. One instance is worth recording.

Among those who spent last night in Paomachang, a suburb, and were stopped when trying to enter the city this morning were Eric Teichman and his wife and Mr. Vereker of the British Legation staff. They engaged in a long exchange of courtesies with the officer on guard through a slit in the gate, and, although that worthy adhered to his orders to keep the gate closed, he did not oppose the arrangement whereby a rope was thrown from the battlements, up which all three clambered laboriously for forty feet, and so got inside.

Cavalry Gathers Up Stragglers.

PEKING, April 16 (AP).—The forces of Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian war lord, have not yet attempted to enter the city, as it had been generally feared they would, and complete order is being maintained here.

The main body of the Manchurian army remains at Tungchow, though one regiment was located outside Yungtingmen this morning. Manchuria cavalry detachments are patrolling the neighborhood and rounding up National Army stragglers, a party of whom were captured this morning.

In consequence of excellent work by the staff, virtually the entire Kuominchun had been evacuated to Kalgan by 4 A. M. Tang Chi-tao is acting commander of the garrison, with one brigade outside and one brigade inside the city, which Wang Shih-chen and his Committee of Public Safety have under effective control.

Never before has the Legation Quarter harbored such a great influx of wealthy and prominent Chinese. For days the hotels have been crowded with Chinese bringing in valuables in chests and boxes for safe-keeping. Yesterday evening when the proposed evacuation became known there was a veritable stampede of persons seeking places of safety under the protection of foreign guards.

SHANGHAI, April 16.—Today's private news from Peking indicates that the Kuominchun, before abandoning the capitol yesterday, having failed to arrange an entente with Wu Pei-fu, exacted a large amount of money from Chinese bankers, who thus avoided the looting of the city.

It is said that Chief Executive Tuan Chi-jui has returned to his residence from the Legation Quarter and resumed his nominal position as head of the Government. Now it appears that the transition has been effected with little disorder.

The chief difficulty lies ahead because of the conflict of interests between the two factions headed by Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei-fu. There is little excitement because of events among the Chinese of Central South China, as they expect Wu and Chang soon to fall out and revive their old enmity.

In the meanwhile the Extraterritorial Commission is long overdue here. It was scheduled to leave Peking a fortnight ago, but is still marooned there and unable to get out.

It is privately reported that they are very impatient over the delay, and also the Customs Conference delegates are completely held up pending the reorganization of the Government.

Today the Chinese labor guilds and street unions issued a notice calling attention to the coming anniversary of the shootings on last May 30, and calling all patriotic Chinese to organize great demonstrations for that day.

GERMANS GET COCAINE BY COAL TAR PROCESS

BERLIN, April 16.—The manufacture of synthetic cocaine from coal tar derivatives has reached a stage which permits of chemically pure stuff being made in a home laboratory, according to disclosures in the New Berliner today.

Darmstadt, Germany, and its suburbs, seem to be the centre of the illegal drug manufacture, and these laboratories are able to take care of the immense demands for raw cocaine made by smugglers.

Although the leading German chemists who are heads of large German chemical plants deny having any knowledge of producing synthetic cocaine as cheaply as extracting it from cocoa leaves, on the other hand import figures show that insufficient leaves are brought into Germany to account for the quantities of pure cocaine that are delivered to various countries as payments in kind on the reparations bill.

The New Berliner calls attention to the fact that Yugoslavia alone receives 120 pounds of pure stuff yearly in this manner, which means at least eight times that amount when used either illegally or on doctors' prescriptions.

Although the police frequently arrest peddlers, and occasionally smugglers attempting to get their wares into other countries, manufacturers are able to evade all attempts at detection.

That the entire industry is controlled by a ring backed by large capital is the belief of the police, as exporters are able to bear losses running into tens of thousands of dollars, as was the case when a recent shipment in false air tanks on the bottom of an international express train was confiscated.

Wholesale prices of the chemically pure article are about $200 a pound within the German border, but it is retailed to drug addicts at 50 cents a "deck," making the retail price about $3,000 a pound.

BLIND MEN MAKE APPEAL.

Ask Aldermen for Preference in News Stand Privileges.

Twenty blind men appeared before the General Welfare Committee of the Board of Aldermen yesterday afternoon in support of an amendment, introduced by Alderman John Cashmore of Brooklyn, providing that the blind be placed in the same "A" classification with war veterans in the granting of city newsstand privileges.

Commander Jean Brunner of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who said he voiced the sentiments of the Brooklyn veterans, opposed the amendment. Alderman Cashmore, sponsor for the bill, is a member of the American Legion, affiliated with Post 500, Kings County.

William Griffith, who is blind, said the average person thus afflicted had only three ways of making a living—caning chairs, vending newspapers or begging. Most of them, he said, desire to be self-supporting.

William Dorris, President of the Blind Newsdealers' Association, and Hugo Hanser of the Blind Industrial Workers' Association also pleaded for the amendment.

REALTY MAN BEATEN WHILE AT A PHONE

EMPLOYER ALSO PUZZLED

But Hints That Victim, Alone in Office, Might Have Been Mistaken for Him.

William J. Fleming, 35 years old, of 460 West 143d Street, sales manager for Jules Nehring, head of a realty corporation at St. Nicholas Avenue and 181st Street, was beaten unconscious at noon yesterday in the office by one of two strangers, and the police last night were endeavoring to learn the motive for the attack.

Fleming said he was telephoning when he heard the two men enter the room behind him, but thought it was his employer and paid no attention to the visitors until a second before he was assaulted.

Then, he said, he glanced over his shoulder to find an elderly man, wearing a light suit, hurrying toward him with another man. The next second he felt a crushing blow on the head, and fell unconscious on the floor. It happened that Mr. Nehring was coming up the stairs to his office, accompanied by Miss Marion Rogan, a professional nurse and civic worker in the Washington Heights district, when the elderly man hurried down to the street past them.

Mr. Nehring paid no attention to the man, but a few minutes later when he found his sales manager on the floor, with a deep wound in the back of his head, he hurried to the safe and found that everything was intact. Then he searched the desks in the office but nothing was amiss. Miss Rogan in the meantime had revived Fleming, and obtained from him the meagre details of events preceding the attack.

Mr. Nehring then telephoned for the police and summoned Dr. Richard Molenhauer of 600 West 183d Street. Fleming was then taken home. A traffic policeman was on duty at the street intersection at the time Fleming was blackjacked, but nobody thought of calling him until the arrival of several detectives from the station.

The detectives admitted that they were puzzled by the case, and sought information from Mr. Nehring which might help establish a motive, but when they left the realtors' office some time later they admitted that they were without a clue.

Mr. Nehring last night said that he had no idea what the incentive for the attack could be, although he advanced the theory that possibly the assailant had mistaken his sales manager for himself.

"Fleming resembles me somewhat from the rear," he said, "and, seated as he was at the telephone with his back to the door, it is possible that the blackjack wielder mistook him for me."

"What could be his motive, since no attempt at robbery was made?" Mr. Nehring was asked.

"Well, I've had a tough real estate matter on hand for about a year," was Mr. Nehring's reply. "I don't want to say anything more about it just now, but I'm going down to my lawyer, Edmund L. Mooney, in his office in Pine Street tomorrow morning, and I'm going to talk to him about the matter."

HOST AT BROWN'S FUNERAL.

Entire English Village Attends Services for the New York Banker.

WIVENHOE, England, April 16 (AP).—The whole village of Wivenhoe turned out in a pouring rain today for the funeral of McEvers Bayard Brown, the wealthy and eccentric New York banker who died April 8 on his yacht, the Valfreya, which had been anchored off the Essex coast for thirty-six years.

The coffin, covered with the Stars and Stripes, was borne to St. Mary's parish church, followed by the yacht's skipper and crew and a host of local friends, among them Major Percy Sturdee, cousin of Admiral Sturdee.

The body will be sent to New York April 24 for burial in Brooklyn. No arrangements have yet been made for disposal of the yacht.

WALKER DID NOT FORGET.

But His Floral Wedding Anniversary Gift to Mrs. Walker Was Late.

LONDON, April 16 (AP).—Mayor Walker of New York, with a thousand and one things to think about in administering the affairs of the American metropolis, didn't forget his fourteenth wedding anniversary, although to Mrs. Walker, here with the American hotel tourists, it appeared for a time that he had.

The date was last Sunday. Nothing came, either by cable or post, and Mrs. Walker didn't quite understand. But, upon returning to her hotel last evening from sightseeing, she found her room all decorated. On the centre of the table was a beautiful bouquet of orchids, with affectionate greetings from her husband.

Mr. Walker had arranged last week for the orchids and decorations, but the dates were confused at this end.

The chef of the hotel heard of the occasion and baked a large cake in honor of Mrs. Walker, assuming that it was her birthday. A large slice of the cake will be sent to the Mayor.

COMING OF PERET DOUBTED.

Coolidge Believes Progress Is Being Made in French Debt Talks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The American Debt Commission has not reopened formal negotiations with France in reference to the settlement of that country's war-time debt, according to statements made by officials today.

It is believed that the negotiations, interrupted last Spring, will be resumed soon after the Senate acts upon the Italian debt.

President Coolidge believes that there have been some informal talks and that these have been proceeding encouragingly although no definite proposal of terms has been made as yet.

The reports from Europe that Finance Minister Peret is coming to the United States to negotiate the settlement are not credited in Washington, as this would be contrary to the plan which had been agreed upon.

LONDON, April 16.—The International Shipping Conference at its concluding session today passed a resolution expressing willingness to cooperate with the League of Nations to obtain freedom of communication and transit for the commerce of all nations.

The resolution viewed with concern the rapid growth of international organizations representing Government, trade and other interests as involving unnecessary interference with the shipowner's activities.

notified by Mr. McGeehan to come to his office yesterday. Mr. McGeehan said that Harry Vollmer Jr., Kurtzman's counsel, called him on the telephone and informed him that he had advised his client not to appear. Another inspector, whose name was withheld, also refused to submit to questioning, Mr. McGeehan said.

A conference with John Montgomery, President of the Valley Food Company, shippers of cream, resulted in evidence of additional payments of graft to Danziger, Mr. McGeehan announced.

It became known yesterday that former Mayor Hylan and his Health Commissioner, Dr. Frank J. Monaghan, did not speak for two months during the Fall of 1925 because the latter refused to accede to a request by the former Mayor that a high Health Department official be dismissed.

Dr. Harris, who was named to head the department by Mayor Walker, informed Thomas J. Clougher, who had been Commissioner Monaghan's secretary on Jan. 2, that, having been placed in the exempt classification, he had sacrificed his civil service standing and that his services were no longer needed. Clougher submitted a written petition to each member of the Board of Health, but Dr. Harris's action was sustained. Clougher at present has a real estate office in Jamaica, Queens, with Henry W. Morgan, a former Health Department official, who was tried and dismissed from the service Thursday on charges of insubordination and of "irregularities" in connection with the milk investigation.

Banton Aids Investigation.

Dr. Harris received assurances from Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora that as soon as the evidence which is being collected was presented to the District Attorney's office in such form as to "be useful" it would be acted upon with vigor.

The Health Department laboratories tested eighty-five samples of milk seized early yesterday from milk wagons in Jersey City and found all of them to be unadulterated except one. The seizures resulted from a conference of Mayor Walker, Dr. Harris and Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, in which the latter agreed to cooperate with the New York authorities in the drive against bootleg milk. A. McRoberts, chief of the division of milk inspection in Jersey City, was suspended by Mayor Hague.

None of the officials had anything to say on the dismissal. McRoberts, however, was indignant.

"They made no explanation," he said. "There are no charges against me, so far as I know. I can explain everything. I am ready to face any charge they may want to bring."

The seizures began shortly after midnight. Milk wagon drivers were required by the police to proceed to the nearest station house, where New York milk inspectors took samples from their cans. The Jersey City police were under the direction of Inspector John Underwood and, in all, about 325 wagons were stopped. Dr. Harris said he believed the fact that only one impure sample had been obtained was due either to the fact that advance news of the seizures had leaked out, or that the situation in Jersey City had been cleaned up.

Dr. Harris explained that bootleg milk, once received in Jersey City, could easily be brought to New York by motor truck. The milk standards in New Jersey have hitherto been much lower than those here, but Dr. Harris said that Mayor Hague had agreed that all the pure milk requirements here would henceforth be enforced in Jersey City. It was due to Mayor Walker's interest in the situation, Dr. Harris explained, that Mayor Hague's cooperation had been enlisted.

Dr. Frank J. Monaghan, former Commissioner of Health, at his home, 1,069 Bushwick Parkway, last evening declined to discuss developments in the milk investigation. "I have nothing to say. This is not the time to do any talking," he said. "I will have something to say at the proper time, but that is not now. I am not going to say anything that will embarrass any one."

KOERBER IS SENTENCED TO DIE IN MAY 16 WEEK

Leader and Four of Gang Taken to Sing Sing—Laugh Until They See Prison Walls.

Judge Frank F. Adel in the Queens County Court yesterday sentenced Herbert Koerber to die in the electric chair the week of May 16, for the murder of Anthony Mahairis in his Jamaica restaurant on March 21.

Jacob A. Vissi, attorney for Koerber, protested against sending his client to the chair, whereas Koerber's four companions in the Mahairis holdup were allowed to plead guilty to second degree murder, getting off with sentences of twenty years to life imprisonment.

Judge Adel admitted that technically all five were equally guilty, but that Koerber had fired the fatal shots, and that he (the judge) thought the others had not desired to do murder.

"I feel that under all the circumstances justice has been done," said Judge Adel.

Deputy sheriffs took Koerber to Sing Sing by train yesterday, with his four companions in crime—Richard Daunt, Gustave Fisher, Fred Kellesen and James Green. The youths were in high spirits, laughing and joking, until they caught sight of the prison walls. That sobered them, especially Koerber, who for the first time seemed fearful and shaken.

Daunt struck Joseph Kirkawa, a news photographer, who photographed the thieves as they were taken from the Queens County jail.

Brooklyn Widow Burned to Death.

Mrs. Mary Feeley, 45 years old, a widow, was burned to death in her home, 262 Fifty-fourth Street, Brooklyn, yesterday when her clothing caught fire while she was attending a boiler filled with clothes on a gas range. Several women neighbors, attracted by her screams, finally beat out the flames, but when an ambulance surgeon arrived the woman was dead. Mrs. Feeley lived with Mrs. Kitty Rice, also a widow, and was employed as a ticket agent by the H. M. T. at the Fifty-third Street and Fourth Avenue station.

PARIS DELAY ON DEBT ANNOYS THE BRITISH

FRENCH ENVOY GOES HOME

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 16.—Impatience in British official circles with France's attitude on two important subjects—its war debt and disarmament—has caused a striking change in Anglo-French relations during the past fortnight.

The British Treasury resents the failure of M. Peret, the new French Finance Minister, to come to London to discuss the French war debt to Britain.

Winston Churchill, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, intimated to his French colleagues some time ago that he would like to have the attitude of the French Government on this subject made clear in time to take it into account in preparing his budget.

M. Peret, it is understood, pleaded his own budget difficulties, but the French budget is believed now to be complete, and it was expected M. Peret would reopen the debt negotiations by the end of the present week.

To the surprise of the British Government, however, an intimation has been received that Peret's visit has again been postponed indefinitely. The hitch in the France-American debt negotiations with Washington, it is understood, is specified as the cause of the postponement.

French Envoy Goes to Paris.

Churchill, with his budget speech only ten days distant, has been placed in a situation of considerable embarrassment and is reported to be very resentful in consequence.

M. de Fleuriau, the French Ambassador, paid a visit to the Foreign Secretary today and afterward left for Paris. It is understood that his mission is to impress upon the French Government the importance the British Ministry attaches to an immediate reopening of the French debt negotiations.

As regards disarmament, the British Government has now definitely indicated for the benefit of other powers interested that it does not consider the Soviet refusal to participate in the forthcoming preliminary conference as sufficient reason for its further postponement.

Hints have been received, however, that in some other European centres a different view is taken, and British official opinion has been driven to the conclusion that France, which was one of the moving spirits in the initiation of the conference, now desires another postponement. The reason given is Russia's non-participation.

British Stress Need of Inquiries.

Britain admits that the Soviet refusal to confer with the other nations would make it almost impossible for Russia's neighbors to reduce their armaments. The British point out, however, that no State will be asked to reduce armaments as an immediate result of the meeting of May 18, since this will be a meeting of the preparatory commission only, or, in other words, the Agenda Committee.

It is stressed here that discussion of the actual details of disarmament must be preceded by highly technical inquiries into such matters as what constitutes armaments and whether distinctions are to be made between offensive and defensive forces.

The preparatory commission's findings will not bind the participating Governments. In view of this fact and of the certainty that another postponement would only confirm Ambassador Houghton's skepticism about the sincerity of European professions of a desire to disarm the British Government is firmly of the opinion that the conference must be held.

FRENCH AND GERMANS RENEW POTASH ACCORD

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 16.—The French and German potash industries have renewed for a seven-year period the temporary agreement signed in May of last year, which expired in a few weeks.

The convention, which was signed at Lugano, April 10, represents an important business victory for the French, according to the general outlines of the agreement given by the French authorities today. While it is learned that the agreement has not yet been modified so far as exports to the United States, the French have obtained a division throughout the rest of the world giving the French 30 and the Germans 70 per cent. of all the business.

The most important part of the agreement, however, is the provision that the French share will be increased annually until it is 50 per cent. of the world's exports—exclusive of the United States—by May 1, 1931. A new agreement for the United States market may be expected soon.

Joint sales promotion will be undertaken and the keynote of the whole arrangement is the policy of obtaining wider markets, and with no price increases planned at present. The German market will be still exclusively supplied by the Futsches Kalisyndikat and the French home and colonial markets by the Societe Commerciale des Potashes d'Alsace.

In connection with the arrangement it should be pointed out that the Alsatian mines are operating at capacity, while the Germans are only operating at 40 to 50 per cent. in order not to overload the market. Should the French be unable at any point to supply their share of the potash it will automatically revert to the German exporters. But the great French production is largely accounted for by the tremendous increase in domestic consumption, which is 200 per cent. greater than before the war and 20 per cent. greater than last year.

MEXICO CITY, April 16.—German experts in all lines who will soon arrive in Mexico to take positions in the Mexican Government service are said to be the forerunners of many more German experts, who are making a thorough study of the resources of the entire republic under the instructions of the German Government, which is reported anxious to secure control of raw materials.

The Krupp Company has arranged to build new smelting furnaces to develop an iron and steel trade in Mexico to supply Central and South America. Experts from the Krupp Company have tried to secure long-term contracts for raw material, iron, copper, coal, sisal and dye materials and are now convinced that the German Government can gain more by establishing factories and smelters in Mexico.

This is part of the reported general plan of the German Government to secure control of Mexican industry to fight American interests in Central and South America. The German Government is also planning, it is said, to establish small German banks to finance these new German industries.

TROOPS AWE HERRIN AT KLAN BURIALS

CORONER OPENS INQUEST

HERRIN, Ill., April 16 (AP).—With troops patrolling the streets in the vicinity funeral services were held this afternoon at the First Christian Church for Harland Ford, Mack Sizemore and Ben Sizemore, the three Klansmen killed in Tuesday's election disorders.

Four clergymen officiated. They were the Rev. J. E. Story, pastor of the church where the funeral was held; the Rev. P. R. Clotfelty, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Herrin; the Rev. I. E. Lee, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Herrin, and the Rev. B. E. Green, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hurst. Green formerly was editor of the Klan newspaper at Herrin and was prominent in Klan affairs during the Klan régime in Williamson County.

The Odd Fellows Lodge, of which all three men were members, had charge of the services. The small church was packed to capacity and many stood on the outside. It was announced this morning the services would be held at the First Baptist Church, which is larger, but plans were changed again to hold the services in the First Christian Church as originally announced.

The Coroner's Jury held a short session today, heard two witnesses and adjourned until tomorrow morning.

Richard Thompson, a miner, testified that three automobiles loaded with armed men drove up to the Masonic Hall polling place, in front of which the fatalities occurred. The men got out and started toward John Ford, former Chief of Police, reputed Cyclops of the Herrin Klan now and a brother of one of the slain. He said a man whom he believed was Mack Sizemore fired the first shot, which killed one of two men who accosted Ford and searched him.

Almost simultaneously, however, Thompson testified, Mack Sizemore fell, mortally wounded. He said he did not recognize any of the men who got out of the cars.

Date McNeill, the other witness, testified substantially the same. In the previous shooting at the Smith garage, he said, he saw fifteen or twenty men firing toward the garage, the only one of whom he recognized being Bill Burton. He said he did not see any police or regular deputy sheriffs near the polls.

John Smith, former Ku Klux Klan liquor raider, has sold out and left Herrin, it was learned today.

Some said he had gone to Florida and others Kentucky, but whatever his destination Smith lost no time in leaving the place where for nearly three years he had been one of the central figures in Klan and anti-Klan clashes.

His garage, which was riddled by bullets in Tuesday's battle and in which seven men were killed Aug. 30, 1924, was sold late yesterday to two Herrin automobile and accessory dealers, who divided the stock between them.

are not to be solved so as to embrace offenses not clearly within the law."

Referring to the discretionary power of the Secretary of Commerce the decision asks:

"What rule has Congress laid down for his guidance in determining division of the time between the defendant and the General Electric Company?"

Violation Held Not Criminal.

The Court held that while the Zenith Corporation and President McDonald were really guilty of a violation of an administrative regulation promulgated by the Secretary of Commerce, it was not a criminal violation.

The decision further said that Congress cannot delegate its power to make law, and that it is "axiomatic that statutes creating and defining crimes cannot be extended by intendment and that no act can be punished under such a statute unless clearly within its terms."

Mr. McDonald in a statement said such a decision was expected, and, while it was gratifying, it was certain that the action clarifies the law.

He and his counsel interpreted the decision as having "absolutely no effect on the average broadcasting stations, and chaos cannot result in spite of the recent newspaper statement of Secretary Hoover. The decision will prevent seizure or piracy of wave bands by unlicensed stations or by stations not specifically licensed as manufacturers or experimenters, as the present law provides."

J. Elliott Byrne, Assistant Federal District Attorney, said steps would be taken in an action to appeal.

Case Going to Higher Courts.

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP).—It was indicated today at the Commerce Department that the Zenith Radio case would be carried to higher courts.

Secretary Hoover had previously announced that a decision adverse to the Government would result in chaos in the broadcasting field, with a rush of stations to favored wave lengths.

The Commerce Secretary was in New York today and his aids ordered Chicago officials to analyze the opinion in the case so that a definite decision might be reached on further action.

CONGRESS WARNED ON FARM RELIEF

COOLIDGE FOR LOAN FUND

He Regards It as Credit Need and Not a Subsidy — Haugen to Draft a New Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP).—Notice from Minnesota Republicans in the House that they would oppose adjournment of Congress until farm relief legislation was enacted, brought from Representative Tilson, the Republican leader, a response today that he expected a bill reported by Wednesday and brought up in the House the latter part of next week.

Meanwhile the Agriculture Committee, displaying symptoms of swerving from Secretary Jardine's plan, embodied in the Tincher bill, instructed Chairman Haugen to draft a measure. This procedure was adopted without a dissenting vote, but did not commit members to any form of legislation.

Chairman Haughen indicated that in working out a bill he would use the Corn Belt measure as a basis, modifying it so that it would be similar to the McNary-Haugen bill which failed to receive Congressional approval two years ago.

His plan is to include a revolving fund for stabilising agricultural prices by levying an equalization fee on the first salt of wheat, corn, cattle and hogs.

Differing from the Corn Belt bill, which would leave price stabilization to the discretion of a Federal Farm Board, Mr. Haugen's scheme would direct the board to maintain the price of each basic commodity at the world market quotation plus the import tariff.

At the White House it was said that President Coolidge is inclined to look with favor on the principle of the Tincher bill of not engaging the Government in the buying or selling of farm products.

He does not regard the revolving fund proposal as a Government subsidy any more than loans extended through the War Finance Corporation, and he believes that it would provide a credit for farmers more direct and satisfactory than that of the intermediate banks, which, he believes, are not functioning as well as had been expected.

JAPAN NOW ANXIOUS FOR OUR GOOD-WILL

Her Leaders Tell Henry Morgenthau of Their Desire to Cooperate, but as Equals.

CLASH OF VIEWS AT MANILA

All Factions Want America to Declare at Once the Future Policy for the Islands.

Henry Morgenthau of New York, who has just reached the Pacific Coast on his return from a tour of the Far East, has telegraphed to THE NEW YORK TIMES his impressions of conditions, presenting them in the following article:

By HENRY MORGENTHAU.
Special to The New York Times.

SAN PEDRO, Cal., April 16.—In spite of the importance of our position in the Pacific there seems to be little general realization in the United States of the vital interest to Japan of uninterrupted trade relations with our country.

If these relations were broken even for a very short time the effect on the Japanese economic structure would be disastrous. Last year the United States bought $440,000,000 of Japanese raw silk. This was 93 per cent., of the most valuable export product of Japan. The United States also took 80 per cent. of her export of grass rugs, 45 per cent. of her camphor, which comes from Formosa, 31 per cent. of her brushes, 28 per cent. of her pottery and 20 per cent. of all her toys sent abroad.

American imports to Japan still further demonstrate to all intelligent people the evident necessity for Japan and the great desirability for the United States of the continuance of good relations between the two countries. The United States is providing Japan with 86 per cent. of her automobiles, 94 per cent. of her import lumber, 70 per cent. of all her building and construction material, 50 per cent. of her petroleum products, 50 per cent. of her machinery, 54 per cent. of her leather and 40 per cent. of her wheat. An amazing and most convincing array of figures.

Largely through the kindness of Ben Fletcher of The Japan Advertiser I had the opportunity to meet at luncheons, dinners and other functions and have long, serious discussions with most of the leaders of Japan—Baron Shidehara, Prince Togagowa, J. Inouye, Dr. Dan, Viscount Shibusawa, Tsurumi Hanihara, Baron Ishimoto, Viscount Goto and others. Although most of them still resent our "exclusion law," all realize that for economic, political, strategic and many other reasons, they must strengthen the close, pleasant and most profitable relations of the two countries. Any war, irrespective of the outcome, would do irreparable damage to Japan.

One must have visited Tokio and Yokohama to understand the terrific injury done by the earthquake and fire. The Japanese are still stunned from its effects. They are heroically repairing the damage, but it is slow and expensive work. Unfortunately, they cannot revivify the dead.

The Japanese still speak with great admiration of the prompt help and sympathy we extended them in those days of dire distress.

Changing Attitude Toward America.

Formerly some of the Japanese, like others elsewhere, regarded us an overgrown, provincial, smug and self-satisfied nation with limited military resources, while since our contribution to the winning of the World War they recognize our enormous potentiality in war as well as in peace. Their statesmen, who are as keen and farsighted as any in the world, fully appreciate the changed conditions, and particularly that we now are the determining factor in world affairs and that in any future world tug-of-war the side we pull with will win. They are most solicitous for our friendship and are anxious to counteract and destroy the evil effects of the pre-war anti-Japanese propaganda in the United States. They emphasize their great and unbounded admiration for us and seize every opportunity to convince all visiting Americans of their sincerity to clarify the situation. They want our cooperation, and, above all, to be treated as our equals. A great nation is anxious warmly to clasp our hands.

The homogeneity of the Japanese stands out in bold contrast to the heterogeneity of the Chinese. Japan's natural path and that of least resistance is toward the West. At present, besides still further industrializing their own country, they are also energetically developing Korea and their own "Philippines," the island of Formosa.

They will look toward Manchuria, which is contiguous to Korea. Japan's resistance (Look at a map and you will promptly grasp the situation.) Even there their aim is peaceful economic penetration. They realize that the competition for the Chinese trade will be fierce and that preference will be given by China to friendly nations who have treated them decently and justly during the trying period of evolution. The Chinese have recently learned the power of the boycott; Hong Kong is in a sorry plight from the result of its application; they will not hesitate to use it in the future.

Japan wants to continue as a world power, although they realize that their non-productive expenditures incurred thereby are more than their present taxing power justifies—their war and navy budgets are a great strain on their taxpayers and may even cause them to rebel against it—yet Japan feels that her continuing as the only world power on the Pacific gives her a valuable prestige, not only in the Pacific but all over the world, and it will be of great advantage to them in securing a full share of the Chinese trade when that country is finally opened to unlimited commerce and development. They feel that their great future prospects justify their present apparent extravagance.

The Japanese promptly brush aside any allusion to their coveting the Philippine Islands. Their thorough knowledge of the Philippines and their complete (even better than that of our public) understanding of our relations to the Philippines and the Pacific problem has convinced them that there will not be any Philippine question in the immediate future. They know that it is essential and wise to continue the existing relations for some time to come.

Rival Claims in the Philippines.

During my stay in Manila, where I had long and exhaustive discussions with all the principal advocates of firm retention, complete separation, immediate independence and deferred independence, I found that all these factions, in the heat of their discussions, are exaggerating their demands and are claiming more than they expect to realize. The politicos, headed by Quezon, are obsessed by the slogan, "immediate independence"; during my sojourn in Manila they even established a day of prayer for "immediate independence."

They fail to realize that the United States has become a great world power and, as such, has assumed new responsibilities in the Pacific and may therefore not deem it expedient to carry out her original intentions toward the Philippines, and instead offer them a quasi-junior partnership in the most powerful political entity of the world which would be a much more desirable status than being a small independent State reliant on its own limited resources and deprived of the great advantages of free trade relations with the United States.

In all domestic matters the Filipinos should be given a degree of autonomy somewhat similar to that enjoyed by the States of our country. They should have all the autonomy, without the same Federal responsibilities of these self-governing units, but there should be sufficient outside control to prevent occurrences like their dreadful bank disaster, which would have swamped them but for the timely assistance of our Government.

It is difficult to carry out the original plan to give the Philippines their independence as soon as they demonstrate that their Government is stable. A government, according to Governor General Wood, is stable when there is a ready flow of foreign funds seeking investment in its country at normal rates of interest. At present that is hardly so, and it is not so partly because capitalists fear the possible success of the demand for immediate independence.

And even if there were an absolutely stable Government now it would be so largely because the United States is helping in its direction. It is impossible for the Philippines to demonstrate that they can maintain a stable Government without the supervision of the United States until they have conducted an uncontrolled Government, so here is a vicious circle. It is one thing to be stable while the United States is steering the ship, but quite a different thing when Filipinos are at the helm.

Another serious contention has arisen: Has either Congress or the President the inherent right to surrender the sovereignty of the United States over the Philippines?

In Manila it is strenuously asserted and an extensive brief has been prepared to prove that by the treaty of peace with Spain the title to the Philippine Islands has become vested in the people of the United States and nothing short of a Constitutional amendment will enable a transfer of the same to the Filipinos.

An immediate opinion by the Attorney General on this question would be welcomed by all. All the factions want the United States Government promptly and definitely to fix their future policy as to the islands and then firmly and unwaveringly adhere to it. They don't want another investigating commission of Americans. They desire a mixed commission of Americans and Filipinos to find an immediate solution to the problem.

FIRST SKYSCRAPER PLANNED FOR PARIS

REICH TO FURNISH SUPPLIES

Senator de Monzie Pushes Scheme Which Will Cost About $50,000,000 —Financing Is a Problem.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 16.—The French Government services will be lodged in a single group of buildings surrounding the first skyscraper erected in Paris, if plans actively sponsored by the Minister of Public Works, Senator de Monzie, are realized.

Several Cabinet meetings have discussed ways and means. Materials and equipment for the Government centre would be supplied by Germany under the reparations agreement. This arrangement would make for great economy in carrying out the project; but, despite the relative cheapness, it will be expensive enough, owing to labor and other charges, to necessitate some sort of special financing, which may be difficult at the present time.

The financial difficulties are twofold: First, the ordinary Treasury receipts for this year and probably for the next few years will be eaten up by current expenditures and by the redemption of the huge floating debt, to say nothing of foreign, commercial and war debts.

In some circles the suggestion has been advanced to sell the buildings now occupied by the various ministries which are extremely valuable; but this is opposed on the ground that the cash thus obtained, after doing its work, will be gone forever.

Secondly, market conditions of the franc scarcely permit the floating of an internal loan, while a foreign loan is deemed inadvisable by many persons because of the effect it would have on public opinion in France. It is true that many newspapers in the past few months have been warning against inflation or fresh borrowing, and the mere fact that the Government was offering a loan in some foreign market, however advantageous the use of the money might be, would arouse disfavor hard to overcome.

Americans Advise Against Project.

It is understood that American financiers, questioned as to the advisability of such a loan, have shown a certain degree of disfavor to the project, but only on the ground of the existing condition of the franc rate of exchange.

It is possible that some other alternative may be discovered which will permit the scheme to be carried out, such as a private banking arrangement. Inasmuch as the note issue would not have to be carried for long, there are great chances of success if financial backers are discovered.

The scheme along general lines consists of recuperating a vast area which is located behind the military school. This would be brought about by the prolongation of the public gardens, which would stretch from the Trocadero, across the Seine, under the Eiffel Tower and up to the military school.

Behind the old school a central twenty-story skyscraper would be erected and around it would be a series of smaller buildings, all constructed according to the latest American light-saving plans.

All Government services would be modern, spacious offices with ingenious lighting, signaling and interphonic arrangements. A central plant would supply heat, hot and cold water, telephone exchanges, &c. Two subway systems would build special stations and a shuttle train would carry passengers to the Orleans Railroad Terminus.

Would Rent Present Buildings.

The present Government buildings, following the completion of the new buildings, could be rented for high figures—to hotel syndicates, for instance. Among such buildings are the Ministry of Marine in the Place de la Concorde, one of the choicest sites in Paris; the Ministry of Justice on the Place Vendôme; the Ministry of Finance in the Louvre; the Ministry of the Interior, close to the Elysée, where the President of the Republic lives; and numerous old historic palaces on the Rues de Grenelle, Saint Dominique and the Boulevard Saint Germain.

The annual rent from these and other vacated Government offices would suffice to wipe out the initial expenditure in a fairly short number of years, while revenue from the same sources could be derived by the collecting of taxes on real estate, which the State does not pay.

Experts who have examined the tentative architects' and contractors' plans estimate the amount needed to carry out the work between $35,000,000 and $100,000,000, according to the methods of work and the financing selected, but a conservative figure appears to be $50,000,000.

Two American building firms are known to be interested in the scheme, which was originated by a young French engineer schooled in America, who is at the head of the French offices of one of these firms.

Under several monarchs all Government offices were centralized in a single group of buildings, such as Versailles under Louis XIV and the Louvre under Napoleon III. It may be presumed that the scheme has found favor in Government circles and that attempts will be made to interest the public in the plan.

Senator de Monzie, it is understood, hopes to carry out a governmental reform simultaneously with the erection of the new Government centre, if he can persuade Parliament to adopt his plan.

Restaurant Not on Padlock List.

United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner announced yesterday that his earlier statement for publication that the Golden Glide Restaurant, Inc., at 112 West Forty-fourth Street, had previously been raided and was on his "special list" for padlock action was due to misinformation received by his investigators. The place referred to was a café in Suite 203, on the second floor at the same address. The Golden Glide Restaurant is a coffee house occupying a part of the ground floor and, according to Mr. Buckner, its owners have no connection whatever with the raided suite. The restaurant is operated by Henry Gottesman and Antony Widrich.

Premier's Spirit Pervades Populace, Confident They Are on Threshold of Era of Prosperity.

By JOHN H. FINLEY.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, April 16.—On reaching Rome this morning after a night's ride with my guide from Naples and after surrendering our tickets at the station gate, a guard remarked smilingly: "This is the end of your journey; this is Rome." And to Rome, or at any rate to Italy, all roads seem to lead just now, as they did in the ancient days.

A European King came to Rome on the train on which I traveled comfortably from Naples. I saw another European King at Pompeii, who must pass through Rome to reach his northern kingdom again. I also traveled some distance toward Rome with two personages who attracted much more attention than royalty when they arrived in Italy. They were Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford.

The Northern King might wander in Italy or Pompeii without attracting much more attention than the nobility got, according to Bolivar, on the night of the great disaster. The other European King might pass unnoticed among the guests in a Neapolitan hotel. But not so these artists from Los Angeles, whose films the Epicurean Latin poet Lucretius would have been delighted to see as confirming his theory of the transmission as films or images of objects and ideas.

There is, however, one figure to whom the roads of all thought seem to lead. He is at the present moment on the way home from Africa, so I have not been able to see him, but one is aware that his personality pervades and dominates the Italy I so far have seen from the siren rocks off Capri to Cervo and from Umbertide to Rome, from fishermen and peasants to scholars and financiers.

I saw Italy before the war, I saw Italy during the war and I saw Italy shortly after the armistice. This first glimpse seven years later reveals a changed surface aspect. Dante could no longer inveigh against this land of his as "a hostel of woe" or as "a vessel without a pilot in a mighty storm."

If there is woe it is invisible, and not even suggested in the faces of the people one sees in the streets, in the shops or at work along the road. I have seen hardly a beggar, save the blind. Industry has seemingly become a passion.

There is no feverish haste, no sign of interference here. There is obvious thrift and absence of prodigality. Incidentally, in all the miles I have walked I have not seen enough litter to fill a bucket. All in all Italy seems—at first sight, at any rate—to be a transformed land, lifted into industry and orderliness by some common hope or purpose.

If that be the explanation, although that hope or purpose has been stirred by a single individual, Italy has entered upon a new life that will survive the voice that animated it.

Some of us may prefer other ways of obtaining such objectives; others may believe they cannot be permanently achieved except through what are usually, if not necessarily, slower processes of democracy. But no outside observer can doubt that those to whom proclamations are addressed in posters along the ancient ways of Rome today, in grateful recognition of Mussolini's escape from death or serious injury, are for the time being in better state.

Their confident hope is that they will find this improved condition is but a preface to a permanently better state, to be attained through the self-discipline which they are practicing under leadership of their own creation—under the guidance of one who holds the reins of Justinian's reflited bridle.

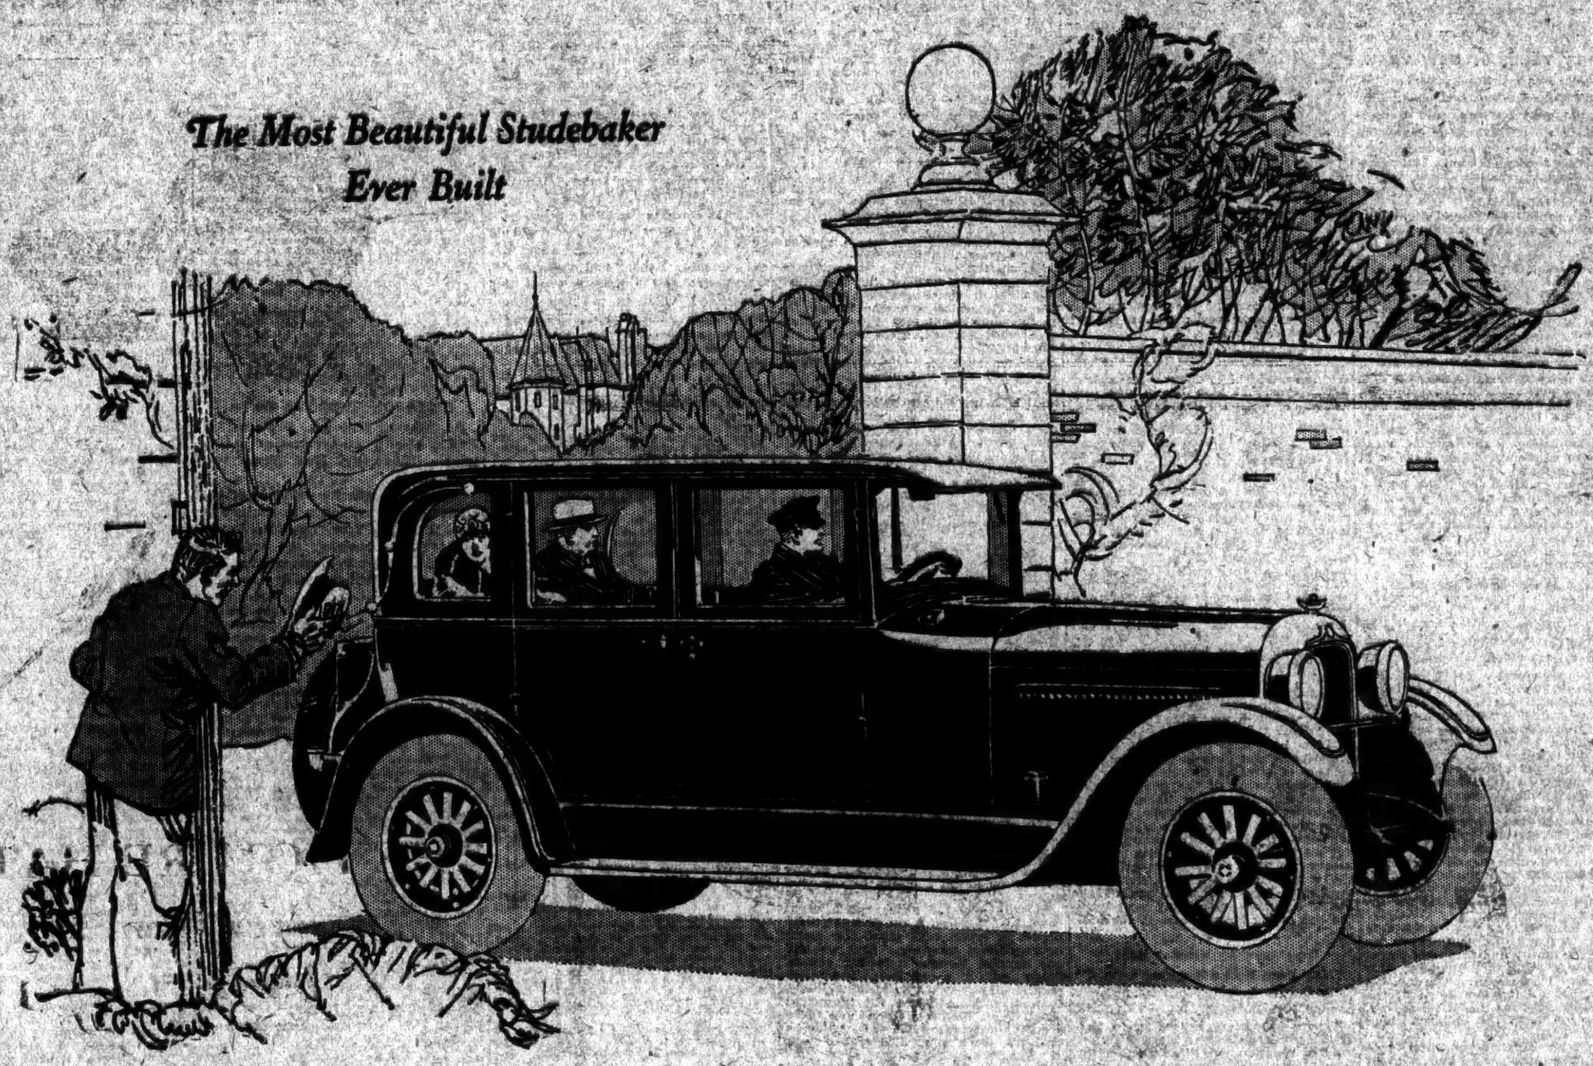
Distinctive Beauty
At a One-Profit Price
Studebaker Big Six Brougham



$2095 f. o. b. factory

The Most Beautiful Studebaker Ever Built

THE most beautiful Studebaker ever built—a car that offers luxuries in style, finish and interior appointments considered impossible in a car at this price until Studebaker achieved it through One-Profit manufacture.

No car has finer type of body construction—nor more luxurious inner and outer appearance—than the Studebaker Big Six Brougham. There are only seven American cars of equal rated horsepower, and they cost from $2655 to $7955 more to buy.

It is because of this that we ask you to judge this fine car solely on a basis of comparison with any fine car you have admired—and buy then by what you know to be the facts.

From its black-enameled steel travel trunk on the rear, attractively set off by ornamental brackets, to the distinctive curve of its bright nickeled radiator—the Big Six Brougham is the highest example of the coach-builders' art. Leather rear-quarter and landau arms complete its custom beauty.

A study in luxury

Inside—it's a study in luxury. Wide, deep seats accommodate five in easy-chair comfort. Upholstery is of finest broadcloth, tailored to a form-fitting design. Interior hardware is tastefully arranged and finished in rich Butler silver.

The richness of its interior and exterior finish is indicative of the fine quality body construction you cannot see. Body pillars are of selected northern white ash; cross members of hard maple. Studebaker standards—the highest in the industry—zealously guard every part and operation in its manufacture.

These fine One-Profit Studebakers may be purchased out of income at the lowest time-payment rates known to the automotive industry

Studebaker Big Six
world's fastest-selling high-powered car

The Big Six Brougham is powered with the identical engine that carries hundreds of Studebaker busses at high speed hour after hour over some of the most mountainous and difficult-to-travel routes in America—hence we urge you to compare its thrilling performance with that of the finest eight-cylinder car.

The chassis and engine are especially designed for the Studebaker-built body. Full-size balloon tires, 127-inch wheelbase, long, resilient springs and snubbers assure unsurpassed ease of riding.

Because of its power, beauty and quality advantages the Studebaker Big Six has become the world's fastest-selling high-powered car.

Because of Studebaker's enormous One-Profit facilities, and the added advantage of volume production, Studebaker is able to offer a value in the Big Six Brougham that no manufacturer can duplicate within hundreds of dollars of its present low price. No other car of equal rated horsepower sells at less than double its price.

Studebaker's unique facilities

Few motor car "manufacturers" have foundries, forges, etc., to make their own engines—yet one-fifth of an automobile's cost is in the engine. Even fewer build their own bodies—yet one-third of a car's cost is in the body.

Studebaker builds all its own bodies, all engines, all clutches, gear sets, springs, differentials, steering gears, brakes, axles, gray-iron castings and drop forgings. Only Ford in the low-price field and Studebaker in the fine-car field have such complete manufacturing facilities.

One-Profit value

These facilities enable Studebaker to manufacture quality cars on a One-Profit basis—eliminating outside profits. The savings thus effected are passed on to Studebaker owners in the form of higher quality and lower price.

Unit-Built construction

Studebaker facilities result, too, in cars designed, engineered and built as units. The hundreds of parts in a Studebaker function as a smooth-working unit, resulting in scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation, greater riding comfort and higher resale value.

Always kept up-to-date

Direct manufacturing control enables Studebaker to keep cars constantly up-to-date. We add improvements regardless of the calendar—we do not save them up for spectacular annual announcements which make cars artificially obsolete. Resale values are thus stabilized. Church Leaders Praise Prohibition as Aid to the Nation's Morals and Finances the arrest of all such persons regardless of whether they are disorderly or not.

Bishop Darlington, in his testimony, praised the Roman Catholics for the part they were playing in the dry campaign, while Dr. Haven of the American Bible Society, as did practically every other witness heard today, said the situation was one calling not for modification but for a more strict enforcement of the law.

DR. HAVEN OPENS BATTLE.

To the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America went the honor of opening the battle of the drys, and the Rev. Dr. W. I. Haven of New York City, senior agent of the American Bible Society, was the witness.

"From the beginning of its existence," said Dr. Haven, "the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America has been unequivocally committed to the policy of prohibition. When the first meeting of the Council was convened in Philadelphia in 1908, bringing together official representatives of thirty denominations, a message dealing with the problem of the liquor traffic declared that 'if it be right to preach the gospel of abstinence for the individual, it must be right to include in our message every possible persuasion to total prohibition as the attitude of the State toward the traffic is strong drink.'

"During the following years this position was repeatedly reaffirmed, and at the quadrennial meeting of the Council in St. Louis in 1916 action was taken urging that an amendment providing for national prohibition be submitted.

"In adopting this attitude toward the liquor evil the Council was simply gathering up and giving united expression to the expressed desire and will of the denominations that comprise the Council. Year after year in their highest legislative assemblies, by overwhelming majorities, they were registering their deep conviction that the traffic in liquor must be abolished. Not a single denomination included in the membership of the Council has expressed a contrary judgment on this subject within recent history."

From the moment the Eighteenth Amendment was ratified to the present, Dr. Haven said, the Council has sustained the principle of prohibition with "unflagging loyalty" and that at every meeting of the Council since that time this position has been sustained. This stand, he added, was a definite reflection of the attitude of the churches comprising the Council.

"The support of national prohibition," he continued, "by the Council rests upon four fundamental considerations:

"First, the belief that in dealing with gigantic social evils, like disease or crime, individual liberty must be controlled in the interest of the public welfare.

"Second, the belief that the liquor traffic is beyond question such an evil.

"Third, the conviction that no plan less thorough-going than prohibition is sufficient to eradicate the evils of the liquor traffic.

"Fourth, the evidence of history that other methods of attempting to control the traffic have failed and that prohibition, despite inadequacies of enforcement, is succeeding better than any other program.

Progress Must Pay a Price.

"Limitation upon individual freedom in matters affecting society is the price that any people must pay for the progress of its civilization. Personal liberty cannot rightly be claimed for practices which militate against the welfare of others or the interest of the community as a whole.

"It is especially contrary to the democratic ideals and to enlightened public policy to permit any citizen to make profit from a business which is detrimental to his neighbor. This is readily recognized by all as sound policy in regard to the trade in narcotics.

"It is equally true of the liquor traffic. To insure social protection against a trade whose avowed purpose was to get people to consume the maximum possible amount of alcoholic liquor is the foundation on which our national policy of prohibition rests.

"The policy of prohibition was not adopted hastily nor was it foisted upon the country by a puritanical minority. It was first voted in most of the States separately, and then nationally, because the people had become convinced that the liquor traffic was a social evil of such magnitude that it had to be destroyed. The Eighteenth Amendment was made a part of the Constitution by the regular methods which the founders of the Republic devised with a view to making the amendment to the Constitution difficult rather than easy. Yet this amendment was adopted more promptly than any other change in the Constitution ever proposed.

"The reasons which led to prohibition not only remain today but have been reinforced by the experience of other nations. The social peril of alcoholism is becoming a growing concern to statesmen throughout the world. If serious evils have sprung up since prohibition, they are far less than the evils which arose from the liquor traffic prior to the amendment. The liquor traffic, with the accompanying saloon, was allied with political corruption, crime, gambling and prostitution.

"It meant the wreckage of men and the degregation of families, which social workers and ministers saw constantly in their daily work. It produced needless inefficiency in industry.

Says Beer Means Saloon's Return.

"Moreover, the tendency in the United States, as has been the case in Europe, was toward an increasing consumption of the stronger liquors, with consequent intensifying of social hazards. Methods of control short of prohibition, such as taxation, regulation and the governmentally controlled systems of some of the Canadian Provinces, Norway and Sweden, have all proved inadequate to cope with the evil.

"The proposal to modify the Volstead act so as to permit the sale of wines and beers presents insuperable objections. It would make enforcement more difficult. It would inevitably mean the return either of the saloon or something equally undesirable. Bootlegging in stronger liquors would become more menacing, because it would tend to operate through the places where the milder intoxicants were sold.

"Moreover, there is no evidence to justify the contention that to permit wine and beer would reduce the consumption of ardent spirits. The teaching of experience is to the contrary.

"The one path of advance is for all good citizens personally to observe the law and to support the great enterprise, born of the idealism of the people, of completely ridding the nation of as demoralizing a business as the liquor traffic has always proved itself to be. Least of all should our prohibition law be changed in response to the cry of those who by their own disrespect for the law are preventing it from receiving a fair trial or who, because of their special interest in the return of the liquor traffic, are artificially stimulating an agitation for changing our present law.

"The call of the hour is for such a thoroughgoing work of moral persuasion and legal enforcement as will give the policy of prohibition an adequate opportunity to demonstrate its full value to the nation and to the world."

The statement read by Dr. Haven was signed by some of the most eminent clergymen and laymen of the Protestant Church in America, among them Bishop Manning of New York, the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D. D., of New York; the Rev. Robert E. Speers, D. D.; E. H. Olcott and George Otis Smith, Chief of the Geodetic Survey.

Full List of the Signers.

The Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, the Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, the Rev. Frank Mason North, Mrs. John Ferguson, Carl E. Milliken, the Rev. John M. Moore, Bishop James Canon Jr., the Rev. Charles E. Burton, the Rev. Robert E. Speer, the Rev. George Reid Andrews, the Rev. Robert A. Ashworth.

Clifford W. Barnes, Edward H. Bensel, Thomas E. D. Bradley, the Rev. William Adams Brown, the Rev. Willard D. Burdick, the Rev. Samuel McCrea Cavert, Bishop George C. Clement, James S. Cushman, the Rev. William L. Darby, the Rev. Ozora S. Davis, the Rev. William Horace Day, Mrs. Jeanette Wallace Emrich, the Rev. Chauncey W. Goodrich, the Rev. I. W. Gowen, the Rev. Howard B. Grose, the Rev. Sidney L. Gulick, the Rev. William I. Haven.

Miss Florence E. Quinlan, the Rev. E. B. Sanford, the Rev. Charles E. Schaeffer, Mrs. E. H. Silverthorn, George Otis Smith, James M. Speers, the Rev. Joshua Stansfield, the Rev. Harry E. Stocker, the Rev. Fred D. Stone, the Rev. George Summey, Hugh A. Thrift, the Rev. Ezra S. Tripple, the Rev. Worth M. Tippy, Fennell P. Turner.

The Rev. Charles E. Vermilya, H. M. Voorhees, Professor Luther A. Weigle, the Rev. John M. Wells, the Rev. George U. Wenner, the Rev. Charles L. White, the Rev. Thomas H. White, Oliver R. Williamson, the Rev. David G. Wylie, Charles P. Taft 2d.

Dr. Haven also submitted a communication from the Chicago Church Federation, which, he explained, is a subsidiary of the national organization, or Federal Council.

In this communication the Chicago Church Federation declared the Volstead act "seems to be the natural and necessary corollary to promote the adequate enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment," and that since determined and persistent efforts are being made to "bring these prohibition laws into disrepute, as well as to hamper their proper enforcement, the Chicago Federation not only wants the present law maintained, but urges enactment of such additional legislation as will help in stricter enforcement of these prohibition laws."

MACFARLAND NEXT WITNESS.

The Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, D. D., General Secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, followed Dr. Haven. Dr. MacFarland explained that he appeared as a substitute for Dr. Cadman, the President of the Federation, who was unable to be present, and that the testimony he gave were the views of Dr. Cadman.

"The personal liberty plea," said Dr. MacFarland, "is a delusion and a snare. All law is limitation of personal liberty for the sake of the public welfare. Only yesterday a bread trust was dissolved before it was well begun. The plea that one can do as he pleases with his own property does not avail for the bakers. Why should it avail for the brewers and drinkers?

"One of the blots upon our national character is due to the utterly misleading conception of personal freedom which rejects control and defies authority.

"How else can we account for the swollen lists of divorces, robberies, murders; the notorious deeds of public infidelity and financial debauchery; the unlicensed illusions of the press and its exaltation of rogues by the publicity it gives their trial and execution when they are brought within the reach of tardy justice? I maintain that the Republic we love needs the discipline which prevents reckless and assertive individualism from prostituting the honor and imperilling the safety of the American people.

"The perils of alcoholism give a growing uneasiness to statesmen everywhere, and although the degrading habits of those who openly flout the law are serious for them they are neither as widespread nor as iniquitous as the consequences of the legalized liquor traffic of a decade ago.

"Then saloons were on nearly every corner, groggeries in the slums, and breweries, which owned them, in full blast. They were sinks of human iniquity, alive with legislative corruption, political fraud, prostitution and crime. I know few who dare to hint that these dens of drink and creative sources of poverty and misery should be restored to their former vile supremacy.

"Yet should prohibition be weakened at the dictates of its foes, I am convinced that eventually the saloon will return. Its non-social and pestilential rule will be readdled upon the people. Those who are disposed to heed the pleas of the wets for a more liberal interpretation of the law should ask them how the return of the saloon is to be avoided.

Prohibition an Old Policy.

"They say that prohibition was foisted suddenly upon an unwilling people. As a policy, entire legal suppression of the liquor traffic, in one form or another, is seventy years old in the United States. During that prolonged period the traffic was given repeated opportunities to reform.

"Recall its bone-headed brutalities, its flagrant violations of law, its conscienceless outrages upon the security and peace of countless American homes. Taxation, police supervision, State regulations or the governmentally controlled systems of some of the Canadian provinces have alike proved ineffective. Finland, after experimenting with other plans, has followed the example of the United States and adopted prohibition.

"The descriptions of the violation of the law, or the wealth of bootleggers and of other villains and villainies preying upon our people, are usually made by those who want the modification or repeal of prohibition. Why they should make a concerted drive in this particular policy is not obvious apart from their selfish interests. Other laws are exceedingly difficult of enforcement, but we do not advise their modification or repeal.

"Give prohibition a square deal. No sooner was prohibition established and the wets had recovered from the shock than they began to encompass its destruction. But after enduring drink for many centuries, nearly always with ignominious results, can we not endure prohibition even for a decade? What homes have it blighted? What disgrace has it brought upon us, what shame and sin, when compared with the unbridled use of intoxicants during those centuries?

Rigid Enforcement Urged.

"I ask for a rigid enforcement of the law backed by an equitable and rational public opinion which will not be diverted from this magnificent experiment till it has had a fair opportunity. Give sobriety an equal chance with drunkenness. In view of the undeniable benefits which have already been produced by prohibition and because of the sheer impossibility of dealing with the liquor evil by any other method, I call upon all good citizens to rally to its support."

Dr. MacFarland concluded his testimony by reading into the record two telegrams, both addressed to Dr. Cadman. The first was from T. Albert Moore, Secretary of the United Church of Montreal. Mr. Moore declared the United Church of Canada, with more than 800,000 members, was opposed to any law which permits the sale of intoxicants for beverage purposes.

The Government sale system in Canada, he declared, has resulted in "more liquor sold and consumed, increased bootlegging, reduced domestic comforts, retarded industrial enterprise and depressed financial conditions and general prosperity."

The message stated that the Rev. Wallace Peck, D. D., of the United Church of Canada, was on his way to Washington to challenge the testimony of Canadians who had testified for the wets, and asserted that conditions had improved in Canada as a result of Government liquor control and operation laws.

The second message was from George C. Pidgeon, also of Montreal. It was similar to the one wired by Mr. Moore.

BEATTY TELLS OF NEW YORK.

Lee W. Beatty, Superintendent of Madison Square Church House, New York, the next witness, said the organization with which he is connected operates between Twenty-third and Forty-second Street and Lexington Avenue and the North River, which, he explained, is a very densely populated tenement district.

"Before prohibition," said Mr. Beatty, "it was necessary for us in order to prevent mothers and families with little children being dispossessed, in order to provide them with clothing and food so that they might attend school and be nourished, in order that they might have some comforts, to spend from $30 to $300 a month. Since prohibition came in I cannot spend $15 a month with the same population.

"Between Twenty-eighth Street and Fortieth Street there were thirteen saloons in pre-prohibition days, doing a land-office business, with young men gathered in them night after night, and especially Saturday nights. Today, of course, there is not one of these saloons in existence. They have been replaced—opposite my church house, for instance, with a new bank having marble furnishings and every modern convenience for a banking institution.

"On the opposite corner there was another saloon, but now there is a haberdashery there, conducted by a very decent gentleman.

Cites Home Improvements.

"I want to tell you one other fact: In the old saloon days we always had a fresh air farm connected with our institution, to which we would take mothers and children to the country for two weeks at a time. We could accommodate fifty-five in a party, and five parties during the Summer. We always had applications for accommodations from 100 to 125 or 150 people, people who wanted to go.

"The first year after prohibition the largest party we could make up was composed of twenty-seven people. We then went to a family which had always come to the Church House at that time of year and applied for permission to go to the country, a mother with her five children. Her husband was making $13 a week, as a porter, I mean during pre-prohibition days. As I say they had always applied for the privilege of going.

"But, inasmuch as we could only make up a party of twenty-seven we visited this family and this took place: 'Are you not going to the country this year?' The reply was: 'Oh, no, we have rented a bungalow down at the seashore for $300 for the whole season, and we will keep the children there all the time.'

"Then the further question was asked: 'You must have had a great raise in salary, then?' And the reply: 'Oh, no, Alexander does not drink any more. He gets more salary because of the prosperity, and, of course, higher wages have come in, and now he gets $23 a week—which is about the average salary for a porter in New York—but, in former days he always brought home his envelope torn open, and I would get $3 or $4 out of it and that is all I would have gotten today if the saloons had not closed.'

"But they have been closed and now he brings home the whole envelope and he has not been drunk for the last five years and I put $10 in the bank every week and still have $13 a week to take care of my family instead of the $3 or $4 a week I had in the saloon days.'

"Another incident that I might refer to: This reflects upon the great spirit of exaggeration prevalent these days in describing what is called the tremendous amount of home brew. Let me tell you a little incident that occurred only this past two weeks. I called on one of my parishioners, a very fine Christian lady living on the third floor. As I went in the door I detected, by the criterion that has been set up by the wets in their pleas here before last week, the odor of home brew. I smelt some brew as I went in the hallway and I knew there was home brewing going on.

"I went up and I chaffed the lady a little over the matter and asked whether she had anything to serve up to her pastor. She went into a very exaggerated statement something like this: 'Oh, this is awful. Oh, it is worse than in pre-prohibition days. It is terrible. Why, they are making home-brew in every house on the block.'

"I said, 'All right; I will see about that.' After my prayer and a little conference, I visited every one of the ninety-three homes on that block. I want to tell you that there was not the smell of home-brew in a single one of them.

Exaggeration on Speak-Easies.

"Let me give you one other incident to show how these matters are exaggerated. Going down from Thirty-eighth to Thirty-ninth Street in pre-prohibition days there were nine saloons. One of the members of my Bible class who had gotten the spirit of exaggeration, having caught up this talk and propaganda as it goes the rounds, said: 'These speak-easies have taken their places.' The saloons have gone, but speak-easies have taken their places.'

"I said, 'Give me the numbers of the speak-easies.' He said: 'You can get all the liquor you want. It is as free as water.' I said: 'All right. I will try to get a drink. Give me the names—or I mean the numbers of the places where you say there are speak-easies.' He gave me seven numbers. I went down there and I want to tell you that not one of those numbers he gave me was a speak-easy, but there was being conducted a legitimate business.

"And I want to say to you that I have been around there for twenty-five years, am up against these things and think I have a little common-sense left, that I am not altogether a fanatic, but I found not one of those places selling liquor.

"But I did find on the block, to be accurate—and I am sworn to tell the truth—I found two old saloons still with their paraphernalia there; that is, the beer bottles were all stripped and the beer tank was out, and the pumps, and they were being conducted as restaurants. But I rather think they were speak-easies, because they seemed to get onto me, and I could not get a drink."

Mr. Beatty concluded by presenting a resolution of the Presbytery of New York, which placed the presbytery on record as against the restoration of a legalized liquor traffic.

URGES LAW WITH TEETH.

Mrs. Helen H. Green of Cleveland, who said she represented 15,000 members of the Cuyahoga Dry Maintenance League, was called to the witness chair next. She was a determined-looking woman of middle age, and she was ready to match wits with Senator Reed, as developments were soon to disclose.

"The dry forces I represent," Mrs. Green began, "are not in favor of any modification of the law, but we do want better enforcement of the dry laws and teeth put into those laws.

"In spite of the fact that our population has increased about 25,000 a year, and is now more than 900,000, and I might add that Cuyahoga County claims 1,000,000—and in spite of the fact that more than 75 per cent. of our population is made up of people of foreign birth or children of foreign parentage; and in spite of the fact that our colored population has increased from 10,000 in 1912 to 60,000 in 1925, colored people brought up from the South for industrial purposes, there is today less crime in Cleveland than there was before prohibition came into being.

"I know that crime is decreasing. I have sat on the bench with Judge; I have sat on the chairs with criminals; I have been down in the cells; I have been out in the workhouse where criminals are imprisoned; I have been in the courts where they seek release before the board to which they go to ask release; I have in many cases helped the wives of those men to get employment while their husbands are absent; and in a few cases I have attempted to restore the men to their positions when they came out of the workhouse.

Cleveland Wars on Crime.

"I wish to say that Cleveland has a dry Mayor. It also has a dry City Manager. That City Manager has appointed a dry Safety Director, and the dry Safety Director is getting action on crime.

"And I want to say that our young people are not so bad as they have been painted or pictured, and wish to summit a news article from The Cleveland Plaindealer of date Feb. 6, 1926, in which the Assistant Superintendent of Schools, Charles H. Lake, is quoted in defense of the youth of the city. I will say that this man probably has contact with more young people than any other man in the City of Cleveland, and with your permission I will read, briefly:

"'Chronicles of immorality among high school boys and girls that occasionally get into the newspapers—stories of wild parties stimulated by synthetic gin—are exceptional, or they never would draw first page position.'

"Then he points out that there are 23,000 boys and girls in the secondary schools of Greater Cleveland.

"I notice some of the gentlemen of the subcommittee may be of similar age to my own, and I believe you gentlemen will bear me out in saying that conditions in the country schools were not all that they should be a quarter century or thirty-five years ago; and the worst things that I know today are things I heard when I was a little girl in common school that came from the lips of big boys 15 and 16 years of age."

Questioned by Senator Reed.

"May I see that newspaper article?" Senator Reed asked. Mrs. Green handed it to him.

"There has been, according to this article, a reaction since the war. What kind of reaction is it?" asked Senator Reed.

"I think he refers to the charges or to the facts?" Senator Reed inquired.

"I do not know what Mr. Lake refers to," said witness.

"Is it not manifest that this article starts out by claiming that conditions are better and then amounts to a confession that they are worse because there has been a reaction?"

"I think not," Mrs. Green replied.

Senator Reed—You do not think that is the case? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You say there is less crime; is there less drunkenness in Cleveland? A.—Yes, sir. Maybe I will talk that later, however?

Q.—I thought you had finished your statement? A.—No, sir.

"I will say," continued Mrs. Green, "that juvenile delinquency is reduced. T. L. Lewis, chief probation officer of the Cleveland Juvenile Courts, submits the following official statistics in the years 1915 to 1925. In the year 1915 there were 1,807 boys and 380 girls brought into court.

"And I should like to ask this subcommittee to bear in mind that in this period of twelve years the population of Cleveland has increased probably 200,000 and that the colored population has increase 50,000, and whereas today the colored population of Cleveland is 6 per cent. of the entire population, yet the delinquency of colored boys and girls is 15 per cent. of the total amount.

"There is less drunkenness in Cleveland now than before prohibition. In 1917 there were 3,150 prosecuted and 38,000 'Golden Ruled' cases, meaning a total of 41,150."

"What year did that represent?" Senator Reed asked.

"The year 1917," said Mrs. Green.

"In Cleveland?" asked Mr. Reed.

"Yes, sir," replied Mrs. Green.

"They were prosecutions, did I understand you to say?" asked the Senator.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Let me get those numbers again, if you please," said Mr. Reed.

"I say in 1917 there were 3,150 prosecuted and there were 38,000 'golden ruled' cases, meaning a total of 41,150 cases for the year," said Mrs. Green.

Explains "Golden Ruled."

"Will you explain to us what you mean by 'golden ruled'?" interrupted Senator Walsh.

"Why, yes. They take them into the police station and keep them until they are sobered up, and get them to admit that they were drunk but are sorry and will try not to do it again, and then they let them go," Mrs. Green replied.

"That is," said Senator Reed, "they act on the theory, do unto the other fellow as we would like to be done by, myself for instance?"

"I believe that is the idea," replied Mrs. Green.

"You may proceed," Senator Walsh said.

"In 1918," said Mrs. Green, "the last year before State prohibition came into effect in Ohio—and it became effective the 27th of May—they were 2,947 boys and 605 girls brought in the juvenile court. Then national prohibition came into effect in January, 1920—and I shall not detail all these figures to you, but will be glad to submit them for your use—and in 1925, in spite of 300,000 increased population and 15 per cent. colored delinquents, there were 1,886 boys and 631 girls before the juvenile court.

"The neglect of children is not as bad since prohibition has been in effect as it was during the wet years. I submit this item for your consideration: The amount of money paid by the County of Cuyahoga to the chief probation officer for prisoners committed to the workhouse for neglect of their children, of their minor children, at the rate of 50 cents per day per prisoner, in the years 1913 to 1918, which were wet years, represented an average annual expenditure of $12,816.

"Then in the dry years, from 1918 to 1925, inclusive, the average annual expenditure was $4,925, or very nearly one-third only of what it was during the wet years.

Neglect of Children Drops.

"Less drink reduces humane society work. The Cleveland Humane Society, through Field Secretary Evelyn F. Stires of 106 City Hall, Cleveland—and she is there because our humane society is supported by the City Government—reports that before prohibition 50 per cent. of all child cases—meaning cruelty and neglect—came from alcoholism in one or both parents, and since prohibition has been in effect the average number of cases when this is true has been a trifle over 15 per cent.

"What was the last year to which you referred?" Senator Reed inquired.

"The year 1918. I am slipping some figures in here because it is not necessary to take up your time to give you all of them."

Q.—Can you give us the year 1919? A.—No. I have not that year on this paper.

Q.—Have you the year 1920? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Or have you the years 1921 or 1922? A.—I begin with the Administration in which I am serving.

Q.—But you began in 1917, did you not? A.—Yes.

Q.—But I do not want to interrupt you, and am asking for clarity, that is all.

Senator Walsh—She gave you the years 1917 and 1918, Senator Reed.

Senator Reed—But you have not figures for the years 1919, 1920 or 1921?

"I will tell you why, Senator," Mrs. Green replied. "There was a political upheaval in our city at that time. The Mayor quarreled with the Safety Director, and the Safety Director quarreled with the Chief of Police, and everybody juggled the figures. And I am not sure that the figures would be correct even if I brought them to you. But the figures for the years 1917 and 1918 have been published again and again in our city and have not been disputed by either the Government or the cities affected by them."

Senator Reed—I was just asking if you have those figures there? A.—No, sir. And those are figures now in the Administration in which I have served.

Q.—What years? A.—The years 1923, 1924 and 1925. In the year 1923 there were 6,406 prosecutions and 12,408 "golden ruled," a total of 18,814.

Q.—Have you 1924?

A.—Yes, sir, for 1924 there were 5,927 arrests and 12,853 "golden ruled," making a total of 19,373.

Q.—If you will please give me the figures for 1917 again, I will thank you. A.—In 1917 there were 3,150 prosecutions and 38,000 "golden ruled," making a total of 41,150. Now, the figures for 1925 are 7,719 prosecuted, and 15,720 "golden ruled," making a total of 23,439.

FEWER INTOXICATION CASES.

"There are very few drunken people seen on the streets in Cleveland," said Mrs. Green. "I live there. I go into every kind of district. I go into every sort of home. I am a public speaker. I do some social service work. I do some court work in connection with my official duties and I feel that I know conditions of the people in Cleveland, and it is very seldom I ever see a drunken person. I think I have not seen five drunken people on the streets in the City of Cleveland in any section or in all sections in the past eighteen months.

"Before prohibition we had a night court where a Judge sat at least three nights a week and until the small hours of the morning. And we had our sunrise Monday morning courts. Since prohibition one Judge has taken care of all the drunks and liquor cases that have come before the municipal court under its jurisdiction, and there are days in almost every week when he does not work after 12:30 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon."

"There are fewer deaths in Cleveland from alcoholism as shown by the figures since prohibition. The Board of Health furnishes me figures, at the hands of Director H. L. Rockwood, M. D. In the year 1918 from alcoholism 90 people died, in 1917 77 died, in 1916 66, in 1919 37, in 1920 11, 1921 45, 1922 35, 1923 27 and 1924 7.

"Now, there is no favoritism in these reports. I have the report here and I will submit also the letter from the Commissioner of Health, Dr. Rockwood, in which he cites the pages on which you will find these figures."

"Is the Commissioner of Health a State officer?" Senator Reed asked.

"Yes, sir," Mrs. Green replied.

"Then was alcoholism," she continued. "Now I will take up cirrhosis of liver, attributable directly to the use of alcoholic liquors. In 1916 our hospitals cared for 102, who died."

"Do you mean," interposed Senator Reed, "to say that cirrhosis of the liver is only attributable to alcoholism or do you mean in giving these statistics they have segregated those cases that could be traced to the use of alcohol?"

"The latter cases, yes," said Mrs. Green. "In 1917 there were 101 deaths; in 1918, 84; in 1919, 70; 1920, 73; 1921, 43; 1922, 13; 1923, 5; 1924, 7, and the figures for 1925 are not compiled as yet.

Points to Poverty Decrease.

"Drink as a poverty cause is disappearing. I have here the report of the Associated Charities, in which the figures in relation to drink as a factor in cases handled by the association are reported. The following are their figures regarding the degree to which drink had been a contributing factor in the family situations that are brought to their attention, and as to these I have a letter signed by the director of that activity beginning with 1916 and running through to 1925.

"In the wet years, 1916, 1917 and 1918, the per cent. of the total number of family cases that were handled where drink was the main factor in reducing those people to such condition of poverty that they had to be assisted by the Associated Charities averaged 6 1-3 per cent. In the next seven years, because I have the figures for 1925 from these people, the average was reduced to 2 1-5 per cent.

"In closing I wish to say I am the mother of two sons and four daughters. None of these young people are hip-pocket-flask toters, and so far as I know their friends are not. I am firmly convinced, gentlemen of the committee, that the attitude of the home and the appearance of those grown people with whom they come in contact influence the habits of young people."

Pamphlets presented by Mrs. Green to the committee were a report of the Cleveland Human Society, Children's Division, annual reports 1917 to 1925 inclusive of the Associated Charities, and the Statistical Record, City of Cleveland, Division of Health, 1916 to 1926.

Only Wet on Ticket Defeated.

"May I say one word more?" asked Mrs. Green. "I am also a citizen of Ohio, and Ohio is dry. The last time we voted on this wet and dry question we went dry by over 170,000. And the last time we had an election the only Republican who came through in the primaries, but who was elected to office at the general election, was the only wet man who was on the Republican ticket. We have a dry Democratic Governor. We have a dry Secretary of State, Auditor, Treasurer and Lieutenant Governor, and the people of Ohio do not want modification. I am perfectly sure."

Senator Reed—What distilled did this unfortunate was run in? A.—Why, he ran in the State for Governor.

Q.—On what ticket? A.—Republican ticket. Harry L. Davis.

Senator Reed—What is the source of these particular figures of yours? A.—These are figures that have been published in Cleveland and we have on record, which have never been disputed, and were given to us at the time by the officers in a position to give them.

Q.—They evidently are disputed because I have before me a publication which gives different figures, but happens to check with yours exactly as to the year 1923. But they give for 1917 1,209—whereas your figures give 3,150. They give for 1918 850, whereas yours give 2,947. For 1919 906. Your figures for that year are not here. For 1920 474, and you present no figures for that year. A.—I explained that, did not?

"Oh, yes," said Senator Reed. "I am not criticising at all. In 1921, 2,834, and you have no figures for that year. In 1922, 4,751. You have no figures for that year."

"That brings us," continued Senator Reed, "to 1923, where you give 6,406, which exactly checks with the figures I have. But coming to 1924 I have 6,613, and you have 5,927. And I have no figures for 1925, and you give 7,719. Now, first, you say that between 1918 and 1923 you produced no figures, and that that was, I think you said, because you had some mix-up in your city government; was that the reason?"

"May I say, Senator," Mrs. Green replied, "that I knew when I came here I would be placed on my oath? I would not swear to the accuracy of any figures that were tabulated during these turbulent years. No one has ever told the truth about them, and I presume nobody can today. I do not want to undertake it."

Records in Muddled State.

"Well, I understand why you should naturally be a little careful about it," said Senator Reed, "and there is not anything at all humorous about this matter. I want to get the reason. Was there such a terrible state of affairs in Cleveland from 1918 to 1923 that you think nobody told the truth about what was going on?"

"There was trouble between the Mayor and his Safety Director," Mrs. Green explained.

Senator Reed—What is the Safety Director? A.—The man above the Chief of Police. He has charge of fire, police and other safety measures, including smoke inspection and so forth.

Q.—Well, the courts still ran there, did they not? A.—Oh, yes, sir.

Q.—And there must have been records made in the courts of the convictions? A.—But minor police records.

Q.—Well, are there not records in the police court? A.—Yes, sir. When we changed when our Administration came into power—there was not even a card system in the police court.

Q.—Were there not records in the police court books of convictions? A.—A sort of record, yes.

Q.—Now, did anybody ever examine those records, do you know? A.—I think probably so.

Q.—Would not those records disclose the number of convictions? A.—I do not know whether they would or not.

Q.—Well, you do not mean to state that because there was trouble between the Mayor and the Director of Public Safety—I think is the name you give—A.—And the Chief of Police.

Q.—And the Chief of Police, that the courts quit keeping records in the city of the actual proceedings in court? You would not say that, would you? A.—I know that the records are very inadequate.

Q.—Have you examined them yourself? A.—I have seen them, yes, sir.

"Are they any more inadequate," Senator Reed said, "than they were at other times? What happened to the Judges that made them quit keeping records, if anything?"

"I would not attempt to say," replied Mrs. Green.

Q.—Well, was the only issue in the campaign wet or dry? A.—No, sir. But our people cannot forget.

"They cannot forget the iniquities of the Republican Party, is that it, or they just only cannot forget the iniquities of the wets? A.—We cannot forget that when we elected Harry L. Davis Governor, and he promised to be dry, and he was not as dry as we though he was going to be, we could not forget that when he ran again after having another man in that office for a second term.

Q.—Well, how much was he defeated by this wet? A.—I cannot give the figures, but it was—Senator, it was terrible.

"Are you a Republican or a Democrat?" Senator Reed asked.

"Yes, sir; I am a Republican," Mrs. Green responded with emphasis.

"Naturally, it was terrible to you," said the Senator. "But now what I want to get at is this, fairly. There was a battle there between two men for Governor, and all of the ordinary political issues entered into the campaign?"

"May I ask you to repeat the question?" the witness interposed.

"I say, there was a battle between two men for Governor, and all the ordinary political issues entered into the campaign I assume," said Senator Reed.

"I suppose so," said Mrs. Green.

"And one of them was the question of wet and dry. Now do you belong to the Anti-Saloon League?"

"I am affiliated with the Anti-Saloon League. I am a member of this dry maintenance league of Cuyahoga County and the Women's Christian Temperance Union."

"Now did those temperance organizations advise their members to vote one way or the other?"

"I cannot speak for all of the organizations. The Dry League of Cuyahoga County did."

Q.—In general, then, there was a battle between two political parties and the drys threw their strength supposedly all over to this Democrat, and that constituted the balance of power? That was the situation, was it? A.—May I remind the Senator how—Was not that the situation, frankly? A.—Well, I don't know that I would attempt to interpret the situation.

Q.—Very well, now I just want to ask you one or two questions about these figures. Is that the sheet, please? A.—Yes, sir.

Lively Exchange Over Figures.

"I notice," continued Senator Reed, "that for the year 1925 you have marked as arrests for drunkenness 6,406, which are exactly the figures that I have here in a tabulation before me. That, however, did not include, as I understand your figures, people who were arrested and locked up, but who were not prosecuted, who were let out under your Golden Rule plan. That is right, is it? You nod your head, the reporter must get it."

"I think probably that is right, yes," the witness replied.

"Yes, and so in any figures we may have for arrests we only have the figures from Cleveland of those who were prosecuted, that is, where they are marked as arrests, but those who got the benefit of the Golden Rule are not charged in the statistics as arrests; that is the situation is it not," said the Senator.

"Would you not think that would depend where the statistics came from?" asked Mrs. Green.

"Well, I am speaking about your statistics," Senator Reed replied.

"Yes," said Mrs. Green.

"I am simply trying to get at what my statistics may be." Senator Reed asserted. "They exactly check with yours in 1923 on what you give as arrests, that is 6,406. My figures—these figures that are laid before me, they are not my figures—do not they evidently, then, include those where they were locked up and then turned loose under the Golden Rule plan? Now you have here in your figures, however, in 1917, 3,150 prosecuted, whereas my figures only give 1,209. Have you checked your figures in any way from the official records?"

"They have been checked," said Mrs. Green.

"Well, as a matter of fact the probabilities are that the court records during those years were kept just the same as they were in other years. Is that not the real fact about it?" Senator Reed asked.

"I know that the police records of those years were very insure and unstable and changed. I do not mean the police records. I am not talking about the police records. I am talking about court records."

"I do not know, Senator," said Mrs. Green.

"Well, now, in 1923 there were 7,719 prosecutions and convictions for drunkenness in Cleveland and 15,730 people arrested, but not prosecuted, making a total of 23,439."

Differ on the Convictions.

"Senator," said Mrs. Green, "I did not understand that the first were convictions. I understood that that was the number of arrests."

Senator Reed—I understand them to be convictions. They were prosecuted. That is what you mean, is it not? By this list of prosecutions you mean convictions? A.—I would not say so.

Q.—You do not know? A.—I am not sure that they were all convictions, no, sir.

Q.—Anyway, they were taken to court? A.—Yes.

Q.—And the Golden Rule was not applied to them? A.—They do not Golden Rule them when they show that they are drunk but deny it. They come into court.

Q.—But when they admit it—then they are Golden Ruled? A.—Sometimes, according to the personal principles of the policeman.

Q.—And his principles vary, I suppose, as they do on ordinary police forces? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Well, I am not going to criticise your Golden Rule system. I know nothing about it. But, as a matter of fact, from 1917, taking your own figures, to 1923, taking your own figures, the difference between the prosecutions was the difference between 3,150 and 7,719? Does that argue to you at all that there had been some increase in drunkenness? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Oh! Oh! A.—We now arrest every man who sets drunk or looks drunk. In the old days the policeman was instructed to turn his head and not see a drunken man unless he was disorderly.

Q.—Now you arrest him whether he is disorderly or not? A.—I hope so.

Q.—That is the instruction? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—And when you take him down to the police station, if he will admit and say, 'Yes, I was drunk,' you turn him loose, but if he denies it you try him? A.—No, they sober him up first.

Q.—Then you try him. Suppose he was sober all the time, and the policeman made a mistake. If he denies that he was drunk, then the policeman, according to the policeman's light, turns him loose, and if he does not admit it, and if the policeman's judgment was right you would try him? A.—Try him, yes, sir.

EMERSON SUBMITS DATA.

"I have brought for evidence of the benefit of the reduction in the use of alcohol in New York," said Dr. Emerson, "charts showing the trend of mortality in certain diseases which are in some way either directly or indirectly related to the use of alcohol.

"I offer to you first the one dealing with the trend of cirrhosis of the liver, in which the trend is shown from the year 1900 to 1910; then from 1911 to 1917, from 1918 to 1921 and from 1922 to 1925, indicating that there was a decided change in the trend of mortality in cirrhosis of the liver beginning as far back as 1911, but that was carried to a low point in 1917 and still lower by 1921, since which time there has been some increase in the mortality from cirrhosis of the liver.

Senator Reed—I do not want to interrupt you if it will throw you off your theme at all, but at this point I am going to stand you, doctor, may I ask you this: Beginning in 1900, which was the high point, you give 24.7 per thousand? A.—Per hundred thousand. The chart showed that the death rate in 1900 was at the high point, 24.7 per 100,000.

Q.—Now that cause of death decreased from 1900 to 1910? A.—Yes.

Q.—So that in 1910 it was only 21.3 per hundred thousand. A.—Yes.

Q.—Beginning 1911, it showed 21.7. The decrease up to 1917 brought the figures down to 19.5 per hundred thousand? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now all of this period, of course, was before prohibition? A.—Correct

Senator Reed—That is evidence, you think, of diminution in the use of alcohol from 1919 to 1923? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What is your evidence of no increased use of alcohol among these cases in the years 1925 and 1924 when the deaths ran up to 134.5, and in the year 1925, when it ran up to the astounding figure again of 250? A.—That alcohol is available again as it was in the past.

Q.—How do you know that? A.—Because the same kind of people are coming into Bellevue Hospital, and they state that they can get it.

Q.—So, then the lesson that we get out of these figures is, after all, that one can get booze in New York City today about as easy as he could before prohibition? A.—That is one of the lessons.

Q.—Yes, that is one lesson.

Senator Walsh—And the other obvious lesson is that when they cannot get it there is a very great reduction in deaths.

Senator Reed—That there are not so many of them who die from it, of course.

Senator Walsh—Yes.

Doctor Emerson—My profession is the study of the causes of preventable diseases, and how they may be prevented, and this was the first practical evidence we have ever had of the astounding effect of making alcohol relatively inaccessible on the mortality of the country.

Senator Reed—Of course, we will all admit, and I do not want to argue with you, but it seems quite obvious that if nobody ever got drunk nobody would ever die from alcoholism. That would follow, I think.

Refers to Conditions Abroad.

For comparative purposes Dr. Emerson said it was interesting to note the experience of England and Wales from 1913 to 1923, when he said the decline of alcoholism showed also a decline of deaths from cirrhosis of the liver. He said the ratio was about the same as in the United States.

"They have no prohibition in England and Wales," remarked Senator Reed.

"Anybody who happened to be in England during the war," replied Dr. Emerson, "saw liquors very effectively controlled by the limitation of food supplies and other administration measures, both in the army and out, so that although what we speak of in America as prohibition was not accomplished in England and Wales. There were periods of tremendous reductions in production and use of alcohol from 1913 on, and largely reflected, even when there is a relative reduction in the use of alcohol, in important changes in mortality rates.

"All that I have to offer to you is the evidence that with every reduction in the use of alcohol there is an improvement in the health of the people, practically at all ages, and contributing also to a reduction in the number of deaths of almost all kinds."

"I am not criticizing you," Senator Reed explained, "but if in a town there was a saloon for every 1,000 people there ought not be any difficulty in the people who want to get liquor finding it, ought there?"

"That depends upon the number of hours such places are open, and the number of days of the week they are open," Dr. Emerson answered.

"Suppose they are open every day in the week except Sunday, and are open ten and twelve hours a day, that would give the people a chance to get liquor, every man who really wanted to get drunk could get liquor, could he not?" Senator Reed asked.

"That was not the situation that prevailed through England," replied Dr. Emerson. "They were open only a short number of hours in the day."

"But I want you to take my hypothesis and answer the question," said Mr. Reed.

"Yes, if there was a saloon to every 1,000 inhabitants, and such saloons were open ten or twelve hours during the day, I should say that under such conditions there ought to be no difficulty for anybody with the money to get liquor," said Dr. Emerson.

Senator Reed wanted to know if Dr. Emerson had any figures to submit as to the prevalence of venereal diseases before and after prohibition. Dr. Emerson said he had no records which he considered adequate on that subject. The only evidence he had was a decrease shown in reports made to some 900 dispensaries in various parts of the country. In cities where it is mandatory that records of such diseases be reported there has been a decrease.

"You do not attribute this condition to the decrease in alcohol but to the increase in clinical facilities?" said Senator Reed.

"The only evidence as to the relation of these diseases to alcohol are the writings of Colonel George Walker of the A. E. F. He gives the relationship clearly and more authoritatively than can be given in civil life."

Q.—So you find that when a man gets drunk he is more likely to have the misfortune we are referring to? A.—Not only that, they are more likely to become infected; but the use of alcohol determines the particular other infection in a large number of cases.

Q.—Since there has been an increase in the use of alcohol we must conclude there has been an increase in this disease. A.—I would say it would be it accepted any way that wherever alcohol is accessible we shall find an increase in the incidence of venereal disease.

QUESTIONED ON DEATHS.

"Then, since prohibition has ceased to be effective," said Senator Reed, "you are having this increase in deaths from drunkenness and these reports made to you of the ease with which liquor can now be obtained."

"In these parts of the country where the notable increase to pre-prohibition flow of alcohol has occurred," Dr. Emerson answered, "I think it can be shown that if we had responsible records of venereal diseases there has been very little different situation than this parallel increase with the use of alcohol."

"So that the breaking down of efficient enforcement in these parts of the country where it has broken down," said Senator Reed, "is attended by all these evils."

"It would be destructive," said Dr. Emerson. "I have no evidence, but I take it for granted that would occur, on account of the experiences in the army and elsewhere, but I am not offering any proof of that."

Senator Reed—How about the increase in the drug habit? A.—There is no evidence of any increase in the drug habit, in the contrary there is pretty good evidence of a decrease.

Q.—There is pretty strict enforcement of the drug law, is there not? A.—I suppose, of all the laws of the country that are most difficult to enforce would be those that deal with drugs.

Q.—I suppose it is difficult. But as a matter of fact the officers are pretty keen on the track of those drug addicts, and are doing all they can to suppress it? A.—I would say that a very efficient and honest effort has been made to control the illegal traffic in narcotic drugs.

Q.—And the percentage of convictions, do you happen to know, have been very large in the narcotic cases? A.—I believe that was the case. I believe that they have been very successful.

Q.—You think there has not been an increase in the use of narcotics? A.—I do not believe there has been any evidence of any increase, although there is some evidence that there has been a decrease.

Q.—I am glad to hear it.

"In view of the fact that you find so many people dying from liquor," said Senator Reed, "and reporting that they can get it readily, you are not prepared to say that prohibition has been very effectively enforced in the City of New York more particularly, I will say."

"I should like to make this comment on it," said Dr. Emerson, "that if taken organized, commercialized distribution of alcohol to give those opportunities on which venereal disease particularly depends, I will say that surreptitious and hidden sources of supply do not give the opportunities for public assembly, which are necessary for the development of immorality as it is usually spoken of in connection with the origin of venereal disease.

"Therefore," continued Dr. Emerson, "in spite of the fact that alcohol may have increased in amount, the very fact that it is under cover and cannot be used as freely as before in places of public assembly, has undoubtedly contributed to a prevention of venereal disease."

"If the liquor is so distributed," said Senator Reed, "that the poor charwoman and truck driver who come to your place have come back in such numbers that you have found a number of deaths, that the number is substantially near the high point of the past, do you say in those circumstances that there is not plenty of opportunity for people to get liquor and to drink it and thus place themselves in condition where all the evils that come from drinking naturally follow in the wake, or that substantially follow in the wake of drinking?"

"No," replied Dr. Emerson. "I should say, from having lived in New York all my life and seen the workings and development of immorality through the saloon, that such workings as commercializes the distribution of liquor have of themselves played an important part in the past in tending toward disease infection, and that so far as the increased use of liquor is not on a wholesale, commercialized scale in the public, there is less of that diversion of youth to practices of immorality than before."

Calls Crime Conditions Better.

"How is it about general crime conditions in New York. Are not they worse than before?" asked Senator Reed.

"I am not a criminologist," replied Dr. Emerson, "but I have been for years the director of an Association for the Relief of the Poor, under private auspices, and I think the opinion is unanimous that there is no crime wave, that there is no important increase in the causes of dependency; and the fact that family dependency is less than it was before—and figures similar to those for Cleveland may be easily secured for New York City, Boston, Philadelphia and other places—shows that there is an improved situation, I think."

"You cannot say," said Senator Reed, "whether this increase in the sale of liquor which has occurred in 1925 and which you stated a little while ago indicated laxity in the enforcement of the law, you cannot tell us whether that has increased crime or not or whether crime has increased as an incident of it."

"I cannot tell you," the witness replied, "from anything I know that there are any more violations of the law, whether there were any more in 1925 in New York than there were in 1922 or 1923 per 100,000 of population."

"So, although drinking was to very low three or four years ago," said Senator Reed, "and has now mounted again to this alarming extent that 250 deaths occurred in your place, you cannot say that crime has increased?"

"I have no access to those records," said Dr. Emerson, "and I do not know of any responsible authority which I could quote at the moment."

Walsh Shows Population Gain.

Senator Walsh asked if there had not been a considerable increase in population in New York City from 1916 to 1926. Dr. Emerson replied in the affirmative.

Senator Walsh—Can you tell us about how much that increase has been? As the population in 1916—well, the trouble there is, Senator, any quotations of the population of the City of New York would not be wholly applicable, because in the last five years there has been a loss of 300,000 of population in the Borough of Manhattan alone. Therefore the shift in population outside of the range of Bellevue Hospital service may be such as to show a smaller population instead of a larger, whereas the population of the City of New York as a whole has increased from approximately 5,000,000 to 5,900,000 during this period. But I could not be sure that the population served by Bellevue Hospital had shared equally in that increase.

STATEMENT BY WHEELER.

At the opening of the afternoon session Wayne B. Wheeler made his first official appearance in the proceedings. This was to offer for the record the statement bearing on the program of the advocates of a modification of the Volstead law.

"The proposer of 2.75 per cent. beer," said Mr. Wheeler, "admits that it may be unconstitutional and that he himself does not believe it would appease the opposition to prohibition.

"There is no justification for changing the present law, which is constitutional, for a substitute measure of doubtful constitutionality and generally recognized ineffectiveness. No precedent for making the standard 'non-intoxicating in fact,' as proposed by Senator Elder, was suggested by him. Public officials and courts have often held that this means non-enforcibility. This is evidently what the wets want. Until the proposers of this change demonstrate that this amendment would result in better law enforcement, they have not made a case justifying favorable consideration.

"Senator Edge admitted on the floor of the Senate that he could not conceive of a non-intoxicating wine, which cancels his statement to the committee that to legalize light wines and beers to constitutional limits would greatly decrease the bootleggers's trade. No non-intoxicating beverages would meet bootleg competition. Only strict enforcement will do that.

"The proposal to permit each State to define intoxicating liquor and to have a Federal law conform to the standard in the State is simply another dodge to evade the Constitution. No State could legalize intoxicating liquor under the amendment and the change would be ineffectual to legalize booze. It would destroy the uniform application of the Constitution and increase the difficulties of enforcement. It is a species of nullification.

Calls Bruce Plan Un-Democratic.

"The undemocratic proposal of Senator Bruce to amend the Constitution by creating a Government control system which would make it impossible for either Congress or the States to adopt prohibition legislation, except in those States now having prohibition in their State Constitutions, would reverse every principle of our Government. Congress is given, by the Bruce proposal, supreme power to enforce his amendment. No city ordinance or State law could be passed even to regulate the liquor traffic unless Congress approved.

"Invasion of dry territory by wet shipments would be left to 'discretion of Congress,' in the words of the Senator. This proposed measure strips from the people their rights of self-government and their self-defense against the liquor traffic. It would make the Federal Government and not the people the source of power.

"Nor could give to this traffic a constitutional right it has never enjoyed and would perpetuate it indefinitely. It would also re-establish the Government in the liquor business and would tax citizens of dry States to finance this new department.

"The local option provision in the measure has a joker which would prevent residents in any community from barring the saloon unless the State Legislature approved. A wet majority of one in a single branch of the Legislature could prevent this approval.

"The failure of Government control in all Canadian Provinces where it has been tried, its inability to eliminate bootleg competition, its responsibility for increasing the alcoholic appetite, its introduction of liquor into the homes, its fostering of vice and red-light sections, its restoration of the liquor interests to political power, and its consequences in bringing back the legal sale of hard liquors all argue against this nation adopting any such discredited policy of surrender to the liquor traffic.

"Many States in this country tried without success the dispensary system before prohibition was adopted.

Attacks Referendum Proposal.

"The advisory referendum on prohibition asked in the Edge reservation is unauthorized by the Constitution, would have binding force, requests Governors of States to perform tasks not required by Constitutional authority or State law, and would transfer their functions to mail carriers and census takers.

"It is unnecessary, since many grave questions of national concern have been settled by proper legislative action without such a referendum. The next Congress will probably be as intelligent as its predecessors.

"A dangerous precedent would be established if members of Congress avoid their responsibility for action by requesting an opinion from the people on proposed legislation. The Congressional elections where issues are raised are the only true and dependable referendum.

"The removal of the present limitation on prescriptions for medicinal liquors would serve no good purpose and would increase the ease with which unethical physicians could furnish bootleggers with supplies of liquor. Such action by Congress would not affect twenty-three States and one Territory, where whisky, wine, &c., cannot be prescribed because of local law. During the last year such data was compiled 94 per cent. of physicians of New York and Illinois issued one-half of all the prescriptions in the United States for medicinal liquor.

Recalls Vote Among Physicians.

"Over 80 per cent. of the retail druggists have voted to petition Congress to relieve them of the responsibility of dispensing liquor on prescriptions. In a questionnaire sent to 58,900 physicians by the American Medical Association in 1921, asking their opinion of whisky and wine in medical practice, 31,115 replied, of which number 49 per cent. opposed the use of whisky and 63 per cent. opposed wine.

"Only 2 per cent. voted for an increase in the present limit of 100 prescriptions of liquor in three months.

"The measure introduced by Senator Goff, at the request of the prohibition unit, will strengthen the national prohibition act, and it should be adopted. It gives more control of cereal beverage plants; it authorizes search warrants for private residences used for distilling liquor in commercial quantities and for commercial purposes; it provides a speedier method for disposing of contraband liquor that has been seized and forfeited; it gives a better control of denatured alcohol and will aid law enforcement. The best way to answer the challenge that the law cannot be enforced is for Congress to provide the legal machinery to stop lawlessness.

CHURCHES OPPOSE MILDER LAW

At this point Frank J. Harwood, Moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches in the United States, submitted a resolution from the Executive Committee of that Church against modifying the Volstead act, which read:

"The Executive Committee of the National Council of Congregational Churches in the United States believes that the membership of those churches in overwhelming majority are in substantial accord in their belief that any present modification of the Volstead act, such as is now proposed, or any modification whatever formulated and advocated by those agencies now proposing the repeal or amendment of that act, is opposed to the moral sentiment and best interests of the American people."

After presenting resolutions from congregational conferences in various parts of the United States, Mr. Harwood said:

"I want to say, as a manufacturer, that I see the benefit to our employes in the prohibition law. We have a mill full of automobiles, and some of the employes have no hesitancy in saying that they credit it to prohibition. That the money that used to go into saloons has been going into cars. They are using them for the benefit of their families.

"Before prohibition I do not remember of ever seeing a milk wagon in our mill yard. Every morning there are three or four milk wagons there, and the men are using milk in place of beer. I believe we are getting better work by that process. I think every manager in the town would testify along that line."

BISHOP DARLINGTON'S VIEWS.

"My diocese," he said, "is as large in extent as Delaware, New Jersey, Connecticut and Rhode Island put together—a little larger in extent. Part of it contains not all but, some of the coal regions of Pennsylvania, so I know something about mining conditions.

"My ministerial life has been spent twenty-five years as rector of Christ Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., and archdeacon of Brooklyn, and also twenty-one years in Pennsylvania.

"Yesterday we had a meeting of one section of our diocese and upon my telling them I was summoned here they voted unanimously to say the strictest prohibition that could be had, without any change whatever, without any letting up, only better enforcement, was what they needed. That represented about one-fourth of these people.

"We have had the greatest strike that I have known in twenty-one years in Pennsylvania, in the coal mines. We had two or three before the coming in of prohibition. In each case there have been outrages—people injured; property burned and destroyed and a great deal of disturbance. I have been beside one saloonkeeper's boy when in an attack on some building he was shot through the stomach. These outrages occurred at such times.

"But this time we had the longest strike I have known in twenty-five years there, that continued six months. With the earnest effort for enforcement by Governor Pinchot, who has done everything he could, and the State Police under Major Adams, the prohibition law has been excellently enforced. I would not say it was impossible in some places to get a drink, but it was very well enforced.

Lauds Catholic Church Support.

"Father Curran of the Roman Catholic Church of Wilkes-Barre will bear me out in this. I want to pay tribute to the Roman Catholic Church for what they have done to help this cause. Some people have taken the view that they have been opposed to it, but in my personal experience I can say many of them have aided most earnestly and effectively. My own neighbor and good friend, Bishop McDavitt, will not confirm anybody under twenty-one years of age unless he pledges total abstinence from wine, beer, cider or any intoxicant. That Roman Catholic Bishop will not confirm any one under twenty-one years without that pledge.

"Now during that strike we have not had one outrage reported to the police. I have been in Mount Carmel, Shamokin and all these places. There have not been any outrages, and it is the only time this condition has prevailed. While there has been a great deal of hard feeling, very great suffering, a great many bread lines, and there were threats to make trouble, to damage property and injure persons, there has been no outrage at all. That is due mostly to prohibition.

States His Church's Position.

That the position of the Episcopal Church might be clear, Bishop Darlington said the authoritative bodies of the Church were the House of Bishops and General Convention, which met once in three years. He then read this resolution, passed unanimously at New Orleans in October, when 144 Bishops were present:

"Resolved, That facing the danger of the spirit of lawlessness in American life, we welcome the renewed effort of the Government of the United States to enforce, strictly and impartially, the prohibition laws and the anti-narcotic laws, which are so widely and cynically disregarded."

Bishop Darlington interjected:

"I want to say about the narcotics that we find this—that narcotics, instead of increasing with prohibition have fallen off about one-half. Some of us thought that people would go to narcotics with the stopping of liquor, that they would go to heroin and these other drugs, but we find that that is not true.

"We have found," continued Bishop Darlington, "that they got them in the saloons, and that with the closing of the saloons the use of narcotics has fallen off about one-half."

He then continued with the resolution: "And we call upon the people of our Church to set a good example of that obedience to law without which no democracy can endure."

"I want prohibition as it is, although better enforced, but everyone should be warned against the return of beer, which would inevitably bring back the saloon," said Bishop Darlington in conclusion.

Pennoyer Opposes Beer.

The Rev. Charles H. Pennoyer, D.D., Director General of the Convention Branch of the Social Welfare Department of the Universalist Church, came next.

"To allow the sale of beer would be the entering wedge for the miserable old saloon," he stated, and insisted that to change the law would prove nothing for or against prohibition.

Senator Goff asked him if he had recently said that increase of immorality was not due to prohibition. The witness said the increase had not been so large as estimated, but that what increase there was was largely because "the youth of the land were not adjusted to the new liberty."

"What do you mean by that?" queried Senator Goff.

"The new relations between young man and young women, the greater freedom of women in dress and activities," he replied.

"You mean the mutual attractiveness for each other," Senator Goff suggested.

"The willingness among the young to talk over the relations of life," added the witness. He said two most dangerous of homes were those which were too strict and those too lax.

LABOR EDITOR QUESTIONED.

Edward Keating, former member of the House from Colorado and now the editor of Labor, the next witness, emphasized that he spoke only for himself. This statement was again brought to the fore at the close of his testimony, when Senator Harreld asked him what the views of the labor unions were on prohibition.

"I have absolutely no desire," Mr. Keating replied, "to question the authority of the gentlemen who represented labor organizations at the opening of these hearings."

The witnesses in question had all asked for modification of the Volstead law.

Senator Harreld pressed Mr. Keating for a personal opinion of labor's attitude, but Mr. Keating said: "That is a controversy I prefer not to go into."

For himself, the editor said he was an ardent prohibitionist. He said that twenty years of newspaper experience in Colorado forced him to become one. Relating efforts to close "ladies entrances" of saloons in Denver years ago, he said reformers, even in those days, were called blue nose fanatics, and the same charge was made when it was attempted to shut the saloons on Sundays.

"I reluctantly became a prohibitionist," he went on. "I was not born one, but when I became convinced no law could regulate the liquor interests, there was only one thing to do—outlaw it."

Of course, there had been difficulty in enforcing national prohibition, said Mr. Keating, but this was only to be expected with a new law.

CHERINGTON OFFERS FIGURES.

The next witness, Ernest H. Cherington, General Secretary of the World League Against Alcohol, read a statement containing many figures.

Sixty-six out of ninety-six Senators, and 70 per cent. of the House, he said, represented prohibition territory at the time the amendment was passed. Six wet States could have prevented ratification through their Representatives in the lower house, he asserted.

Mr. Cherington disputed the idea that college morale had broken down since prohibition and that drinking was prevalent on campuses. He said that at Ohio State University a canvass of 10,000 students showed conditions better than ever known there, according to the President of that institution.

Quoting Mr. Buckner's statement that it would cost $75,000,000 to enforce prohibition in New York State, Mr. Cherington said this would be "small" as contrasted with $1,500,000 proposed to be spent in the days of 1794 to enforce laws against distillers. The United States now spends annually $700,000,000 for the army and navy, so he thought it could spend more than $10,000,000 to fight for prohibition.

"The Government was spending slightly more than one-half of 1 per cent. of its revenue for prohibition, but this might be increased to 2.75 per cent., or $100,000,000," he argued.

Louisville Man Called.

The final witness was Colonel Patrick H. Callahan of Louisville, who appeared not only to tell of that city's progress under prohibition but as Secretary of the Association of Catholics for Prohibition.

Colonel Callahan gave arrests for drunkenness in Louisville as 6,172 in 1919 and 2,462 in 1924.

Colonel Callahan was questioned about the Kentucky dry law before prohibition. He described it as tighter than the Webb-Kenyon law.

"Didn't your State law let citizens bring in liquor for their own use?" asked Senator Reed.

"I believe so."

"You are the Secretary of the Association of Catholics for Prohibition?" asked the Senator.

"Yes," was the reply.

Senator Reed—How many are in your association? A.—Three hundred and twenty.

Q.—What is the Catholic population of the United States? A.—Between eighteen and nineteen million.

Senator Walsh—Is opinion on prohibition divided among members of the Catholic hierarchy? A.—Yes.

A sharp challenge to Colonel Callahan's figures on arrests for drunkenness was made by Senator Reed. Colonel Callahan had said 6,172 in 1919 and 2,462 in 1924, but Senator Reed produced figures which he said were from Police Chiefs, showing the Louisville arrests for drunkenness as: 1919, 4,632, and 1924, 3,201. Colonel Callahan said his figures were prepared by a special clerk, with the aid of the Police Chief, and were checked by Mayor Quinn of Louisville.

The hearing then adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow.

JUDGE IS CRITICAL IN WILLIAMS CASE

SHARP QUESTIONS ASKED

Special to The New York Times.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 16.—Impatience was expressed today by Rear Admiral Thomas Washington, President of the court-martial, at the conduct of the trial, when the defense moved to have certain parts of Captain Charles E. Rice's rebuttal testimony stricken from the records.

"The Court regrets being forced to ascertain facts themselves," said the President. "The Court has, for the last day and a half of the trial, been doing most of the questioning of witnesses, after both defense and prosecution rested their cases."

The Admiral said that the prosecution did not seem to be able to bring out testimony, and the defense may not have wanted certain testimony that the Court needed to reach a decision just to the parties and the Government. The Court was willing to give the accused every benefit of any doubt, declared the President.

This came up following the testimony this morning of Captain Rice, who declared that because the Colonel acted "unsteady" at the hotel he could find no reason to explain it other than that the accused was drunk.

This, he said, is why he told General Butler that he thought Colonel Williams was drunk the night of March 6, after the General had asked him to make a statement.

Declares Cocktails Innocuous.

"There might have been liquor in the cocktails, said Rice; they tasted like it. But a man could have drunk a dozen and not felt the effects, he declared.

He also heard the Colonel tell one of the guests that he, the Colonel, was not drinking anything that evening, said Rice.

"I do not consider that my statement was made to the General under duress," said Rice. "I couldn't say he was sober when he didn't act like it."

The Captain said that he took the Colonel in his car to the hotel, and that there was nothing in the Colonel's actions during the ride to lead him to believe the Colonel was drunk. It was not until after they reached the hotel that the accused showed any unsteadiness, he declared.

The Captain said that the cocktails were all right, but that the Colonel might have gone into the kitchen for something else to drink.

This was objected to by the defense as purely a conclusion of the witness, and it was after this objection that the Court expressed impatience at the eliciting of testimony by the attorneys.

Cates Recalled to Stand.

Captain Clifton B. Yates testified this morning for the third time. The Court asked him to explain what he meant when he told General Butler, according to the General's testimony yesterday, "of course I didn't smell his (the Colonel's) breath, but you know why."

General Butler maintained that Cates meant that he had been drinking, too, and couldn't smell the Colonel's breath.

Cates this morning declared that he really said to the General:

"I did not see the accused take a drink nor did I smell liquor on his breath, as you well know." Meaning by "as you well know" that the General knew this because of Cates's former statement.

Changed Statement to Include Drunk.

The witness said that following the General's order to junior officers to "stop equivocating and make new statements," he changed his first statement where he said the Colonel was "unsteady on his feet at the hotel" to read, "he acted like a man drunk, sick or doped."

A colored maid who served the cocktails at the party on March 6 at the home of Colonel Alexander Williams may be called as a witness in the court-martial of the marine officer, it was indicated today, as the case reached a point where its continuance into next week seemed probable. This maid is expected to know and to tell what form of intoxicant the cocktails contained, if any.

14 PLACES ARE PADLOCKED.

Marco Polo Night Club Consents to Stay Closed for Six Months.

Fourteen padlock decrees were issued yesterday by Federal Judge Francis A. Winslow in padlock court. Seven places were ordered padlocked for one year and six for six months.

The Marco Polo Club, Inc., at 204 West Fortieth Street, run by George B. Berrittal, consented to a six months' closure. This is a social club and restaurant, which occupies two floors. It has been patronized liberally by after-theatre parties. During a raid a large quantity of assorted liquors was seized.

The restaurant and cabaret known as the Original Oriental Village, at 49 East Seventh Street, Greenwich Village, was ordered padlocked for one year. It was operated by Sidney Paul and Joe Dekker. A one-year decree was issued against the Stadelman Hotel, at 61 Main Street, Poughkeepsie. Mrs. Augusta W. Stadelman, owner, contested the charge, but agents testified she had sold them liquor.

Dry Graft Accuser Himself Indicted.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 16.—J. D. Wyrick of Fountain City, whose charges of corruption and graft in prohibition enforcement in Knoxville and East Tennessee were read at the Congressional prohibition inquiry in Washington yesterday, is himself under indictment in Federal court here, as a moonshiner, according to Federal District Attorney George C. Taylor. Wyrick was arrested on May 6, 1925, with two other alleged moonshiners at a still.

DRY LEAGUE TO ACT TODAY ON ANDREWS

BUT SOME FAVOR DELAY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The Anti-Saloon League of America and some of the other dry organizations have delayed temporarily the decision as to whether they shall seek to unseat General Lincoln C. Andrews, head of the Federal prohibition forces, because he testified before the Senate committee on Wednesday that he believed distribution of beer under Government control would aid in the enforcement of prohibition.

A meeting of directors of the Anti-Saloon League tomorrow will give further consideration to the question, go over the testimony of General Andrews and dissect the supplemental statement he made yesterday, in which he stuck to his testimony, but declared he was in no sense an advocate of modification of the Volstead act which would make beer available to the people.

An official of the Anti-Saloon League also said tonight that a flood of complaints about the testimony of General Andrews had been coming into the league headquarters from all parts of the country, not only from branches of the league in the various communities, but other dry organizations and individuals. He admitted that the protests were numerous and some of them of a pretty fiery kind, and that the Andrews testimony apparently had had very wide consumption and displeased the drys.

Attention was called by this leader to the address made to the Women's National Conference for Law Enforcement here on Tuesday as representing what the drys thought ought to be the attitude of the Federal enforcement officers as opposed to the views expressed in the testimony of General Andrews.

Attorney General Sargent, he said, in the opinion of the drys, made it known in no uncertain terms that he did not feel any one who believed in modification and worked to that end was fit to be among the Federal enforcement officers. He said:

"There is no room for discussion as to what the voters of the country have said.

"There is no half-way place in the commands they have placed upon their servants chosen and appointed to administer the law."

These phrases, the Anti-Saloon League leaders contend, formed a perfect and all-inclusive text for a sermon on how they believe the officers of the Federal Government should enforce the Volstead act. To wander from such a course is a sin to them.

That much the dry leaders made plain, although they were not willing to come out today in a formal statement.

Some of the leaders say that in view of the supplemental statement made by General Andrews and the additional steps he made it known today he hopes to take to fight the illicit beer and industrial alcohol interests if Congress gave him the money, it might be better to await later developments.

They expect to decide tomorrow or Monday.

General Andrews took the criticism very quietly today. He had a talk with Secretary Mellon, but neither would comment. Andrews then issued a statement about his enforcement plans, in which he made no reference to the controversy stirred up by his testimony, and left the city for a breathing spell.

There have been rumors for some time that General Andrews would resign, but he has not commented on such reports. The present flare-up has revived these rumors. There is ill-concealed interest here as to what steps the Anti-Saloon League and other dry organizations will take in the next few days as a result of the General's testimony.

That he would quit under fire of the league, without being pressed to do so by the Administration, is not believed by those who know him. What attitude the Administration will take if the fight flares up is another question. The answer is being awaited with great interest in political circles.

SEEK BRITISH TREATY TO CUT OFF LIQUOR

WASHINGTON, April 16 (A).—The Government is attempting to place another stumbling block in the path of rum smugglers by supplementing its liquor treaty with Great Britain to prevent the exportation from the British Isles of liquor intended for Rum Row.

Informal conferences between the State Department and British officials have laid the groundwork for such negotiations, and if President Coolidge approves it is planned to send a mission to London this Summer to frame a treaty.

It is likely that Assistant Secretary Andrews of the Treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement, would accompany State Department officials, with William R. Vallance representing the State Department, of which he is Assistant Solicitor. General Andrews and Mr. Vallance recently participated in the negotiations of a similar treaty with Cuba.

It is believe the Administration is prepared to enter into a reciprocal agreement with Great Britain to prohibit exportation from this country of any goods considered contraband by other Governments.

Prohibition officials also are understood to be seeking an agreement which would permit American officials to search ships in the British West Indies. The present liquor treaty gives them power to search British vessels inside the twelve-mile limit.

as will enable them to meet their needs promptly and advantageously.

"The breweries also operate without regard to district lines, and we want to organize at once a Federal squad, extremely mobile, consisting of experts in this line for the supervision of these breweries. We believe we can thus keep these breweries from putting out any real beer—and this has been an impossibility heretofore. Plans are under way and only funds are necessary for the completion.

Would Be Self-Supporting.

"I consider this very important. This phase of enforcement has never been properly developed. We have tried our plan out in individual cases and are satisfied that a small board, organized at each administrator's headquarters, by specialising on this work can readily assess taxes and collect them in amounts to more than pay the entire cost of the prohibition unit. The illegal liquor traffic conducts a business involving many millions a month, and we should be able to collect taxes on such business as we have discovered and proved to have been conducted—and the collections should be sufficient to make law enforcement self-supporting.

"For instance, we deprived this traffic of over a million gallons in February in the Philadelphia district alone. These million gallons, sold at retail, represent at least $50,000,000 collected by bootleggers. If we succeed in collecting the tax on only a small proportion of that business we will have produced a considerable revenue.

"As diversion of alcohol is stopped, its illicit manufacture will increase—and I am very anxious to get this phase of enforcement thoroughly established and successfully under way in order to meet this new source and tax it. We need only the additional funds asked for in order to accomplish this.

"During last Fall we had as many as 150 prohibition agents working with customs men as border patrol men. They were extremely efficient in stopping smuggling across the borders. The very material reduction of rum row smuggling naturally increased smuggling through Canada and furthermore scattered the smuggling to border fronts. We now have 900 prohibition agents thus engaged, and our plans for this year require an additional 255 patrolmen.

"These men are used exclusively to strengthen the patrolling features of the work undertaken by the Collectors of Customs to 'seal our fronts.' I consider them essential to efficient work in stopping smuggling. If the proposed law for the organization of a United States border patrol becomes a law, we contemplate that these patrolmen will be absorbed in that force. They will all be selected from the civil service list with this in view.

Asks for More Investigators.

"Our headquarters investigating force is engaged exclusively on intelligence and interdistrict investigations, getting evidence against large operators, particularly those engaged in widespread conspiracies to violate the prohibition laws. This is an essential link in our organization to break up the liquor traffic. Its work is not spectacular, but its results will be tremendously efficient in actually stopping this business. I must increase this force to cover the whole field, and after considerable study believe that twenty-eight additional men are necessary.

"Our plans contemplate the thorough review during the entire year of all permittees. These run as high as 16,000 in the largest district, and this represents a tremendous amount of skilled work in the majority of the districts. To make this work efficient the inspectors must be trained, reliable men, and it is contemplated to build this force up largely with pharmacists from the civil service list. Their work will result in eliminating thousands of improper permittees and will thus reduce the present illegitimate distribution of liquor very materially.

"We are convinced that strengthening this force of inspectors materially will not only reduce the present illegitimate distribution, but will enable the administration to function much more satisfactorily in their administrative work in the permissive field. This should be reflected in making the enforcement of this law much more satisfactory to the public in general.

"Our policy of encouraging the cooperation of local authorities and thus reducing the amount of police work to be done by Federal agents is gradually becoming effective. We are thus using more and more under cover agents who operate in making important cases and we need authority for the employment of fifty-one additional investigators to be assigned to administrators for this purpose. These men must be of superior experience and ability and have to be paid accordingly.

"We are satisfied that the Federal function in law enforcement will be much better done through the use of work and are anxious to get them on established basis and that this policy may be made effective.

More Clerks Also Wanted.

"We are also asking for thirty-six additional clerks to handle the additional work in the Administrator's office made necessary by our increased activities in the permissive field.

"We are satisfied that our present plans, aimed directly at the elimination of the large sources of supply and at the present means of distribution will result in relieving the courts rather than in an increase of the already overburdened court rosters. The whole organization is being set up to carry out these policies, and Federal agents are becoming less and less of a policeman type and more and more of the trained investigator type.

"Both in the criminal field and in the matter of conducting inspections of permittees, etc., this organization may become as efficient as contemplated, and if put on a civil service status, as seems most likely, it is hoped that within a year it will have become an efficient, businesslike organization for carrying out the Federal function in prohibition law enforcement."

A point d'Alençon lace jabot, 18 by 12 inches, given by the Empress Maria Thérèse to her daughter Marie Antoinette, Queen of France, brought $3,700 yesterday at a sale of only a few pieces of rare lace, important Gobelin and Flemish tapestries, rugs and bronzes from the collection of J. J. Albright, Count Scherametiew, Baron Ropp and others at the Anderson Galleries. It went to Karl Freund, who also bid in for $2,750 a volante of rose point lace presented to la Marquise de Prie by Louis XV.

The point d'Alençon has the figure of the Empress, with flying amorini holding a crown, from which flowers drop over her. The detail includes mounted hunters and huntresses, garden pavilions, birds, deer, hounds and heraldic birds. The lace flounnce is point de France worked in Venetian fashion with fleurs volantes, the petalled flowers in low relief in continuous arabesque design united by stalks.

The rare Gobelin tapestries go on sale today, with the exception of one Gobelin, Jardin des Plantes, after a cartoon by Jacques Bailly, 10 feet high by 9 feet 4 inches wide which was bid in by E. J. Murray for $3,000. It is composed architecturally as a colonnar opening through which can be seen the trees and foliage of the Jardin des Plantes. It is elaborate with tiny figures, birds, animals and other details.

M. Golds paid $2,900 for an Abusson tapestry panel, The Muletier. A fine William and Mary winged sofa, covered with petit point needlework, was bid in by M. Philipp for $2,200. The same buyer paid $1,800 for a pair of Renaissance walnut arm chairs covered with sixteenth century Flemish tapestry. Mr. Philipp also paid $1,600 for a Renaissance walnut settee covered with similar tapestry, all being from the Albright collection. E. F. Collins, agent, bought a late seventeenth century Flemish verdure tapestry panel for $1,050. A Barye bronze group, Tiger Killing Fawn, brought $1,100 on "order" and another Barye, Tiger Attacking Stag, also went on "order" for $1,600.

The session's total was $34,675.50. The final sale is this afternoon.

REVERE OFFICER CLEARED.

Boston Merchant Admits Liquor Charges Were False.

BOSTON, April 16 (A).—Lieutenant Thomas J. O'Hare of the Revere police was found not guilty of conspiracy to sell liquor and accepting a bribe, by a jury in Superior Court today. Frank Vesce, jointly indicted with O'Hare for conspiracy, also was acquitted.

Vesce, proprietor of a candy and cigar store, testified that he lied when he told Mayor Welsh of Revere that he gave O'Hare $50 "bribe money" because he thought "it would be a good idea to get O'Hare off the liquor squad."

Mrs. Stella Giangiulio, who pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charge and turned State's evidence, admitted that she had been convicted of liquor selling. She had described paying alleged "protection money."

MARION W. WALTON, SCULPTOR, MARRIES

LOUISE STEMME A BRIDE

Married to Joseph M. Moore by Rev. J. A. Smith in St. Stephen's Church—Other Nuptials.

The marriage of Miss Marion Wetherill Walton, daughter of Mrs. Ernest Forster Walton of Lawrence Park, Bronxville, to Arthur James Putnam of 64 West Ninth Street took place yesterday in the bride's studio, 16 West Eighth Street. Only a few relatives and friends were present.

Miss Walton was graduated from the Brearley School and was a member of the class of '21 at Bryn Mawr. She served with Miss Anne Morgan's committee in France, and since then has studied sculpture here and abroad.

Mr. Putnam is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Henry Putnam of Deposit, N. Y. He was graduated from Cornell in 1914 and served during the war as a Captain with the American Expeditionary Forces in France and was twice decorated with the Croix de Guerre. He is associated with the MacMillan Company, publishers.

Mr. and Mrs. Putnam have left on a short wedding trip, and when they return they will make their home in West Eighth Street.

Moore—Stemme.

Miss Louise Stemme, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stemme of 1 West Seventy-second Street, was married to Joseph M. Moore yesterday afternoon in St. Stephen's Church, West Sixty-ninth Street near Broadway. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. James A. Smith of Westfield, N. J., assisted by the rector of the church, the Rev. Dr. Nathan A. Seagle. The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a gown of white satin embroidered in pearls. Her tulle veil fell from a cap of old point lace, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Stemme, her sister's maid of honor, wore a gown of pale green satin with a picture hat of natural colored straw trimmed with green tulle. The other attendants, Mrs. Wilbur Killeen and Miss Minnie Mehlin, were gowns of peach-colored chiffon with natural-colored straw hats trimmed with peach-colored tulle. They all carried bouquets of Ophelia roses and lavender sweet-peas.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 16.—The engagement in midocean of a member of the Swiss Light Horse Brigade and son of one of the oldest Swiss families to the daughter of a former United States Congressman from Oklahoma was disclosed today at the Hotel Muehlebach, where the two are guests under chaperonage of the girl's mother.

Max Stoffel of St. Gall, Switzerland, and Miss Georgia Lamotte of Pawhuska, Okla., became engaged on the line De Grasse, en route from Havre for New York, a month ago. The girl's mother, Mrs. Anna Marx Lamotte, is well known in the Southwest. She is the former wife of Bird McGuire, former Congressman from Oklahoma.

Mrs. Lamotte said the marriage would take place next Fall at the Stoffel home in Switzerland.

Giants and Yanks Win, Both Taking Their First Series of the Season

ROBINS SCINTILLATE BUT GIANTS WIN, 3-2

FORMER HITS A HOMER

By HARRY CROSS.

Jack Scott turned back the Robins at the Polo Grounds yesterday and the Giants won, 3 to 2. It was a narrow squeeze, for Brooklyn, with Burleigh Grimes in fairly good trim, always had a chip on its shoulder and had serious designs of breaking up the game in the ninth. None of the 5,000 spectators had any use for fans, nor was there any rush on the ice-cream cone market which would keep the factories working nights.

The most lurid slap of the afternoon bounded off the reliable black bat of Jean Jacques Fournier, the Robins' first baseman, when he tilted a homer into the upper sleeping porch of the right-field stand in the second inning. The bat with which Fournier did the trick is named Betsy, and later in the game, with two on the bases, Grimes borrowed Betsy and had an idea he could get the same response from it. The only thing Betsy did for Grimes was a harmless bouncer on the infield lawn. Grimes doesn't know Betsy like Fournier does.

The exquisite fielding jewel of the afternoon also went to a Brooklyn player, none other than Rabbit Maranville. In the sixth inning, with two runs on the paths and two gone, Travis Jackson hoisted a fly into short left centre, which didn't appear to be within any one's reach.

Maranville's Catch a Marvel.

Maranville turned his back on the ball and started to run toward Eighth Avenue. Without once looking back to see where the ball was Rabbit kept right on going, thrust his hands out in front of him and the ball buzzed down past his nose and nestled in his mitts. It has been said that Maranville is going back. He is. Going back to make impossible catches like this one.

Just because Fournier made a home run and Maranville made a great grab doesn't necessarily mean that the Robins were the only ones in the ball game. The Giants were present at all times, and although the Robins did the fancy stuff the Giants won the game.

In the course of the afternoon's events some unusual things happened to the Giants. For one thing George Kelly muffed a ball. No one can remember when he ever did that before. Jacobson hit a grounder to Scott in the fifth, and Jack tossed a perfect throw to Kelly. The ball splashed out of George's hands like a hot potato. Then on the next play, when Maranville rolled to Jackson, Travis made a wretchedly unruly throw to Frisch for a force-out play. No damage ensued, however, from either error.

Fournier's homer came in the second and tied the count. In the Giants' half of the same inning, Al Tyson rammed a double to left centre, galloped to third on Jackson's sacrifice fly to Felix and romped home on Snyder's sacrifice fly to Jacobson.

The Robins threatened in the fourth. Marriott nicked Scott for two bases and after Wheat fouled to Snyder, Fournier got a life when a pitched ball nipped the sleeve of his shirt. Felix jammed a liner down the centre aisle which Frisch pulled down and doubled Marriott before he could climb back to second.

Grimes Checks Menace.

New York got the run in the sixth, which marked the margin of victory. Frisch walked and went to third on Young's single to right. After Meusel raised a foul to Hargreaves, Kelly pounded a single to right which sent Frisch over. Grimes stopped the activity when he fanned Tyson and Maranville further squelched the impending run festival when he made his great catch of Jackson's Texas Leaguer.

The Robins generated plenty of activity at the last moment, when Felix opened the ninth with a two-base drive to left and scored when Jacobson singled to centre. Whitey Witt was inserted to hit in place of Maranville, but it wasn't his day and Scott struck him out. Hargreaves hit into a double play to end the matinee.

LUCAS WINS GAME FOR REDS

CINCINNATI, April 16 (AP).—Lucas triumphed over Alexander in a pitching duel today, the Cincinnati Reds defeating the Chicago Cubs, 2 to 1. Lucas won his game in the third when he tripled and scored on a sacrifice fly. In the second, Wilson bounced a triple off the bleacher railing in right and scored on a fly. The game was played in an hour and fifteen minutes.

RALLY IN 9TH PUTS CARDINALS ON TOP

ST. LOUIS, April 17 (AP).—A ninth-inning rally enabled the St. Louis Cardinals today to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3 to 2, and to make it three out of four in their series with the world's champions.

A double, single and a walk in the final frame filled the bases. Then Blades was hit by a pitched ball, forcing in Toporcer. Flowers scored the winning run on Mueller's single.

YANKS CARRY OFF SERIES IN BOSTON

PENNOCK GOES 9 INNINGS

By JAMES R. HARRISON.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 16.—The Yankees planted a farewell haymaker on the manly chin of the Red Sox this afternoon and then fled for Washington, glad to leave this chilly town. With the Red Sox prostrate in their wake, this left the Yanks winners of two games out of three played here, today's score being 3 to 2.

If for no other reason than that a Yankee pitched the full nine innings, the game today will go ringing down the corridors of time. Miller Huggins sent Herb Pennock to the mound in the first inning, and Herbie was still there at the end of the ninth, although in the interim the Sox used him roughly and at one stage of the affair, in the eighth, seemed on the way to a victorious rally.

With men on first and third and nobody out in the eighth, Pennock was facing a boisterous situation, but the wise old left-hander wiggled his left arm with such fluency that the Bostonese failed to score a run.

Red Sox Get More Hits.

For the second straight game the famed sluggers of Murderers' Row were outhit by the enemy, ten blows to seven, but the Yanks inserted their socks where they would do the most good, and were aided no little by an error by Fred Haney which netted our side an unearned run.

You have frequently read of pitchers being knocked, driven, bombarded or shelled from the hill, but in the case of Mr. Paul Zahniser this frigid afternoon, it was literally true. A line drive propelled by Earl Combs struck Mr. Zahniser briskly on the left ankle in the second inning, and he was assisted from the field, supported by the broad shoulders of two comrades.

The blow did not break any bones, but it left Mr. Zahniser in a maimed condition, unable to walk and, what was worse, unable to pitch. At the start of the third frame a Mr. Tony Welzer confronted the Yanks and did very well, permitting only one run and four hits in the remaining seven innings.

Defensive baseball of the highest calibre was necessary to carry Pennock through several precarious situations. In particular, Anthony Lazzeri, our young second baseman played hard, dashing ball—nothing spectacular but very effective. The conviction grows that Mr. Lazzeri is a real ball player.

Lazzeri Gets a Triple.

In the first inning the Yanks did nothing despite a long double by Earl Combs. In the second Lazzeri got a triple and scored on Dugan's sacrifice fly to right.

Collins walked, and Pennock was safe when Haney fumbled his grounder. Mark Koenig jostled a single to centre and Collins plodded home.

Then it was that Combs carromed his liner off the Zahniser shin. Paul gamely threw out the Yankee, retiring the side, and then collapsed in a heap.

These two runs were plenty until the fifth, when the Sox scored once and almost twice. Signor Mike Herrera opened by singling to centre, but was forced by Gaston. Welzer singled to left, moving Gaston to second.

That fiend in human form, Ira Flagstead, singled to right, scoring Gaston. At this unpleasant stage, Haney grounded to Pennock and nice covering by Lazzeri and a swift throw to first, netted a double play to Pennock's single.

Koenig's soft bunt and a force-out left Yanks on first and second in the seventh. Welzer forgot his training and wound up, which allowed Koenig to steal third, whence he scored while Gehrig was forcing Combs.

Red Sox Get Another.

The Sox got a run in the seventh on Rigney's double, and two outs and they became hostile again in the eighth. Flagstead opened with a double to left and Haney bunted safely. Rosenthal wafted a short fly to Ruth, and on Todt's tap to Pennock Flagstead was run down at third, Pennock smothered Bratche's splash for the third out.

TIGERS BEAT INDIANS WITH 5 RUNS IN THIRD

Rally Overcomes Three-Run Lead When Shaute Passes Two Men and Hits Another.

DETROIT, April 16 (AP).—A five-run rally in the third inning overcame a three-run Cleveland lead and gave Detroit a 5-to-3 victory over the Indians today.

Shaute's wildness and a double by Heilmann which cleared the bases were responsible for Detroit's five runs in the third. Shaute walked two men and hit another in this inning.

WHITE SOX TAKE 3D IN ROW.

CHICAGO, April 16 (AP).—Tom Gulley's three-base hit with the bases full in the first inning proved the undoing of Charley Robertson in his first appearance against his former teammates today, and the Chicago White Sox defeated the St. Louis Browns, 5 to 1, for the third straight time.

Red Faber pitched in fine form and was never in danger until the ninth inning, when the Browns bunched two hits and saved themselves from a shutout.

SENATORS OUTHIT ATHLETICS; WIN, 4-3

Five Mack Hurlers Fail to Stop Champions, Who Take Series, 3 Out of 4—S. Harris Chased.

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP).—Washington took a free-hitting game from the Philadelphia Athletics today, 4 to 3, giving the Senators three of the four-game series. Five Mack pitchers failed to keep the champions off the bases.

Manager Stanley Harris was ordered off the field in the ninth when he vigorously protested Umpire Nallin's ruling that he had not touched second base on a close play.

BISSONETTE'S BAT WINS FOR SKEETERS

Home Run With Two On in the Ninth and Score Tied Defeats Syracuse, 9-6.

By The Associated Press.

A home-run drive by Del Bissonette over the far centre field pickets with two on the bases in the ninth frame enabled the Jersey City Skeeters to take the third straight game from the Syracuse Stars in Jersey City yesterday. The final score was 9 to 6.

The Skeeters, who had pounded Leo Dickerman for the lead in the late innings, went into their half of the ninth with the score tied after the Stars had managed to touch Smith and Cantrell for the tying run

APOSTLE CAPTURES BEVERWYCK PURSE

MUNDEN RIDES 3 WINNERS

Special to The New York Times.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 16.—Running out in front from the drop of the flag, C. Caffarelli's Apostle coasted home to an easy victory this afternoon in the Beverwyck Purse, a dash of five and a half furlongs, restricted to the three-year-olds, which was the leading number of a rather ordinary card. It was Apostle's first appearance since he won his lone start at Jefferson Park. To day he beat ten others of his age.

An ideal Spring afternoon brought out a good attendance in view of the program, but there was small reward for the followers of form, only one favorite winning. The interesting event of the afternoon was the riding of Willie Munden, star of the pigskin brigade at Tijuana during the Winter. Munden had four mounts during the afternoon, and three of them he brought home winners—Leatherwood in the second, Mabel C. in the third and Duckling in the seventh. He was unplaced in his other effort.

The battle for the place was the feature of the race for the Beverwyck Purse, since Apostle was never threatened once the field was well in motion. Tony McAtee's ride on A. G. Weston's Welshot brought the Wrack gelding home to take the place by a head from W. R. Salles's Orestes II, the favorite.

The H. P. Whitney entry of Pyrex and Fresco was the short-priced favorite for the juvenile event, a half-mile dash for maiden fillies, and they ran second and fourth, respectively, in a field of fifteen. J. P. Jones's Club Steak, making her first appearance under colors, proved the winner, and her stable companion, Lena Rinehart, split the Whitney pair.

When the break came A. C. Bostwick's Royal Alma tossed off her rider, L. Simons. Club Steak displayed a brilliant burst of speed from the start, leaving her field far behind and coming home with a lead of ten lengths in the fast time of 0:47 4-5. Chalmers had the mount and the entry paid $9.60 in the mutuels.

A long shot carried off the money in the claiming event, at a mile and seventy yards for three-year-olds, the Sagamore Stable's True Boy paying $16.70 in the mutuels, although it was well known that Trainer Stotler has his horses very fit for the meeting. True Boy got up in the last jump to take the money by a nose from the Flamingo Farm's Exchequer. The latter made the early pace and had a good margin over Barney Wells at the finish.

MAYOR WILL GREET HAKOAH TEAM TODAY

Mayor Walker will head the Reception Committee to meet the Hakoah soccer team of Vienna when it arrives here this morning at 10 o'clock on the Berengaria. Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the Governor, will be a member of the committee. The players will tour the United States, their first game being scheduled for Sunday, April 25, at the Polo Grounds.

Hakoah (the name means mighty) is an all-Jewish sports club of Vienna. Its members have won the European championships in soccer, hockey, wrestling, chess and swimming, and the soccer team, just before sailing, defeated the Red Stars of Paris, city champions, in a fast game in the French capital, 10 to 4.

While in New York the eleven will be the guests of the Crescent A. C. in Brooklyn. After debarking the players will go to the Hotel Brevoort and then, forming behind a band, will march up Tenth Street to Broadway and down Broadway to the City Hall, where the Mayor will extend his official welcome. It is expected that more than 300 persons will take part in the parade and that a great crowd will be in City Hall Park to see the welcoming ceremonies.

Eighteen players are included in the group which will debark. All are internationalists, the highest ranking in soccer playing, anC each man is a star of the first magnitude in his position. The majority of the men are young and adept at the fast style of attack, which is typical of the brand of soccer played in the Western section of the United States.

WON THE GRAND NATIONAL

BOGSIDE, Scotland, April 16 (AP).—The long career of Sergeant Murphy, first United States-owned horse to win a Grand National Steeplechase in eighty-four years, is at an end. The Sergeant, which won the Grand National at Liverpool in 1923 under the colors of Stephen Sanford Jr. of Amsterdam, N. Y., slipped on a turn in the West Scotland Steeplechase today and broke a hind leg. He was destroyed.

The race was won by J. Dodd's seven-year-old Pot Hook, which finished the two-mile course alone. Sergeant Murphy was at odds of 2 to 1 and Pot Hook at 4 to 1.

Sergeant Murphy was to have been retired last year, but he carried his sixteen years so lightly, even giving weight to horses half his age, that his owner decided to give him another season. The Sergeant was a safe jumper and had fallen very few times throughout his career. He ran in the Grand National six times and finished the course five of those six.

Started Career in Ireland.

Sergeant Murphy was 13 years old at the time he won the Grand National and was quoted at odds of 100 to 6. Mr. Sanford is said to have paid $10,000 for him, a value which the owner boosted to $100,000 after his horse had won the English steeplechase classic. Mr. Sanford was a student at Cambridge University when he bought Sergeant Murphy solely for the purpose of putting him into the hunting field.

The Sergeant started his career as a hunter in Ireland and was sold to a Dublin dealer for the proverbial song. Subsequently he was bought by a London bookmaker and then by the Hyams Stable at Epsom.

Sergeant Murphy's victory in 1923 was over a field of twenty-eight horses, only seven of which finished. The race was worth about $50,000, and the trophy cup was presented to Mr. Sanford with the personal congratulations of King George and the Prince of Wales.

State Boxing Board Bans Proposed Bout Between Flowers and Walker

GARDEN TO GET BATTLE

State Commission Will Pick Berlenbach Opponent Unless Delaney Deals With Rickard.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

The State Athletic Commission announced yesterday through Chairman James A. Farley that it would not tolerate a mixed championship match between Tiger Flowers, negro holder of the middleweight title, and Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion. It also transferred the proposed bout between Joe Dundee and Willie Harmon, welterweight rivals, which was signed, announced and scheduled by the Coney Island Stadium for May 28, from the stadium to Madison Square Garden on any date that suits the principals and the Garden.

Chairman Farley further announced that unless Jack Delaney at least considered Promoter Rickard's overtures for a bout between himself and Paul Berlenbach, world's light-heavyweight champion, the commission would step into the breach and arbitrarily select an opponent for Berlenbach who would assuredly not be Jack Delaney.

Then the commission put its stamp of approval on the bout between Louis (Kid) Kaplan, world's featherweight champion, and Johnny Dundee, ex-champion, which is scheduled for June 1 in the Queensboro Stadium.

Boxers Must Stick to Class.

A desire to keep Walker in his own division and serve notice on other titleholders that they will be expected to do likewise actuated the commission in its disposition of the Flowers-Walker bout.

Matchmaker Jess McMahon, representing Promoter Rickard, appeared with a request to hold the bout in the Yankee Stadium in June, but was advised the commission would not permit the match. "If Flowers wants to fight in June let him fight Harry Greb," was the commission dictum. The commission thinks Greb is entitled to another bout. It holds that Walker will find enough to do in his own division after his title bout with Pete Latzo.

The Dundee-Harmon bout submitted by the Coney Island Stadium was disallowed, Chairman Farley explained, because the Garden had first call on this bout. Chairman Farley asserted the commission had instructed McMahon not to proceed with the match as an attraction for May 7 at the Garden, when it was thought it would interfere with the Catholic Big Sisters' benefit card scheduled for May 17 in the Garden on which Harmon is scheduled to appear. Yesterday's ruling means that the Garden can have the match for any date after May 17.

Delaney's hesitancy in signifying his intentions with respect to the Berlenbach bout which Promoter Tex Rickard is offering him, led to Farley's intimation that the commission may make a substitution. Young Stribling of Georgea Carpentier are the likely candiates.

Shade and Moody Must Meet.

Dave Shade and Frank Moody, who were disqualified last Monday night at Syracuse by Referee Mike Hylas for an alleged unsatisfactory contest, were ordered to box at the Syracuse Arena within a week or ten days in a return match, and the money for their contest last Monday night will not be forwarded until they have completed another bout. The commission will collect from the second match the percentages of the boxers under the original contract and this money will be diverted to charity.

RICKARD GOES WEST TO SIGN UP DEMPSEY

May Meet Champion in St. Louis or Kansas City—Also Will Look Over a Chicago Garden.

Promoter Tex Rickard, accompanied by Max Kramer, contractor, who worked on the new Madison Square Garden, left for Chicago yesterday, ostensibly to go over plans for his arena in Chicago, where Rickard and the Madison Square Garden Corporation purpose to operate along lines similar to those here.

More important in its immediate relation to boxing, however, is the fact that the promoter's mission is to sign Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, to a bout contract. The document which Dempsey will be asked to sign will be a blank contract in which the titleholder will assign to Rickard the selection of the opponent, be he Gene Tunney or Harry Wills.

Richard is not to sign Dempsey in Chicago. In fact it is unknown where the champion and the promoter will meet, and the place will not be arranged until Rickard reaches Chicago today. It is believed, however, that it will be in either Kansas City or St. Louis.

Dempsey will get a percentage privilege which will insure the champion the sum of $450,000 when he boxes. That is understood to be the price the champion has placed on his services. The date will depend upon its location. Rickard has not yet entirely abandoned hope of holding the bout at the Yankee Stadium, but is prepared to shift the scene to Jersey City. The battle if in this city, will be held on Sept. 2, and if in Jersey City on Sept. 8. Dempsey will not be in position to fight until after his contract with Jack Kearns, the champion's deposed manager, has expired on Aug. 2.

Chances of a contest between Dempsey and Tunney here are practically nil, and the outlook for Jersey City is not particularly promising either. If the promoter persists in his plans to stage a Dempsey-Tunney bout in Jersey City, the State Athletic Commission is prepared to revoke the license of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, of which Rickard is President. At least that is the attitude of Chairman James A. Farley, expressed yesterday.

FLOWERS BEATS GANS.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 16 (AP).—Tiger Flowers, middleweight champion of the world, defeated Joey Gans of Allentown, Pa., in a ten-round bout here tonight. Flowers received the referee's decision after the judges had disagreed.

Cup Offered for Golf Match Between U. S. and British Pros

LONDON, April 16 (AP).—British professional golfers are showing increased interest in the institution of an annual competition similar to the Walker Cup competition in the amateur ranks. A golf enthusiast, whose name has not yet been made public, is ready to give a Challenge Cup for annual play alternately in England and the United States. The first series of matches are planned over the St. George's Hill and Wentworth courses early in June. Walter Hagen is scheduled to select an American team.

MET. GYM HONORS KEPT BY JOCHIM

Al Jochim of the Swiss Turn Verein, national all-around gymnastic champion, retained his metropolitan senior all-around title last night in the annual championship meet of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, held in Prospect Hall, Brooklyn, before a capacity crowd of 1,000.

Jochim's brilliant performance gave the Swiss Turn Verein the team trophy, a handsome silver cup, with a score of 24 points. The New York Turn Verein finished second with 21 points, while the New York Athletic Club took third honors with 10 markers.

Victories in three events and a trio of second places assured Jochim's retention of his all-around crown. He took first honors with ease in the free calisthenics competition and the flying rings and finished on top after a stiff battle in the horizontal bar contest.

Second place in the all-around test went to Walter E. Meyer of the New York Turn Verein, national parallel bars champion, who retained his metropolitan title in that event and scored a total of 2,805 points for the events in which he competed to 3,028.5 for Jochim.

The summaries:

GOLDSTEIN STOPS O'BRIEN IN THIRD

His scheduled six-round bout against Pep O'Brien, Scranton lightweight, as the feature attraction last night before a packed house in the Pioneer A. C., was just a workout for Ruby Goldstein, promising east side lightweight. Goldstein subjected O'Brien to such a severe drubbing from the outset of the contest that after 2 minutes 50 seconds of the third round the Scranton lad's seconds heaved a towel into the ring, admitting defeat for their man and giving Goldstein another knockout triumph.

Goldstein floored his rival twice in the first round and once in the third round, while on another occasion in the third O'Brien, backed into a neutral corner, went down without being hit. Regaining his feet, O'Brien faced a gale of blows until the towel came hurtling into the air. Goldstein weighed 135¾ pounds and O'Brien 136 pounds.

In the scheduled six-round semi-final Hagan Hassan, Turkish heavyweight, knocked out Vernon Branch, Chicagoan, in two minutes of the first round of an unsatisfactory contest. Sammy Dorfman, east side, won the decision over Frankie Goldsmith of the west side in their six-round bout. Willie O'Connell, clever west side bantamweight, out-boxed and out-fought Frankie Curry in their six-round bout and George Cuneo won the decision over Mike Esposito in a six-rounder. Billy Humphries carried off the decision over Harry Brooks in their six-round quarrel.

MITCHELL DEFEATS DUNCAN BY 3 AND 2

IS LONG OFF THE TEES

Rival Runs into String of Fives, Is 3 Down at Fifth and 2 at Seventh Is of Little Aid.

ROEHAMPTON, Eng., April 16 (AP).—Abe Mitchell today defeated George Duncan, 3 and 2, thus winning the Roehampton Golf Club invitation professional tournament with its prize of £200. This annual competition affords British professional golfers the first opportunity to display their Spring golfing styles, and Mitchell sustained the hopes that the golfing public of this country places in him as the likeliest man to end the raids on the British open championship which the Americans have so successfully conducted in four out of the last five years.

Mitchell emerged from the Winter's hibernation at St. Albans, where, under the patronage of a wealthy enthusiast he has been pursuing his studies with intensity and devotion, and swept all before him on the short, but rocky, fairways and perfect greens of Roehampton.

He eliminated an able youngster, W. E. Smith, 4 and 3, in the semi-finals this morning, before renewing his ancient and friendly rivalry with Duncan. All this came after the trouncing which he administered to Archibald Compston yesterday when the score was 4 and 3.

Tonight Mitchell's admirers were more certain than heretofore that few, if any, golfers on either side of the Atlantic can defeat him in a 72-hole match, and the arrival of the American golfing invaders is awaited with the greatest interest.

Mitchell's sixteen holes against Duncan were played in one under fours, which required the steadiest golf. Duncan performed with characteristic impetuosity. Three ragged fives put him three down at the fifth hole. This fixed his fate, and, except for a single flashing two at the seventh, he never showed signs of hitting his best stride. Nevertheless the galleries stuck close, hoping for a repetition of Duncan's morning recovery, when, in beating the Lancashireman, W. Robertson, 5 and 4, he took 32 strokes for the first four holes and only 31 for the next 14.

Against Mitchell, however, Duncan was consistently outdriven. Mitchell's power from the tee was never better displayed than against the wind at the long second hole. Two screamers put him on the green. At other long holes, Mitchell was out in front, needing only a cleek or mashie to take him to the green, when Duncan required a wooden club.

PRINCETON ALUMNI HONOR FITZPATRICK

Track Captains Since '73 Attend Dinner — Oxford-Cambridge Plan Definitely Announced.

Keene Fitzpatrick, famous American coach and hale and hearty at 61, was the guest of honor last night at a dinner given for him at the University Club by the track alumni of Princeton University, where Fitzpatrick has been track coach since 1910. Fitzpatrick, who has been coaching football and track teams for thirty-six years, was eulogized by speakers, all of whom were stars at Princeton from 1873, when Princeton had its first track team, to the present day.

The first and the last track captains, in the persons of Jacob H. Van Deventer, '74, and Caleb F. Gates Jr., '26, paid tribute to the ability of Fitzpatrick, praised his methods and told of the successes of the Tiger in competition since he has been guiding the track and field teams. More than fifty Princeton stars were present in answer to an invitation sent out recently and signed by thirty-three track captains.

Rupert B. Thomas Jr., captain in 1913 and at present a member of the Board of Control at Princeton, described Fitzpatrick as one of the greatest influences that had ever come into the life of the Princeton undergraduate and told of future plans for Princeton track and field competition in which Fitzpatrick will play a major part.

Thomas revealed that Fitzpatrick and Jack Moakley, Cornell coach, would select the combined Princeton-Cornell track team that will go abroad this Summer for a meet with the combined Oxford-Cambridge team at Stamford Bridge on July 10. The personnel of the team will be decided upon after the Penn Relays and will be made up of the twenty-six best athletes in the two universities, regardless of the number that will be drawn from each university. The team, with Coaches Fitzpatrick and Moakley, and the undergraduate managers, will sail on the S. S. Caronia on June 24, said Thomas.

Thomas also disclosed that a definite arrangement had been made between Harvard and Yale, Princeton and Cornell, and Oxford and Cambridge for a four-year cycle of competition whereby American teams would visit England, an English team would come to America and a hiatus in Anglo-American competition would exist during the Olympic year. A combined Oxford-Cambridge team came to America in 1926, a combined Princeton-Cornell team will go to England in 1928, a combined Yale-Harvard team will go to England in 1927, and there will be no intercollegiate competition of this sort in 1928, as that will be an Olympic year. In 1929 Oxford-Cambridge will come here again.

Capt. Pidgeon Plans to Enter Bermuda Race Without a Crew and Watch for Chronometer

Herbert L. Stone, Chairman of the Bermuda Ocean Race Committee, said yesterday that he hoped to have the entry of Harry Pidgeon, the Iowa navigator who recently circumnavigated the world single handed in the yawl Islander, which he constructed himself at Los Angeles.

Captain Pidgeon told Chairman Stone that he expected to be in New York waters at the time of the race and if so would be glad to enter the Islander and sail her alone against the other boats in the fleet. The Bermuda race, a deep-sea thrash of 660 nautical miles to St. David's Head, outside Hamilton, will be started off New London on Sunday, June 20.

Although some yachtsmen in the Bermuda race in the past have missed the Islands through lack of experience in navigation, it is believed that Captain Pidgeon would make St. David's Head without a miss. During his long voyage of 58,000 miles around the world he made some difficult passages, one of forty-two days in the Pacific, and always brought up at the port he desired to make.

Captain Pidgeon states that he circumnavigated the world without the aid of a chronometer, using a gold watch instead. This substitute for the usual instrument was placed on some cotton in a cigar box during the long trip.

STRANAHAN BEATS DUCKY YATES, 1 UP

Enters Pinehurst Final at Expense of Medalist After Uphill Battle.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 16.—Ducky Yates of Rochester, medalist in the mid-April tournament, was eliminated in the semi-final round here today by Robert A. Stranahan of Toledo. The decision was not reached until the final green, the margin being 1 up. To win Stranahan had to come home in 34, 2 under par. Yates was 2 up at the turn, out in 38 to Stranahan's 41.

The summaries:

First Division—R. A. Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, defeated Arthur (Ducky) Yates, Rochester, 1 up; C. Ross Somerville, London, Ontario, defeated J. P. Gammons, Providence, 7 up (nineteen holes).

Second Division—J. L. Weller, Hamilton, Ontario, defeated H. Bradford Lewis, Andover, 7 and 6; S. Howard Voshell, Pomonok, defeated J. H. Jones, Wareham, Mass., 4 and 3.

Third Division—P. S. P. Randolph, Meadowbrook, defeated H. E. Swoope, Merion, Pa., 4 and 3; Robert Lowry, Shamokin, defeated A. S. Rosen, Montreal, 4 and 3.

PUBLIC GOLF COURSES TO BE OPENED TODAY

The New York public golf links will open today. Mayor Walker is to drive off the first ball at Van Cortlandt Park. This is a week later than last year's opening, which indicates that the golf weather is a little behind previous seasons.

Van Cortlandt Park, Mosholu and Pelham will open with temporary greens. The regular greens will not be available until May. Commissioner John A. Hennessey of the parks of the Bronx, however, is pleased with the progress being made on the greens.

The tees at Van Cortlandt Park have been rebuilt but outside of this there have been no changes in the condition of the links. In case of rain the opening will be postponed until the following day. Indications point to a record year and commissioners are busy on a plan to lessen the congestion on week-ends that has been so trying in the past that many of the regulars have gone to the public links at daybreak in order to get off on their rounds without a tedious delay at the first tee.

DEAL COURSE CHOSEN FOR JERSEY AMATEUR

State Golf Body Picks Club Near Asbury Park for Title Tournament June 3-5.

Selection of the Deal Golf Club near Asbury Park for the New Jersey State Golf Association's twenty-fifth annual amateur championship, to be held June 3 to 5, was announced yesterday at the first meeting of the association's new Executive Committee held at the Lawyers' Club.

Choice of courses for the open championship, which is restricted to Jersey players, and for the events held for caddies and caddie-masters, was put off until next Friday. At that time the New Jersey team for the annual triangular match with Long Island and Westchester also will be announced.

The meeting yesterday disclosed the personnel of the Jersey body's Executive Committee, which is appointed by the President. Jay R. Monroe, who was elected to that office in January, recently returned from Europe. The committee is composed of H. Y. Barrow of Baltusrol, E. E. Grubb of Somerset Hills, Maurice E. Risley of Atlantic City, Charles P. Eddy of Arcola, F. F. Turrell and A. D. Swords of Morris County, Stacey Bender of Shackamaxon, A. C. Buckley of Canoe Brook and Mr. Monroe.

COLLEGE STARS SET 21 NEW SWIM MARKS

YALE MEN LED IN RELAY

Twenty-one intercollegiate records were bettered by varsity swimmers during the recent indoor season, according to the list of new marks compiled by the secretary of the National Athletic Association Natatorial Committee and made public yesterday.

It deserves mention, however, that the list fails to convey a true idea of the wealth of iconoclastic feats accomplished, as some of the old records were beaten by several swimmers and more than once by the same man, yet in each instance only the fastest performance chronicled naturally appears on the table of new standards. Suffice that nearly forty applications for records were received by the committee.

The outstanding achievements, in all cases, were returned by Yale or Naval Academy swimmers, so representatives of half a dozen other colleges who actually took part in the record breaking find their exploits omitted from the secretary's report.

The season's most striking performances went to the credit of the Yale sprinters. They smashed the 75-foot pool marks for every free style relay event on the calendar and the new figures thereby established in all cases rate as world as well as collegiate records.

SEEKS TRUE DEMOCRACY

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 16.—Strong faith in education in politics as the right road toward realization of true democracy was urged by Miss Belle Sherwin, President of the National League of Women Voters, in her address to the general assembly of the league delegates here tonight.

Opening the mass meeting that concluded the program of the first day of the convention proper, she told what the league had done in its seven years of existence toward that goal. In education, she emphasized, the league believed it had "found a way of helping to realize democracy which actually works among a growing number of citizens."

The same topic was discussed by Mrs. Maud Wood Park, past President of the league, and Mrs. Helen Taylor Upton of Warren, Ohio, former Vice Chairman of the National Republican Committee. Mrs. Upton spoke in place of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt of New York, Honorary President of the league, who, through illness, was kept away.

When the convention organized this morning reports of various committees and officers of the league were followed by presentation of committee recommendations. Regional conferences followed in the afternoon.

"Some of us are bold to believe," said Miss Sherwin, "that the necessity for political education has led the League of Women Voters directly into a creative process of Democracy.

"Whether it is possible to develop in this country an education which will qualify citizens to be partners in government is a question to face squarely.

"In the early days of small numbers in this country our new invention of public schools did in some measure result in the development of the individual in relation to the demands upon him and so laid the foundation for a working democratic Government. How far are we realizing that ideal through our educational system in the complex?

"For many, education today is either remote and limited to a brief period or is highly specialized for vocational purposes. Education for active citizenship has hardly been tried."

Still, she noted a "better sign for democracy" in "the modest attempts of schools here and there to teach critical reading of the newspapers and other means of avoiding mob-mindedness."

Detailing various activities of the league in its effort to educate voters politically, Miss Sherwin remarked that "the experiment of the league offers a new hope for democracy."

After seven years of existence of the league, she continued, newspaper editors and others were beginning to recognize the important influence of the league on public opinion and the development of an intelligent class of voters.

"The largest returns upon political education are not yet capable of measurement at the polls," she added. "They are to be found in the gradual appreciable increase of the number of citizens concerned to become competent voters through understanding some aspect of government or some political situation which for one reason or another has come home to them."

Mrs. Park, speaking on "the faith of the fathers and the works of the mothers," pointed out that the union of faith and works is as necessary to the welfare of the nation as to the salvation of the individual soul.

"Throughout history," she declared, "women, by their works, have helped to make man's faith a reality, and now that women are voters they are trying to carry out the faith of the fathers by the practical measures which they support and by their tendency to discriminate between the 'letter which killeth and the spirit which maketh live.'"

By all indications today the league is going to give the wet and dry issue a wide berth this time, at least officially. Rumors that prohibition and birth control, two inflammable subjects in the league, were to be threshed out at this convention were squelched today when committee recommendations for various subjects of study and legislation during the ensuing year failed to include these two issues.

DAUGHTER'S CALLER IS SHOT BY WOMAN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, N. J., April 16.—Mrs. Sophie Kenneyman shot and seriously wounded John Engstrom of Dover when Engstrom and another man appeared at the rear door of her home about one mile from here last night. The woman declared she feared the men were robbers, but local police said that they had obtained information that Engstrom and his companion were known to the woman's two daughters and had gone to pay a call on them.

Mrs. Kenneyman, who is 36 years old, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Baker today and held without bail for the Grand Jury, charged with assault with intent to kill. Engstrom's condition was critical.

When the two men knocked at the rear door, according to the police, Mrs. Kenneyman ordered them away, and when they refused she went to an upstairs room and fired a shot from a window to try to frighten them into leaving. They remained, however, and the woman came to the rear door to face them.

Pointing the pistol at Engstrom, according to the police, Mrs. Kenneyman threatened to shoot unless he and his companion departed. Engstrom replied:

At this, said the police, the woman fired twice. One bullet grazed Engstrom's neck while the other lodged in his abdomen. His companion ran off. Although wounded, Engstrom got back into his automobile and drove twelve miles to Rockaway, where he collapsed. He was taken to the Dover Hospital.

Aultman Co. Has Fewer Officers.

The number of Vice Presidents of the Aultman Company was reduced from five to four at a meeting of the directors yesterday. The following officers were re-elected: L. L. Woodward, who was recently appointed President, was elected to that position; John S. Gloris and W. T. Seaver, Vice Presidents; T. C. Tinny, Treasurer, and J. C. T. Anthony, Secretary.

LONDON FAREWELL TO OUR HOTEL MEN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 16.—The Duke of York attended the farewell banquet to the American and Continental members of the International Hotel Alliance at the Hotel Victoria tonight. Lord Essebrough presided. The American and Japanese Ambassadors and the Swiss Minister also attended.

Many notable Englishmen were among the guests. The dining hall was elaborately decorated, the Statue of Liberty in ice being one of the features. The dinner, provided by Gordon Hotels, Limited, was a triumph of English culinary art.

The Duke of York spoke on the importance of the hotel manager and described him as the "universal dispenser of hospitality" in stimulating the spirit of travel. Referring to the visit of the Americans to Stratford-on-Avon, he expressed the hope that all who love Shakespeare's works would help in restoring the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre.

J. H. Thomas urged the visiting hotel keepers to "correct the false impression that this old country is down and out."

"It's quite true," he said, "that we are passing through a difficult period. We are still paying the price of war, but we are meeting our obligations. We intend to meet them and we are not down and out."

George W. Sweeney, the official delegate of the American Hotel Association, made some well chosen remarks and paid a tribute to the hospitality extended to members of the Alliance in this country.

Lord Dewar was another speaker. He asked the American hotel men to take back the following message to their fellow-citizens:

"May the golden chain which so happily binds your Republic to the British Empire now, never lose a link, for upon that chain rests the peace of the world, the advancement of civilization and the well-being of the human race."

CONCERT IN AID OF SCHOOL

America's singing of those native folksongs known as negro "spirituals" was illustrated in a benefit at the Town Hall last night to complete a fund of $10,000, of which $2,000 had been promised by B. N. Duke, for the work of the Manassas Industrial School in the South. Paul Robeson, negro actor and baritone, was ill and his opening group with Lawrence Brown had to be abandoned, as announced from the stage. Alexander Gatewood, with Jessie Covington as accompanist, added to his classic airs and to familiar arrangements by H. T. Burleigh three extra songs at the start.

J. Rosamond Johnson and Taylor Gordon, who also interpolated three numbers at their first hearty greeting, finished the evening with many of Johnson's vivid versions of camp-meeting revival airs, such as the pair had sung in New York on no fewer than fifteen occasions this season. Their music, unique in racial sympathy and fervor, was applauded by a brilliant social house.

RUTGERS GIVES A CONCERT.

Ninety-six fresh-voiced singers from the University Choral Clubs of Rutgers College and its allied New Jersey College for Women were heard in their third annual concert here at Aeolian Hall last night. Howard D. McKinney conducted early Latin chants of Palestrina and Vittoria, in which college choirs have followed Harvard's lead of some years ago. From Russian choristers recently touring America there also was an example in the "Hospodi Pomilui" of Lavovsky.

Deems Taylor's adaptation of a Czechoslovak air, "Waters Ripple and Flow," shared a folksong group with the "Volga Boat Song" and with Vaughn Williams's arrangement of an old English "Springtime of the Year." Jean Knowlton, soprano, and Harold Lambert, baritone, assisted in solo passages and a group of songs apiece. Among later American lyrics the women's chorus added C. G. Spross's "Fulfillment" and "Will o' the Wisp."

Sings Songs of Algiers and Tunis.

Laura Williams introduced songs of Algiers and Tunis, sung in costume and accompanied with Arab lute and drums in a recital last evening at the new Chickering Hall, in Fifty-seventh Street. Miss Williams, who studied this music among the people of North Africa, gave other folksongs with Agnes Conover and Alre by Katherine Heyman, with the composer at the piano.

Hubbard Begins His Song Recitals.

Charles Hubbard, the tenor, opened last evening a series of three song recitals from modern composers, attracting an interested audience to the Fifth Avenue Playhouse at 66 Fifth Avenue. To a dozen Frenchmen, Mr. Hubbard added lyrics of Stravinsky and Tcherepnine, the Spanish De Falla and the American Griffes. Josef Adler assisted at the piano, as he will on April 21 and 28.

National Opera Club's $1,000 Prize.

The National Opera Club of this city has offered a $1,000 prize "for a female voice of outstanding quality," the winner to be determined at the Young Artists' Contest in Chicago in April of next year. There will be preliminary State and district contests and a further prize of $500 will be awarded by the National Federation of Music Clubs at the same time.

Rotary Clubs Benefit Tonight.

A benefit under the auspices of the International Rotary Clubs, the proceeds to be used for the purpose of buying a farm for poor boys, will be held at the Manhattan Opera House tonight.

An array of vaudeville stars will appear with Lonzy Hasbell as master of ceremonies.

John Golden Buys "Supernat'ral."

John Golden yesterday purchased a new play, "Supernat'ral," by Anne Morrison, which has been written for Nydia Westman and Wallace Ford. "Supernat'ral" will be tried out in June, following the Chicago engagement of Miss Westman and Mr. Ford in "Rigo," of which Miss Morrison is co-author.

Lowered Prices on Goodyear Golf Balls
Goodyear 75c—Glide 50c

Golfers everywhere will welcome the lowered prices on Goodyear Golf Balls. The savings effected by a record-breaking volume of sales and the consequent economies of large production are being passed on to golfers, resulting in the lowest prices at which Goodyear Golf Balls were ever sold.

The Goodyear, in either mesh or dimple marking, is now 75 cents each. The Glide, in mesh only, is 50 cents each.

Both are made by the makers of Goodyear Tires. Ask your professional or write to Goodyear, Akron, Ohio, or Los Angeles, California.

New York Central's first hundred years

New York Central this year joins that growing company of American institutions with hundred-year records of service.

It was on April 17, 1826, that New York State granted the charter for the construction of the first link in the New York Central Lines—the pioneer Mohawk and Hudson Rail Road, over which was first operated in 1831 the historic De Witt Clinton train, from Albany to Schenectady.

That courageous experiment of a century ago became the nucleus of the 12,000-mile railroad system that now stretches across the richest industrial region in the world, from the Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes region to the Atlantic seaboard, and carries one-tenth of the rail-borne commerce of the nation.

New York Central enters its second century of service with a record of achievement that is an inseparable part of the story of American progress.

The Jewish Daily Forward has attained its pre-eminent position in American Jewry, its daily family of half million readers, by reason of the excellence of its editorial matter and special features. It now makes this material available to the younger generation of Jews in America through a special supplement which will likewise have an irresistible appeal to that non-Jewish element which is always eager to follow the work of men of genius. Writers of note, from America and Europe, Jewish and non-Jewish, will be regular contributors to this English supplement. Each issue will also reflect the current news of importance in Jewish life the world over.

AMERICAN OPERA FOR METROPOLITAN

New operas and revivals of some recent or older favorites, constituting a sheaf of ten in all, are announced today for the next season of the Metropolitan Opera House. It will be the forty-fourth year of the theatre and the nineteenth of Gatti-Casazza as director. Mr. Gatti timed his annual statement for the closing day of six months' opera-giving. It has been financially the most prosperous and numerically at least the most productive on this premier stage, with a new high record of forty-nine different works in 240 representations.

The general manager's forecast will be discussed by audiences at today's pair of farewell performances before the company's annual flight to Atlanta. It has already been anticipated by the vast majority of subscribers, who have renewed their holdings of coveted seats for another year. To new or prospective subscribers, the books of the opera house will be opened on April 27 and 28. The new season will begin next Nov. 1.

On Mr. Gatti's new list are four works of Italian origin, one being a ballet; three others to be sung in German, two in French and one in English. Four of those mentioned will be restorations from a season or two of silence, three others from the remoter days of one and two decades ago, and three will be new to America.

Deems Taylor's New Opera.

Deems Taylor's "The King's Henchman," with text by Edna St. Vincent Millay, heads the prospectus. It is an opera in three acts, for which the Metropolitan commissioned Mr. Taylor last year and to which he has devoted all his time since then except for the composition of a tone-poem, "Jurgen," similarly commissioned and produced by the New York Symphony.

Miss Millay, the librettist, is one of the most widely known among poets of present-day America. She is a graduate of Vassar College, as Mr. Taylor is of New York University. He was associated here in earlier musical activities with the concert baritone, Reinald Werrenrath. Mr. Taylor also has composed many songs, as well as "The Chambered Nautilus" for chorus and an "Alice in Wonderland" suite for orchestra.

Puccini's "Turandot," of which the cables are telling these days, in view of its world premiere next week at Milan, is an opera in three acts on a Chinese love tale, not unknown to the spoken stage. The librettists are Renato Simoni and Giuseppe Adami, and the late composer's work, left near completion at his death, has been supplied with orchestration only for a final number or two by his friend and fellow-composer, Franco Alfano.

Alfredo Casella's "La Giara," described as a "choreographic comedy" in one act, has its scenario from a plot by the Italian playwright, Luigi Pirandello. Its music has in part been heard in concert halls. Mr. Casella himself has been active as a great conductor and pianist in America this season, though he arrived to find his engagement to lead the State Symphony frustrated by that orchestra's retirement from further concerts this year.

"Magic Flute" and "Fidelio" Revivals.

Of Mr. Gatti's major revivals, Mozart's "Magic Flute" has been a battleborne for constellation of stars and galaxies of voices under all Metropolitan directorates, and during the years 1912-1916 for the company under Gatti-Casazza himself.

Beethoven's "Fidelio" likewise has filled an honored place in three different seasons during Mr. Gatti's time, as well as under his predecessor, Conried. Its heroine has been sung of old by Lehmann and Ternina and latterly by Morena and Melanie Kurt.

Ambroise Thomas's "Mignon," a step-child of opera, will be new to most hearers next year. It had four hearings in the many years of French opera by Abbey and by Maurice Grau, and a notable revival in Conried's final year, with Geraldine Farrar, Bonci and Plangon.

From the nearer past, Gatti-Casazza is to restore Montemezzi's "Love of the Three Kings," one of the finest modern works of the director's own country; Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Coq d'Or," with its exotic mating of lyric drama and ballet; Strauss's "Rosenkavalier," delayed at the last moment this season, and Verdi's "Forza del Destino."

There have been the usual rumors as to the stars engaged. It is said, for example, that florid rôles in "Magic Flute," "Mignon" and "Coq d'Or" will be prepared by the young soprano, Marion Talley. For several revivals, the casts of late years are available. As to these the director made no disclosure.

Mr. Gatti's statement ended with a request that there should be "no speculation as to the casts for the foregoing operas," as this matter is quite undecided. He added that suggestions "that such or such an artist be chosen for such or such a rôle" often caused embarrassment to the director and pain to the singers, some of whom must find themselves disappointed.

Massenet's "Don Quichotte" was sung to a house sold out at the Metropolitan last evening. Marion Telva made her appearance as the heroine, Dulcinea, for the first time replacing Miss Easton, and gave a performance of individual charm. Mr. Chaliapin's horse balked at a bit of loose scenery in the second act, but the Russian basso dismounted without dramatic disaster or personal mishap.

ARTIST'S MANY MOODS BOTHERED SCHINDLER

The non-appearance of Kurt Schindler, former conductor of the Schola Cantorum, as director of the symphonic orchestra engaged to accompany Raquel Meller, the Spanish disease, in her programs at the Empire Theatre, was explained last night by Mr. Schindler and E. Ray Goetz, who is presenting Señorita Meller in America.

The fact that the orchestra is not being led by Mr. Schindler is announced by a statement in the theatre programs, which says that he had withdrawn "owing to a sudden indisposition" and that he had designated Victor Baravelle to conduct in his stead.

According to Mr. Goetz after several rehearsals Mr. Schindler asked to be released, as he did not think things were going right. Mr. Schindler, Mr. Goetz stated, said that he could not catch all of Señorita Meller's various moods.

"You need a man with music hall training," Mr. Schindler is reputed to have told Mr. Goetz, "and I am not physically up to conducting for her."

Both Mr. Goetz and Mr. Schindler were emphatic in stating that the conductor's withdrawal was with only the best of feeling on both sides.

"There was no fuss at all," said Mr. Schindler. "I agreed to take charge of the orchestra for Mr. Goetz because of my admiration for Señorita Meller, whom I had seen many times abroad, and because the engagement was for the benefit of Spanish music in this country. I worked for three weeks before her arrival in New York, and supervised the preparation of the orchestrations that are now being used. I understood that I was to have an orchestra of thirty-six men, but because of the size of the pit it was necessary to cut this number to twenty-six. During the rehearsals I saw that most of Señorita Meller's selections were music hall material, and that she could get better results with a man of music hall training at the head of the orchestra."

Mr. Baravalle, who has taken Mr. Schindler's place, is well known as a musical comedy and revue conductor. He has led the orchestras of many productions, including various Al Jolson shows.

MRS. BENJAMIN ON STAGE.

Sister-in-Law of Mrs. Caruso to Make Her Debut at Hippodrome.

Mrs. Park Benjamin, sister-in-law of Mrs. Enrico Caruso and a member of New York society, will make her stage debut at the Hippodrome the week of May 3, it was announced yesterday. Mrs. Benjamin, who has a lyric soprano voice, will sing operatic and classical songs.

Before her marriage to Park Benjamin she was Gladys Lanphere, daughter of a wealthy Western ranchman and the protégé of Henry Allen, former Governor of Kansas, who is expected to be present for her initial stage appearance. Mrs. Benjamin said that she did not expect to give up her social activities to follow her vocal career.

Benefit for Mrs. Jacob Adler.

A benefit performance for Mrs. Sarah Adler, widow of Jacob Adler, well-known Jewish actor, and in memory of Mr. Adler, will be given at the Manhattan Opera House about May 1. Elihu Penenholts, President of the Jewish Theatrical Museum, announced yesterday. David Belasco, Morris Gest, Al Jolson and Fannie Hurst have promised their assistance, Mr. Penenholts stated. Next Winter at the Jewish Actors' Club, 31 East Seventh Street, there will be an exhibition of Adler manuscripts, sculptures of the characters he portrayed during his career on the stage and other interesting mementos of his career.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Mildred Keats, last seen in "My Girl," has been engaged for "Kitty's Kisses."

The N. V. A. has a box office in the Strand Theatre Building, 1,587 Broadway, to dispose of seats for its five New York benefits on Sunday night, May 2.

Al Jolson plans to visit Los Angeles and Hollywood at the conclusion of his engagement in "Artists and Models." He will probably do some picture work before resuming his tour with "Big Boy." Next week will be Mr. Jolson's last at the Winter Garden.

Yellaml, who designed the scenery for "The Bells," will do the settings for "The Phantom Ship," Al Lewis's first independent production.

J. M. Barrie's "Dear Brutus" will be presented tonight by the Washington Square College Players at the University Playhouse, 100 Washington Square.

There will be three road companies of "Craig's Wife" next season, Rosalie Stewart announced yesterday. Chrystal Herne will continue in one of them.

MONTREAL AND QUEBEC FACE A FILM BOYCOTT

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, April 16.—Owing to censorship in the Province of Quebec, Montreal and other cities will be boycotted by United States film distributers after Aug. 1. The Province has a Board of Moving Picture Censors which is much criticised at times. The City of Quebec has a Civic Board of Censors, and the theatres in that city are up in arms and in the courts because of the civic board's action.

Announcement of the boycott came today at a meeting here of local motion picture distributers. Colonel John Cooper of Toronto, President of the Motion Picture Distributers, came here for the meeting.

"Orders have been received by local distributers from New York not to take any more orders for presentation of films in Quebec after Aug. 1," Colonel Cooper said.

"Were any reasons given?" he was asked.

"No."

"Why have such orders come?"

"We attribute them to the censorship here," answered Colonel Cooper. "Motion picture censorship in Quebec is the worst in the world. We have had trouble with the censor board here for years.

"Quebec has a perfect right to make its own laws, but we reserve the right as to whether we will live under these laws or do business under these laws.

"For years the distributers have been faced with this situation of their films, acceptable anywhere else, coming up here and being cut by the censor board. So much has this been done that Quebec has not proved a profitable market, and for that reason there is no use doing business here.

"Quebec represents less than 1 per cent. of the market for films on this continent. While there are censorship boards in all Provinces of the Dominion except Prince Edward Island, there are censor boards in only six States of the Union—New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

"There are 150 moving picture houses in Quebec, 40 of them in Montreal. There are 13 film exchanges in this city which supply the films to the theatres.

"The Quebec board cut as much as 2,000 feet out of 5,000 feet in one film in the last year. Are we going to stand for that? Better it was not shown. Not only is it a case of professional pride, but it is difficult to make money under such circumstances."

J. C. Adams, manager of Loew's Theatre, Montreal, issued a statement that managers of local moving picture houses would close their houses on August 1. Pictures are being ruined by the eliminations of the censorship, he said.

For some years there has been a steady campaign by Le Devoir of Montreal and L'Action Catholique of the city of Quebec against American made films. These papers' contention has been that the American film is against moral principles.

Final Drama Contest Tonight.

The final of the intersettlement play contests of the United Neighborhood Houses of New York will be held tonight at the Union Settlement, 237 East 104th Street. Four houses will take part—the Hudson Guild, presenting "Release"; Madison House, "Boots"; the Recreation Rooms, "Jubilee," and the School Settlement, "A Desert Dream." A silver cup will be given to the winning group. More than fifty plays have been presented in the contest since Fall.

"A Friend Indeed" Here on April 26.

"A Friend Indeed," a play of newspaper life, by Clayton Hamilton and Bernard Voigt, will open at the Central Park Theatre, 108 West Fifty-ninth Street, on Monday evening, April 26. The cast will include Ruth Easton, Constance Cameron, Jocquin Souther, Ashley Cooper, Theodore St. Johns, Albert H. Allen, Ralph Hogue, J. G. Cooke and Gertrude Maurin. Mary Forrest is making the production.

THE QUEST OF POLAR LAND.

Narratives of the preparations for the polar expeditions, which are like planning a strategic campaign before the great ordeal that will end in triumph or failure, make fascinating reading from day to day. AMUNDSEN declares that he is not engaged in a race for the Pole, but is interested only in the discovery of new land. Lieut. Commander BYRD thinks that there is an element of competition in the three enterprises and seems to be as eager to fly an airplane to the Pole as to find land between it and Alaska. Captain WILKINS has already flown seventy miles beyond the furthest north from the direction of Point Barrow, to get a glimpse of a snow land where the map shows nothing. When he says that, as PEARY attained the Pole, he is concerned only about geographical discovery, no one feels like disputing him. Yet his plan includes a flight over the "top of the world" to Spitzbergen. The explorers may protest at this stage of the game that they are not rivals, but each would doubtless be glad to tell the world by radio that he was the first to descry land where none was known to be and to drop the flag, or to make a landing, to claim it for the United States or for Norway. Newspaper readers are waiting for the start of the expeditions from their bases, knowing that the first to get away may report success by a radio message in a day or two, or perhaps in less than twenty-four hours, they are disposed to look upon the quest as a race or a sporting event, protest as the explorers may.

The voyage of the airship Norge to Leningrad has been watched by friends of Captain AMUNDSEN with interest. She has proved airworthy, and there is no reason to doubt that she can be taken to Spitzbergen in fair weather as easily as she was navigated from Italy. But a halt at Leningrad has become necessary because her shed at King's Bay will not be ready for two weeks. All should be well if she arrives by May 1. Her supply of hydrogen will be on the spot, but it is reported that "the loading, equipping and testing of the Norge "for her dash across the Pole for "Alaska may take two or three "weeks." It is not likely that she will fail to pick up Spitzbergen readily on her voyage from Leningrad unless fogs are thick. The Spitzbergen archipelago covers a good deal of space. The island of West Spitzbergen (or New Friesland) has an area of about 15,200 square miles, and is therefore almost twice as large as the State of Maryland. The passage to King's Bay should be quickly made by the Norge as soon as Captain AMUNDSEN signals that the shed and mooring mast are ready. The chances are that her prow will be pointed for the Pole before the end of May. But AMUNDSEN is too experienced an explorer to make haste carelessly. In the matter of geographical discovery, he will have in the use of the Norge a great advantage over WILKINS and BYRD in their airplanes. Even if he is not the first to sight land in the great area north of Beaufort Sea, he should be able to send out to the world a full description of it. He will be prepared to anchor his ship and descend for a leisurely inspection of newly discovered country.

Until the Chantier drops her anchor in King's Bay the fortunes of Lieut. Commander BYRD will not invite discussion. But it should not take him many days to prepare for his first flight to Cape Morris Jesup. He will have to go to and fro to establish a base there, but the distance can be covered each way in a few hours. He is a competent aviator and works quickly. This we know from his participation in the MacMillan expedition of last year. He will launch out for the Pole only when he is fully prepared. That should be in the month of May. In his flights between Fairbanks and Point Barrow Captain WILKINS has exhibited a capacity as a navigator and leader that proves he can cope with the hazards and difficulties of Arctic flying. Moreover, he is greatly daring with all his phlegm. As to all these ventures it should be remembered that the Arctic is inscrutable. No one can tell how it will award its prizes.

EXCESSES IN LABOR TROUBLES.

It is well that New Jersey Judges are to review the proceedings of New Jersey Sheriffs and policemen. Some of the actions of the latter in connection with the textile strike in Passaic and other towns seem to have been arbitrary and high-handed. The courts will decide whether the rights of individuals have been encroached upon, and whether the authority conferred by law has been exceeded or abused. New Jersey, like other States, has statutes providing severe penalties for sedition. The question is, of course, whether the police in an excess of zeal, or acting under too sweeping orders, have interpreted as seditious utterances which are not properly open to that charge. We all know that in a long-continued strike, where friction accumulates and exasperation mounts on both sides, excesses are likely to occur on the part both of the workers and of the authorities.

There appears to be no doubt that efforts have been made by agitators to make use of the textile strike for purposes beyond the immediate demands of the employes. The proof seems conclusive that a group of extreme radicals stands ready to attach itself to any industrial disturbance for the sake of interfering with the ordinary methods of the more steady-going labor unions, and of organizing an attack upon the whole capitalist system and our institutions of government. We had demonstrations in this city on Thursday of the lengths to which the "lunatic fringe," as the American Federation of Labor regards it, is ready to go simply with the object of making all the trouble possible and weakening the power of trade unions. Of course, such violence and recklessness on one side do not justify lawless measures of repression on the other. It is for the courts of justice to hold the scales even in such collisions, and there is every reason to believe that they will do so.

THE UNTIRED BUSINESS MAN.

Making a virtue of their necessity, independent art theatres of New York acknowledge a certain dependence upon finance. Four of them—the Provincetown Players, the Greenwich Village Theatre, the Actors' Theatre and the Stagers—have met and resolved upon "a clearing house." With "financing" activities" of this sort they confess themselves "unfamiliar"; but they confidently rely upon the aid of "business men who have "realized the importance of these the-"atres"—of which gentry, they declare, there has of late been a marked increase. To the tired business man, who is never so much so as when his wife takes him to experimental art productions, the proposed clearing house will be reminiscent of that fabled village, the inhabitants of which lived entirely by taking in one another's wash. Fie upon him! "He's "for a jig or a tale of bawdry, or he "sleeps; prithee, say on."

The fact is that modern progress in the theatre owes a debt to the business man which is already considerable and which may well be increased by the proposed financing activity. There was the New Theatre of fifteen years ago. It was a clearing house to the extent of two or three millions. But it was worth it. It taught the founders that not money nor social prestige nor yet financial experience as gained by the simple-minded banker is capable of producing a live institution of the arts. It taught them that those early advisers were right, though not business men, who warned them that such ventures rightly begin with a producing staff, a company of players and an audience, not with brick and mortar and a "diamond horseshoe" of fashionables—that the oyster makes the shell, in short, and not the shell the oyster. Thereafter those of the New Theatre founders who remained true to the faith looked for an institution already spawned and growing, and then set about feeding it. The Washington Square Players were their first discovery. During the war the organization went under, but for no fault of its own. It cleared later as the Theatre Guild and is now, as it seems, independent of the clearing house.

The four institutions that stand in the expectant attitude have done a lot of queer things, many of them failures artistically and financially. But, as the untired business man now knows, that is to be expected of experimental theatres. Nobody is likely to make the same mistake again. And always, however groping the execution, the impulse was artistic, the idea alluring. Sometimes there was a transcendent novelty, a success both artistic and financial. Such theatres are true laboratories of dramatic art, devoted to researches at once fascinating and fruitful. If they can get together on any sensible basis, they deserve to clear the untired business man considerably. Incidentally, they should be able to clear one another of a quantum of their unworkable ideas.

HIGH-PRESSURE HOSPITALITY.

Obviously, the 300 American hotel men now touring England enjoy limited opportunities for studying the British press. Otherwise they might be wondering why so much is being written about the need of speeding up the pace of life in Great Britain on the American model. On Thursday the visiting innkeepers did almost nothing except leave London in the morning, make a "complete" tour of Oxford, go on to Stratford-on-Avon, listen to an address of welcome from the Corporation, donate $1,000 to the rebuilding of the recently burned Shakespeare Theatre, catch a train back for London in time for a series of 7 o'clock gala dinners, and attend a reception at Lansdowne House at 10:30. The trustworthy correspondents report that the Americans are visibly cracking under the strain.

It is not inconceivable that British hosts are now engaged in repaying us for the classic Englishman in New York who proposes to run down to St. Louis before lunch. They may be showing that a tight little island, precisely because it is tight and crowded with things worth looking at, has its own advantages for providing American visitors with the hustle on which they presumably live. The fact is well established that no American at home ever works so hard at his business or at play as he does in seeing Europe. But on the whole the motive in the present schedule of entertainment seems to be not revenge but the warmest kind of hospitality, wherein the first duty is to give the guest what he is accustomed to. Americans abroad have become used to being offered ice-water twenty-four hours in the day at great inconvenience and expense. We can only pay tribute to the sense of British hospitality which has now set itself to run 300 American visitors off their feet. If they are tiring under the pace, it is easy to imagine what their British hosts are suffering, though the ordeal has been cheerfully assumed. Among the possible compensations is the opportunity now afforded to the British entertainers to visit Oxford and Stratford, by analogy with the native New Yorker who makes acquaintance with the Aquarium and the Statue of Liberty in the company of a cousin from Omaha.

The impression of English hotels and hotel methods carried away by the American visitors is bound to be of the very best. After a tour of Oxford and Stratford, and a dinner and a reception in London, within the space of sixteen hours, it must be a very poor London hotel manager that will fail to induce the most perfect rest.

THE ORATORICAL CONTEST.

It has been gratifying to THE TIMES to record from day to day the progress of the Oratorical Contest on the Constitution, held under its auspices. The interest shown in it by the schools, including both teachers and pupils, has been keen and inspiring. After all the preliminary local contests, the climax was approached last night in the more than forty competitions, for City boroughs, counties, and districts, which were scheduled. Step by step the finals are approached, which will come next month and result in the selection of speakers to enter the grand national contest at Washington. The evidence at hand makes it clear that several elements have entered into the spirit and success with which the whole affair has been conducted. There is the natural love of public speaking, also the stimulus of local school pride, the appeal of the prizes offered, and with it all, we believe, a desire to make a practical study of the Constitution, the supreme law of the land. To all who have cooperated in carrying on this contest—the school authorities, the students, the judges—THE TIMES extends its warm congratulations and thanks.

COAL RATES AND MARKETS.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has issued an order for reconsideration of the railway rates on hard and soft coal. During the strike the commission lowered rates on bituminous so as to make the supply available in markets ordinarily inaccessible to it. The emergency rates expire April 30, unless the railways voluntarily extend them pending reconsideration. The anthracite producers oppose extension. They naturally wish to free themselves from unwelcome competition. Soft coal producers desire to preserve their new market. Thus it appears that the competition between carriers becomes competition between markets and fuels. Before the era of regulation the railways made their rates in order to move goods, and prices became the regulator. The commission altered the relation of rates on hard and soft coal on no transportation theory at all, but in order to relieve the distress of coal consumers. It will be interesting to see how the commission will extricate itself from its dilemma when the arguments of the conflicting interests are balanced. The reduced rates are not unreasonable, as appears from the effort to extend them. They would serve to moderate the hard coal price monopoly permanently. As there is now no scarcity of coal, it would seem that the commission is charged rather with a duty toward the railways than toward either the producers or consumers of either sort of coal.

The incident shows that the regulation of railway rates is incidentally a regulation of markets and prices. The original idea of regulating railways was to punish their immoralities and prevent new ones. It is desirable to do that, and in fact it has pretty nearly been done. Regulation of railway rates can go no further in the direction of reduction, but there is opening a wider field in the regulation of rates by all common carriers, by either land or water, without subsidy to any and without prohibition of reasonable profit to any. The relation of rates between various competitive carriers is quite as important as the fixing of rates for any one class.

THE OPERA SEASON.

The Metropolitan Opera House closes its doors tonight after one of the longest seasons it has ever attempted. It has given a greater number of operas in these twenty-seven weeks than ever before, and probably more "novelties" than in any previous season. The company's reticence in obtruding its financial affairs upon public notice prevents any definite idea whether its prosperity has been as gratifying as its enterprise; but the size of the audiences at its frequent performances and the prices charged for tickets—we do not say they are too high—suggest a great income. The lavishness of the expense suggests also a great outgo. We can only hope that the balance is rewarding.

About the quality of the performances there has been, as always, difference of opinion. Whether the Metropolitan has maintained its world-wide reputation as a chief focus of operatic art is a question that all will not answer alike. Certainly the standard of singing to be heard there is not such as many people not yet tottering to the grave will recall from years gone by. There cannot be mustered, for example, a roster of singers capable of giving a true performance of MOZART'S great operas and others of periods that some will say are bygone. Of course the Metropolitan cannot be blamed for that. It may not succeed in enlisting the services of all the best singers in all styles of operatic art; but it gets many of them. The disheartening thing is that there are not enough to go around.

One result of this is to place an emphasis that never used to be put on excellence of ensemble, on "atmosphere," on suitability of mounting, on dramatic verity. Here, again, some will dispute that all has been done that could or should be, or that the highest intelligence has been given the freest play. But for what is vouchsafed us in this way we should be truly thankful, even though it cannot take the place of the supreme singing that for three hundred years has been one chief justification of opera.

The Metropolitan has essayed avoidance of an old charge, and has "done something" for American art and American singers this season. Perhaps it strained a little too hard in that direction, and without sufficient artistic justification. There is no need to recapitulate the exciting doings by which some American singers were greeted. As for the American composer, the Metropolitan skillfully avoided any intensification of the debate of the question of English singing by giving an American pantomime ballet, Mr. CARPENTER'S "Skyscrapers," instead of a vocalized opera. The result of all this rescue of Americanism has been discussed in our columns devoted to criticism and need not be gone over here. We fear that the general impression is that American art has not gained greatly.

The forty-eight operas and ballets, the eleven "novelties" and "revivals," produced on the great stage make a record that ought to give answer to the charge of monotony sometimes brought against the Metropolitan's repertory. The results have been more fortunate in interest and importance than in some previous seasons. On the whole, it appears that the Metropolitan is entitled to no small measure of self-gratulation; it is entitled to say that the organist is doing his best and that the public should not shoot.

TOPICS OF THE TMES.

Terrible, but Is It True?

No one is going to be frightened by the statements about a great plot to turn the United States into a theocracy, made by President CHURCH of the Carnegie Institute before the Senate committee. Yet he is a serious person, and there is more than a little evidence to prove at least that not a few people in the country will make the conspiracy succeed if they can.

They are already attaining their ends in part. Not to speak of prohibition, there is the campaign against the teaching of evolution. That has been prohibited in schools and colleges depending on public money by two States, and their example is likely to be followed in nobody knows how many more. The next logical step is to secure the passage of anti-evolution laws applying to all schools and colleges, and it is impossible to doubt that such is their ambition.

Mr. CHURCH mentioned tobacco as the next object of attack by those eager to enforce by means of law their private notions of virtue. Several States have tried to ban the cigarette, and though their success has not been brilliant anywhere, the determination is there. And every triumph of this sort leads to new efforts. In time, perhaps, there will be a war on hot biscuits, which many folk sincerely believe to be deleterious. Against cosmetics, bobbed hair and short skirts a censorious army already is talking fiercely, and it would resort to action the moment it saw a chance of winning. Articulate and noisy minorities can intimidate Legislatures with fatal ease, and they know it.

One striking and plausible statement made by Mr. CHURCH was to the effect that if the Roman Catholics were using the methods to which some Protestant organizations have resorted, the members of those organizations would be carrying torches and setting them to Catholic churches.

There Are Limits to Logic.

Against tobacco the zealots are not likely to go far, for though arguments against its use are not lacking, it has no such black record as alcohol. It does not "sharpen the parricidal axe" or deprive the orphan child of shoes to an extent measurable by the statistician.

Indeed, each triumph in the way of prohibitions by law renders the next triumph not easier, but more difficult. In time the saving grace of common sense makes itself felt, and then there is a return to such arguments as those which, before the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, steadily were making the country more and more temperate. When a railroad told a man that if he drank he could not have a job, nobody complained, and no bootlegging class was created. Socially, then, drunkenness was going the way that dueling went—and snuff-taking. New things are different because use as well as abuse has been forbidden.

They Shouldn't Work for Rewards.

Commissioner MCLAUGHLIN has been earning commendation so steadily that it is with hesitation any adverse criticism is ventured with respect to anything he does. Yet it is at least debatable whether he is wise in changing the old rule that policemen must not take money rewards from those to whom, in the performance of regular police duty, they have chanced to render special service.

The capture of the Whittemore gang was certainly fine work, and the Jewelers' Association showed only proper appreciation when it raised and offered $1,300 as a reward for it. But in dividing the greater part of that sum among the men directly concerned in the capture, instead of putting it all into the Police Pension Fund, perhaps the Commissioner did something which in at least a small degree will lessen police activity in cases where no such reward is in sight.

It is highly creditable to our policemen that they do not demand or expect tips. That the Commissioner should be prompt to reward with promotion and other marks of distinction special displays of intelligence and courage is all right. But the policeman should be content with his salary—if he cannot get a higher one—and with no addition to it except glory.

Presumably Commissioner MCLAUGHLIN has a defense for what he did in the Whittemore case, or he would not have done it, but, on further reflection, he may decide that he made a mistake.

He Turns Merit to Fault.

So often have the friends of college athletics put first in the list of their merits the training they give in "team-work," the sacrifice of self for the general good of the group, that it is startling to note that Dr. STEWART PATON, the eminent Princeton psychologist, makes that very quality a reason for finding fault with student sports as conducted. Constant coaching from the side lines, with few opportunities for playing the game in the student's own way, he says, produces not individual or original thinking but mass thinking, and Dr. PATON does not like that.

He did not deny that "team-work" produced results in the shape of victories that could be won in no other way, but perhaps he does not care much for victories so won. On the other hand, does not the student have to do some original thinking, or at least some thinking that for him is new, before he consents to subordinate personal glory to that of his team? He doesn't do that by the light of unassisted nature, for it is against instinct and natural impulse as they exist.

"Human Element" at Geneva.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Indispensable to a just and understanding criticism is sympathy. To an unsympathetic observer nothing is done right. Thus, all that really happened at Geneva recently is that the device did not work like clockwork, but proved itself permeated with the human element. Anything amiss about that? What would the League antagonists have said if the Locarno compact had been rushed through without a dissenting votes? With glee they would have protested that the League is but a rubber stamp. The Locarno compact fallen of ratification by reason of the manner in which it was handled. Certain mental reservations, and even more, certain after-thoughts, brought about its defeat. I am not sorry.

GABRIEL WELLS.

FRIENDS.

Into the woods I went, to find
The message of the Spring—
There's comfort in those dim, sweet paths,
In every growing thing,
And heart-break lessens when one hears
The wise trees whispering.

"Courage, my child!" The old pines crooned.
"To faith's kind hand hold fast!"
The oaks said: "Sorrow's sea is deep,
But haven's won at last!"
And tenderly the birches touched
My bent head as I passed.

The little voices of the woods
Breathed sympathy, the breeze
Dried tear-wet eyes—and oh, the calm
Communion of the trees!
Let human friends do all they will—
Can they give more than these?

MAZIE V. CARUTHERS.

AMENDING THE PROHIBITION LAW.

Powers of Congress and the States to Define Intoxicants—Origin of the Half of One Per Cent. Limit.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with much interest the letter of Mr. Louis Marshall in your issue today. Not only was Mr. Marshall absolutely right in his opinion as to the powers of Congress, but the United States Supreme Court has gone much further than the opinion of Chief Justice White, in the case of "Ruppert versus Caffey," from which Mr. Marshall quoted. That case was one of the earlier cases which sustained the validity of both the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act.

Together with ex-Judge William M. K. Olcott, I had the pleasure of carrying to the United States Supreme Court the most recent case in which the powers of Congress were tested. I personally wrote the brief in the United States Supreme Court and argued the appeal in April, 1924, in the case of James Everard's Breweries versus Ralph A. Day, as Prohibition Director. This case and the companion case, Burke versus Blair, which was argued by Mr. Samuel W. Moore, were embodied in the unanimous opinion of the United States Supreme Court, rendered on June 9, 1924. These two cases attacked the constitutionality of the Willis-Campbell act, which is a supplement to the Volstead act. The Willis-Campbell act deprived physicians of the right to prescribe malt liquors as medicines, and also revoked the permits, which had previously allowed the breweries to make malt liquors in limited quantities for medicinal purposes.

Not only has the court reinforced the principle of the case to which Mr. Marshall referred, but Justice Sanford, who wrote for the court, went much further and said:

"It is clear that if the act is within the authority delegated to Congress by the Eighteenth Amendment, its validity is not impaired by reason of any power reserved to the States. The words 'concurrent power,' as used in the second section of the amendment, 'do not mean joint power, or require that legislation thereunder by Congress, to be effective, shall be approved or sanctioned by the several States or any of them'; and the power confided to Congress, while not exclusive, 'is in no wise dependent on or affected by action or inaction on the part of several States or any of them.'" (National Prohibition Cases, 253, U. S. 350, 387.) And if the act is within the power confided to Congress, the Tenth Amendment, by its very terms, has no application, since it only reserves to the States "power not delegated to the United States by the Constitution." See McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 406; Lottery Case, 188 U. S. 321, 357.

There is no doubt that Mr. Marshall's opinion in regard to the proposed referendum is sound. All that can be gained by such a referendum is the expression of the popular desire as to repeal or modification of the Volstead act.

Whether it would be worth while to print ballots and go to the expense of an election for such purpose is questionable. No State has any power to define what is intoxicating; that power rests solely in Congress.

NATHAN BALLIN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I suggest very respectfully that you and Mr. Louis Marshall seem quite amusingly at cross-purposes in your little controversy on constitutional law?

Of course Congress cannot delegate to the States any power not sanctioned by the Constitution. But surely Mr. Marshall does not mean to assert that Congress is bound to do any defining of what is intoxicating and what is not, or of what alcoholic content shall be permitted.

Suppose Congress should repeal the precious Volstead act and pass another prohibiting and making a penal offense the sale, transportation &c., of any intoxicating thing containing alcohol? That is all Congress is required by due consideration of the Eighteenth Amendment to prohibit. It is all the amendment purports to prohibit. If Congress did that, then in every case the prosecution would have to prove, not that the fluid in question contained some trifling amount of alcohol, but that it could get an ordinary, full-grown human being drunk.

Now, does Mr. Marshall mean to say that if Congress did that the State of Kansas would not be at liberty to prohibit within its borders the stuff containing over one-half of 1 per centum?

Of course, while the amendment remains in force, no State can get a right, by Congressional permission or otherwise, to render that non-intoxicating in law which is intoxicating in fact, or, for that matter, while a valid Congressional definition is in force, to nullify within its borders that definition, either pursuant to Congressional permission or otherwise.

A Question for the Courts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you permit me to express my appreciation of the editorial published in yesterday's issue entitled "The 'Admitted Falsehood'?"

To my mind, Congress had no more right to define intoxicating liquor as anything containing over one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol than they had to declare that it meant candy or baked beans.

It may be within the power of a legislative body to define certain terms in an act which they are adopting and which has no relation to a constitutional provision, but the terms of a constitutional provision cannot be interpreted by anybody except the courts, and it is for the courts to determine what intoxicating liquor means in common usage and as defined in dictionaries.

OUTLOOK FOR SYRIA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I trust that your readers have read carefully the interview which you published in your number of the 12th inst. had with the Marquis Theodoli in reference to the troubles in Syria. One need not agree with him in everything that he said, but the difficulties which the French have to face there stand out in evil eminence. A little over a year ago I had the good fortune to pay another visit to Syria, and to see and to hear about all that was going on there. On account of the fine university that American interest entertains at Beirut, we of this country are concerned especially in that part of the East.

Let us not forget that Syria has always been a centre of controversy and a battlefield of passions. A number of ancient civilizations left their remains there; a number of religious organizations of far-away memory have not been extinguished. One need only mention the Maronite Church, the Greek Orthodox Church, the Jacobite Church, the Uniate-Catholic Church, the Latin Church, the Protestant Church, the Jews, the Mohammedans, the Ansariyeh, the Druses, the Yezidi Kurds, &c. When the French accepted the mandate they did so with scant consideration of the many varieties of life that are to be found there and of the internal disorganization that was prevalent. It was felt by the French to be a duty, and not a very inspiriting one, especially as the Turkish Government that had preceded them had made a point of intensifying this disorganization wherever it could in order the better to lay the foundation of its own power. Through the establishing of schools and the assisting of those that already existed, France is raising up a new generation which will make these divergent elements come to heel, which will produce a Syrian commonwealth that will shout the language of united patriotism and that will be a new factor in cutting in amid the racial and religious conflicts. Let us not forget that it takes time to do away with misguided passions.

Mussolini and the King.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your attention is invited to page 1,653 of the Congressional Record—Senate of this Congress (April 1, 1926)—wherein appears the statement made by Senator McKellar of Tennessee which reads in part as follows:

"When a revolution in Italy came near to Rome the King capitulated and accepted three million and a quarter dollars per year from the Italian Government under Mr. Mussolini.

"The only difference between the regime in Italy and the regime in Russia was that in Russia the Communists killed the royal family and took charge of the Government, while in Italy this Communist, who had been a Communist all his life, took charge of the Government and did not kill the royal family. He simply bought them."

This is not the fact. The King of Italy has never accepted any bribe and it is highly improper for a Senator to make a statement in the Senate where the executive branch of the United States Government has no representative and can make no reply to a false statement concerning the ruler of a friendly nation and with whom our relations are most peaceful. The exact figures of the amount received by the King of Italy from his country and the allowances paid to other members of the royal family are on file with the Chief of Western European Division, Department of State, Washington, D. C., and an examination of the same will reveal that all the King receives is eleven million lire, which is in American dollars equivalent to $456,000 a year.

The speech of Representative Bloom in the House of Jan. 14, 1926, is a complete answer to Senator MCKELLAR.

The Order of the Sons of Italy in America, Inc., Grand Lodge of the State of New York, which is a thoroughly American organization, vigorously protests against the conduct on the part of any legislator, which tends to disrupt the good-will and international friendliness existing between two countries like the United States and Italy that have given so much toward world progress and stability.

Trees in Central Park.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Gallatin says that the holes for large new trees in Central Park are even wider than I thought necessary, but my main point was that there should be several feet of fresh rich soil under these trees. Today I watched the planting of a large tree. The hole was between two and three feet deep. About one foot of fresh soil was put into it, then the tree, which had a ball of soil 18 inches deep about its roots. This means that there are two and a half feet of good soil under the tree instead of the five feet which are needed. The roots will go through this in a couple of years and then strike the hardpan and sometimes rock beneath, and then in a storm the tree will blow down. W. J. Dean, the great English authority, says failing food supply, parasitic fungi and storms are the most potent agencies in killing trees. It would be interesting to know how many trees have died in Central Park in the last few years.

These newly planted trees will probably do quite well for two or three years, which is as long as they are usually guaranteed. After that there may be a new Park Commissioner who will say, as Mr. Gallatin very naturally has said about Mrs. Sage's rhododendrons, that he was not responsible. That this system will ultimately result in a desert seems probable. If any one thinks this view over-pessimistic, let him search for trees which have been in the park a few years and see if there are any in the southern half of it which look healthy and well nourished, like, for instance, the plane trees in front of the Frick house at Fifth Avenue and Seventieth Street. Of course, the park is a very difficult proposition. The soil is shallow and rocky and the natural plant food has been ignorantly burned, instead of being carefully conserved in pits and dug back into the soil every Autumn. The large paved roads cause unnatural dryness, and the feet of the children and hors devastating hardness. These are a few of the reasons why a great deal of fresh soil is needed where new trees are concerned.

And one from New York looking at the trees and parkways of Boston must blush with shame—for is that fortunate city wisdom and foresight have been lavished on the parks, largely because of the help and inspiration of Professor Charles S. Sargent.

NEW MEN ARE ADDED TO HARVARD'S STAFF

McILWAIN SUCCEEDS HART

Takes Eaton Chair of Government—Three Made Full Professors and Others Promoted.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, April 16.—Additions to the faculties of the Engineering, Law and Business Schools of Harvard University were included among the promotions and appointments announced today.

Arthur E. Wells, a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1906 and for the past six years a consulting engineer and investigator, with headquarters in New York City, becomes professor of metallurgy.

Bayre MacNeil, Los Angeles lawyer, a graduate of the University of California in 1908 and of the Harvard Law School, with honors, in 1911, is appointed professor of law.

Harry B. Skilliman, who received his law degree from the University of Michigan in 1886 and who, since then, has practiced law in Indianapolis and Washington, served in the office of the United States Solicitor of Internal Revenue and done legal editorial work, is named associate professor of business research for five years.

Professor Wells has long been identified with mining and refining interests in Colorado and Utah, and has been an expert for the United States Bureau of Mines.

Three members of the Harvard Faculty are promoted to full professorships. Assistant Professor Edward S. King, a teacher at Harvard since 1897, becomes Phillips Professor of Astronomy.

George S. Forbes, Harvard, '02, who since graduation, except for two years as an associate in chemistry at Bryn Mawr, has taught in Harvard, is named Professor of Chemistry.

Emory L. Chaffee, M. I. T., '07, who obtained his master's and doctor's degrees at Harvard, is appointed Professor of Physics for three years. Professor Chaffee began his Harvard teaching in 1908.

Professor Percy W. Bridgman has been named Hollis professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, the second oldest endowed professorship in Harvard.

Professor Clifford H. Moore, Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and Chairman of the Committee on Instruction, has been chosen Pope Professor of Latin.

Professor Charles H. Mellwain, Princeton graduate and teacher at Miami University, Princeton and Bowdoin before coming to Harvard in 1911, takes the place of Professor A. B. Hart, resigned, as Eaton Professor of the Science of Government.

Professor Francis H. Bohlen, who came from the University of Pennsylvania in 1925, is named Langdell Professor of Law.

Three associate professors are named as follows: Edward B. Hill, '94, Harvard teacher since 1908, Associate Professor of Music; William C. Graustein, '10, who became a Harvard instructor in 1913, Associate Professor of Mathematics, and Samuel R. Detwiler, graduate of Yale in 1914 and teacher there and at Peking Union Medical College, China, before coming to Harvard in 1922, Associate Professor of Zoology.

Five assistant professors are appointed for three years as follows: Gordon M. Fair, M. I. T. and Harvard, '16, Assistant Professor of Sanitary Engineering; Robert F. Field, Brown, '06, Assistant Professor of Applied Physics; Bremer W. Pond, Dartmouth, '07, Assistant Professor of Landscape Architecture; John C. Slater, Rochester, '20, Assistant Professor of Physics, and Melville C. Whipple, Assistant Professor of Sanitary Chemistry.

THAYER CONFERS DEGREES.

Dartmouth's Civil Engineering School Holds 54th Commencement.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., April 16.—The Thayer School of Civil Engineering, associated with Dartmouth College, held its fifty-fourth graduation exercises here this afternoon, when degrees were conferred by President Ernest Martin Hopkins on K. P. Coykendall of El Paso, Texas; J. O. Martin of West Lebanon, N. H.; H. A. Schroedel of New Britain, Conn., and C. T. Washburn of Northampton, Mass.

Present at the ceremonies were the following overseers of the school: Professor A. W. French of Worcester Polytechnic Institute; Otis E. Hovey, assistant chief engineer of the American Bridge Company; Edwin J. Morrison, President of the Hastings Pavement Company of New York City, and Arthur C. Tozzer, Vice President and director of the Turner Construction Company.

This evening the members of the graduating classes of the Tuck and Thayer Schools held their annual joint dinner. H. B. Thayer, '79, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, was the principal speaker. As the Tuck School graduation will not be held until next month, the members of the class of 1926 went as candidates for a degree instead of actual graduates.

SPELL IT "ESTHONIA" HERE.

Geographic Board Will Not Drop the "h," but British Board Does.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Although the Royal Geographic Society has adopted the spelling of Estonia in place of Esthonia, the United States Geographic Board has not followed suit. All official Government documents still spell it with an h, as also does the official diplomatic list issued by the State Department carrying names of members of the Diplomatic Corps here.

Edward A. Huse, foreman of the night proofroom of the Government Printing Office, a member of the United States Geographic Board, said tonight that body adheres to the form "Esthonia."

MAY CALL EXTRA SESSION.

Coolidge Will Follow Senate's Wish in Judge English's Case.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—President Coolidge has not followed the charges against Judge English sufficiently to reach a conclusion whether the Senate should proceed with the trial immediately or wait until Fall.

The President will be guided by the Senate. If that body should deem a special session necessary, the President is willing to act in accordance with that body's desires.

The impression is that the Senate will defer the trial until after the November election, and ask that the trial be set for a month before the next session of Congress in December.

CHIESA ART BRINGS $395,710 IN SALES

PART II TOTALS $351,850

Western Buyer Gives $85,000 for a da Messina Painting of 15th Century—Sale Continues Today.

The first of two sessions of the sale of Part III of the Achillito Chiesa collection, held yesterday at the American Art Galleries, brought $43,860. The second session is today. Part II, consisting of Italian primitives and Renaissance paintings, was sold last evening and amounted to $351,850. The grand total was $395,710.

The art objects auctioned in the afternoon were Italian majolicas, French enamels, Gothic ivories, Renaissance textiles, lace and antique furniture. A sculptured pearwood "Madonna and Child," 56 inches tall, brought the afternoon's highest price, $3,600, being bid in by Ernnie Canessa. He also bid in another pearwood Madonna for $2,300, a Deruta majolica plate with coat of arms for $1,800 and also paid $1,760 for a Deruta plate and $1,000 for an Urbino plate.

Mrs. C. Milhiser bid in a polychromed Florentine terra-cotta bust of a young girl for $1,150, and D. W. Walters paid $1,200 for a fifteenth century Botticelli green cut velvet and needle-painted chasuble.

The big price of the evening was $85,000, paid by David W. Walters, a new buyer from the West, for the "Energetic Portrait of a Sicilian Patrician in Ecclesiastical Costume," by Antonella da Messina, a fifteenth century painter.

The bidding was rapid-fire, less than ten minutes sufficing for the sale, starting at $10,000.

Mr. Walters also bid in for $7,000 a "Madonna and Child" from the workshop of Fra Angelico.

The Kleinberger Galleries paid $14,500 for Van Der Weyden's "The Holy Family in a Landscape." The same buyer also bought the Crespi Madonna, half-length in profile, holding a laughing Christ Child, attributed to Michelangelo Buonarroti, for $5,500. The same buyer paid $5,600 for "Departure of Three Warriors" of the Florentine school. The decorations and costumes are those about the middle of the fifteenth century in Florence. They paid the same price for "A Triumph" of the same school.

Ercole Canessa made numerous purchases and will probably take many of them back to Italy. For Lorenzetti's "Crucifixion," with a gold background of Bulino work, he paid $5,600. For a "Madonna and Child," school of Giotto, he paid $5,000. For da Panicale's "Madonna and Child" he paid $6,000, and for del Conti's "Portrait of a Man" Mr. Canessa paid $6,500. For Lorenzetti's triptych, "Madonna, Child and Saints," Mr. Canessa paid $26,000. He also purchased Gaddi's panel with life-size Madonna and Child for $16,000.

W. R. Hearst bought Lorenzo da Sen Severino's triptych, "Virgin and Child," for $3,000; "Madonna and Child," Florentine school, at $3,600, and Desco da Parto's "Solomon's Judgment," for $5,000.

Clapp & Graham bid in a fifteenth century polyptych from the Vivarini workshop, with a full-length "Madonna," for $6,800. They also paid $6,600 for Del Sellaio's "Madonna and Child." William Wendle paid $5,000 each for two Filippino Lippi's two paintings of the "Legend of Perseus." Scott & Fowles paid $6,000 for Correggio's "Mater Amabilis." Ferdinand Howald bid in Fungai's "Madonna and Child" for $3,700. P. W. French & Co. paid $3,800 for "A Triumph," of the Florentine school, and also paid $3,500 for another of the same title.

SIBERIA TO GET SLEEPERS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 16.—The International Sleeping Car Company has signed a convention with the Soviet Government restoring its concession to run fast, comfortable trains over the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

This concession was interrupted by the outbreak of the war and will become operative again early this Summer.

As the Russian railroads have a wider gauge than those of the rest of Europe, special dining and sleeping cars have to be used. There are still a number of these cars in Russia, where they will be repaired and put into service again.

Through service will be arranged to the Russian border by the prolongation of the north express from Paris to Berlin and from the border to Vladivostok.

M'ADOO TO BE HERE MONTH.

Former Secretary of Treasury Leases Park Av. Apartment.

William Gibbs McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, has leased an apartment at 270 Park Avenue, which he will occupy during a stay of about one month here, it was learned yesterday.

The former Cabinet member, who has been living in Los Angeles, leased the apartment through Douglas L. Elliman Company. Mr. McAdoo's visit, it was understood, would not be connected with politics.

LONDON, April 16.—The manuscript of Thomas Hardy's novel, "A Pair of Blue Eyes," brought £1,500 today at Hodgson's.

JARDINE ASKS CARE IN USE OF TIMBER

Tells Lumber Association That Forest Depletion Causes a Huge Annual Loss.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 16.—Forest depletion is causing a tremendous annual loss and presents a problem the solution of which is of vital interest to the American people, according to Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine, who addressed the annual convention of the National American Wholesale Lumber Association at the Ambassador Hotel here this evening.

Secretary and Mrs. Jardine will remain in the resort over the week-end, returning to Washington Sunday night.

"The Department of Agriculture," said the Secretary, "is especially interested in bringing about a more careful use of the timber we have and the growing of new forests to replace the old."

Secretary Jardine urged growing of timber as a crop on cut-over lands throughout the country and acquisition of such lands and forestation by the States.

"The Government," he said, "has so far bought 2,690,000 acres of forest land, and during the next ten years, according to present plans, hopes to buy 800,000 acres in the Northeast, 3,000,000 acres in the Appalachians, 2,500,000 acres in the South, and 2,500,000 acres in the lake States. The McNary-Woodruff bill, now pending in Congress, will, if passed, make some such program possible."

Secretary Jardine declared that in addition to public forestry, large-scale industrial forestry is a "feasible and worth-while undertaking which will furnish an attractive investment for American capital."

The convention unanimously endorsed and decided to share in the $1,000,000 advertising campaign of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association to promote lumber sales and the proper use of the product. A committee to formulate plans for such advertising will be named soon.

ROYAL RIGHTS UPHELD BY GERMAN CABINET

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 16.—The Luther Cabinet took the stand this afternoon that the private property rights of the former ruling families must be held inviolate and that under no circumstances must former royalty be deprived of all their wealth.

This was the compromise submitted by the People's Party, which is one in the Government coalition, and was based on the ground that the ex-royalties are now ordinary citizens and therefore are entitled to the same protection as that given to others. Whether they acquired this property through their being rulers of the country or through private purchases, the People's Party does not believe that a distinction should be made.

The Democratic Party, which is another in the coalition, is opposed to this attitude and, joined with the Socialists and Communists, can prevent its prevailing, especially since Minister of Justice Marx gave the ruling that the creation of a special court for dealing with the Prince's affairs requires an amendment to the Constitution and, therefore, requires a two-thirds vote in the Reichstag.

Meanwhile the Radicals are clamoring for the referendum which the Reichstag was forced to grant, since the recent preliminary vote on this issue showed 12,000,000 people favored the expropriation of ex-royal property and only 4,000,000 were necessary to compel the Reichstag to put the issue to a referendum.

In Nationalist quarters satisfaction is expressed over the Cabinet's action, which is lauded as a tendency of the Cabinet to lean toward the political right, though in its foreign policies the Cabinet still retains the support of the Socialists.

BROWNING'S BRIDE VISITS HIGH SCHOOL

Mrs. Frances Heenan Browning, the fifteen-year-old bride of Edward E. Browning, made arrangements yesterday to complete her schooling. She visited the Textile High School, where she was a student at the time of her marriage, and asked that her school credits be transferred to the Haldane School at Cold Spring, N. Y.

She then resumed her tour of the shops. While she was buying shoes, hats, coats and whatnot, her husband was again in the Seventh District Municipal Court at 220 West 125th Street. He is suing Nathan Wein of Arverne, L. I., for $6,500 which, he alleges, is due as rentals. Wein's defense was that he surrendered leases on the property in question several months ago and that the broker accepted the return.

Wein gave excerpts of Browning's philosophy of real estate success and Justice Abram Ellenbogen had difficulty keeping the laughter from halting the proceedings. Browning was called to the stand but did not testify, as the court adjourned the session.

Browning and his bride drew crowds that the police found hard to handle wherever they went. Last night they returned to the Gramatan Hotel, Pleasantville.

MRS. CAPERTON A BRIDE.

Peggy Browne of Stage and Screen Wed to Lieut. Berner, U. S. N.

Mrs. Margaret Caperton, known on the stage and screen as Peggy Browne, was married to Lieutenant Warren Kenneth Berner, U. S. N., in Coronado, Cal., on April 5, it was learned yesterday. Mrs. Berner is the former wife of Lieutenant Caperton of the Marine Corps, to whom she was married during the war. They were divorced in Los Angeles in 1924.

As Peggy Browne, Mrs. Berner made her début as an actress in Ziegfeld's "Midnight Frolic" in 1919, and later played in several Broadway productions before entering the motion picture field. Lieutenant Berner was graduated in 1923 from the Naval Academy, and is now attached to the U. S. S. Nevada at San Pedro, Cal.

BUILDING SOON TO BE RAZED

100 Paintings Will Be Auctioned as Well as House Furnishings, Statuary and Ornaments.

A private view of the paintings and furnishings of the John Jacob Astor residence at 840 Fifth Avenue was held yesterday by the American Art Association, which will conduct an auction sale of the art of the socially historic mansion on the premises for two days, beginning next Tuesday.

The house will be open for a free public exhibition tomorrow from 2 to 5 o'clock, and all day Monday. Admission to both the exhibition and auction sale will be by card only, which may be obtained from the offices of the association, 30 East Fifty-seventh Street.

Although Vincent Astor, who consigned the contents of the house to the association for sale, selected a portion of the furnishings for his new home in East Eightieth Street, the view yesterday displayed a notable array of furnishings and art collected by the Astor family over a long period of time. The objects of art are exhibited practically in the same manner as throughout the occupancy of their owners since 1910, when the house was practically reconstructed.

The residence, architecturally a chateau of the time of Francis I, and soon to be razed like the two famous Vanderbilt houses, is known as one of the most imposing mansions of New York. The interior appeared yesterday to have been set for one of the social functions for which the house had long been famous.

Entering the superb inner bronze gates, which are to be sold, the visitor finds the great reception hall ornamented with marble statuary of extreme beauty and lifelike proportions, and the walls paneled with canvases after Brussels cartoons.

Immediately facing the entrance, beyond the sculptured Caen stone fireplace, is the picture gallery, with its elaborately painted and gilded ceiling, once the scene of many brilliant dances, containing the hundred and more paintings to be offered.

These are mainly of the nineteenth century French school, embracing works by Corot, Diaz, van Marcke, Detaille, Bouguereau, Lefebvre, Bernc-Bellecour and Troyon.

The six superb brussels tapestries to be sold are of the seventeenth century and include "The Visit of Cyrus to the Defeated Croesus," and "The Tribute of the King to Cyrus," by Jacob van Zeunen, a "Caesar in Gaul," by Gavaert van der Streecken, and "The Flight of Pompey" by Guillaume van Leedfael, son of the famous weaver, Jan van Leedfael.

The removable fittings of the house, and the paneling, comprising carved woodwork, decorative canvases, wall sconces, and the like, form an important feature of the sale.

Wednesday afternoon will be devoted entirely to the sale of the paintings, of which there are 100.

NEW YORK CENTRAL HAS 100TH ANNIVERSARY

Observance Today Will Include a Pageant, Unveiling of Tablets and a Dinner.

The 100th anniversary of the founding of the New York Central will be observed today with ceremonies on the lines of the railroad in this city, Albany and Schenectady. The centennial is that of the granting by the New York State Legislature of a charter to the Mohawk & Hudson Railroad Company, permitting the construction of a steam railroad between the Mohawk and Hudson Rivers, with terminals in Albany and Schenectady.

The exercises today will include a trip by two special trains carrying prominent railroad officials and their guests from this city to Albany and Schenectady, the unveiling of bronze tablets in the stations of those cities, a pageant of various types of railroad trains which will move over the route from Albany to Schenectady and a dinner tonight at the Waldorf.

The speakers at the dinner will include Patrick E. Crowley, President of the New York Central Lines; former United States Senator Chauncey M. Depew, who has been in the service of the New York Central for sixty years, thirteen years as President and twenty-seven years Chairman of the board; Bishop Manning, William A. Prendergast, Chairman of the Public Service Commission; Dr. Arthur T. Hadley, President Emeritus of Yale, and Senator Copeland.

SAYS FIRE PIPE WAS RUSTED

R. G. Dun Executive Explains Faulty Apparatus That Hampered Firemen.

Following the criticism made by Fire Chief John Kenion at the five alarm fire in lower Broadway on Thursday night that his men had been hampered by faulty fire-fighting apparatus in the R. G. Dun Building, adjoining the burning structure, an executive of the R. G. Dun Company said yesterday that the trouble had been due to a corroded valve in a standpipe in the street.

He said that only a few window casings in the Dun Building had been damaged by the heat and that the elevators which were temporarily put out of commission were in working order yesterday.

Peter Spence, Chief of the Fire Prevention Bureau, said that owners of buildings were responsible for standpipes within their walls and if his investigation showed that the standpipes in the Dun Building had been defective the company would be held responsible.

Bid for $30,000,000 Loan Approved.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, April 16 (AP).—Parliament sanctioned today the $1.53 bid made by Haligarten & Co., New York bankers, for a $30,000,000 loan to the Uruguayan Government. The issue will bear 6 per cent. interest and may be raised by an additional loan of $15,000,000 if the necessity should arise.

JOHN D. E. TRASK DIES; AUTHORITY ON ART

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 16.—John D. E. Trask, Director of Fine Arts for the Sesquicentennial Exposition and a former Director of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, died today of pneumonia in Hahnemann Hospital after a week's illness. His age was 65.

Mr. Trask first came here in 1896 and served as Assistant Secretary of the Academy until 1905, when he became Secretary. In 1910 he was United States Commissioner General to the International Fine Arts Expositions in Buenos Aires, Argentina and Santiago, Chile. Two years later he resigned from the Academy to serve as Director of Fine Arts for the Panama-Pacific Exposition of 1915 in San Francisco.

As Director of Fine Arts for the Sesquicentennial Mr. Trask made the plans for the Palace of Art, which is now virtually completed. His last post before coming here recently was as Director of the Milwaukee Art Institute.

He was a member of the Pennsylvania Academy, the T-Square Club and the Art Club of this city.

Mr. Trask was born in Brooklyn and educated at St. Austin's School, New Brighton, S. I. He had engaged in newspaper work and magazine writing here before going to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

Byron H. Punnett.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 16 (AP).—Byron H. Punnett, for years one of the leading manufacturers of safes in this country and an internationally known bicycle rider of other days, died at his home here this afternoon, aged 68 years.

Born in this city, he became an expert bicycle rider shortly after leaving school and toured England and Continental Europe as well as this country, giving exhibitions of his prowess. Later he formed the Punnett Bicycle Company. He then became interested in combination locks and established the Punnett Safe Company.

James H. Farrell.

James Henry Farrell, old-time Hudson River steamboat man, died on Thursday at Bellevue Hospital. His funeral will be held from the Quinn Funeral Home, 146 Broadway, Astoria, at 10 A. M. today. He was in his seventy-fourth year. He was a fireman for years on boats that made the run between New York and Albany. Later he became a sea-going tug engineer, and was at his post until Wednesday, when he was stricken with pleurisy.

Funeral of Robert Clinton Geer.

Funeral services for Robert Clinton Geer who died here on Thursday were held at Sharon, Conn., yesterday afternoon. Mr. Geer had been for many years active in Wall Street and continued his business interest until a few months ago when ill health made it necessary for him to stop. He was 66 years old and was born in Goshen, Conn.

Mrs. Alla M. Lewis.

For years he was prominent in the real estate field in Brooklyn.

At the time of his death he was President of the Chauncey Real Estate Company, one of the oldest realty firms in Brooklyn; President of the Ridgewood Land and Improvement Company and Secretary of the Brooklyn Real Estate Exchange. He also was Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Mechanics Bank, Vice President of the Dime Savings Bank, Vice President of the Brooklyn City Safe Deposit Company, President of the Brooklyn Athenaeum and a director of the Brooklyn Trust Company. He had been Chairman of the Mechanics Bank's board since 1904 and had been President for two years before taking that office.

BINGER HERMANN DEAD.

Ex-Congressman's Trial in Land Office Inquiry Is Recalled.

ROSEBURG, Ore., April 16 (AP).—Binger Hermann, 83, who for sixteen years represented Oregon in the lower house of Congress and was Commissioner of the United States General Land Office at Washington during the McKinley Administration, died here yesterday. His death recalled old-time land fraud cases.

An investigation of land entries ordered by Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock in 1902 developed into a political fight which involved United States Senators and members of Congress of Oregon and other Western States. Hermann, who had resigned as Commissioner and had been elected to Congress was tried in Washington on a charge of destroying letter-press books while Commissioner and was acquitted.

Mr. Hermann was born in Maryland in 1843 and educated in the district schools of Allegheny County and in Independent Academy, near Baltimore, later Irving College. After going to Oregon as a youth of 16, he became a school teacher. Before serving in the lower house at Washington he had served in the lower house of Oregon.

SEIZE RYDER CANVAS; OWNERSHIP IN DOUBT

Institution Contends It Bought Work in 1919—Collector Gives Bond of $20,000 and Gets Art Back.

Mystery over the ownership of the painting "the Barnyard," a well-known work of Albert Pinkham Ryder, noted American artist who died in 1917, developed yesterday when the painting was seized by Deputy Sheriff Coakley while it was in the possession of Wilbur J. Cooke, a private collector, living in the Dakota, at 1 West Seventy-second Street, in a suit by the Phillips Memorial Gallery of Washington, D. C.

The canvas, which is valued by the Phillips Gallery at $10,000, is about ten inches by twelve inches, and was taken to the Sheriff's office in the protective casing in which it was found. Soon afterward Beals & Nicholson of 1 Madison Avenue, attorneys for Mr. Cooke, filed a bond of twice the asserted value of the work, and as a result the painting will be returned to Mr. Cooke, to be held by him until the trial of the action to determine the ownership. Meanwhile, the Sheriff in returning the painting will be protected by the bond.

The petition in the replevin suit of the gallery alleges that the work was purchased by Duncan Phillips in 1919 and that the Phillips Gallery had the picture in its possession until November, 1920. It is alleged that the painting was removed from the gallery then, and that the gallery had no knowledge of where it was until April 9 last.

While it was asserted yesterday in behalf of Mr. Cooke that the painting had been owned by him since 1911, and that there was a "long story" connected with it, inquirers for the details were referred to Mr. Cooke. At the Dakota, where he has a private gallery of some dimensions, it was said he had gone out of the State yesterday afternoon.

SAYS PUBLISHERS PAY HIGH CHARGE IN MAILS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Elisha Hanson, representative of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, told the joint committee of Congress considering postal rates, today, that on certain classes of business the Postoffice Department charges publishers more than ten times the cost of the service rendered.

He produced figures tending to show that newspapers can be transported by trucks at rates substantially below those exacted for the carriage of the mails, and he instanced one case where a newspaper used a truck on a sixty-mile haul at a saving of $212 per week. The cost of the truck was $70, whereas transport of the same volume of newspapers by mail over the same distance would have cost $282.

Commenting on criticisms made by Joseph Stewart, assistant to the Postmaster General, that the trouble with many newspapers is that they do not want all of the facilities of the department in distributing circulation, Mr. Hanson asserted that the publishers should not be compelled to pay for something they do not receive.

Mr. Hanson denied a statement made by Mr. Stewart that railroad service is cheaper than motor trucks. He discussed rates which he thought would be fair to the publisher and at the same time yield a profit to the Postoffice Department.

He stated that on a rate of 30 cents per 100 pounds for the fifty miles in the first zone, the department would receive $4.50 from the publisher for the 3-foot unit and it would pay to the railroad $1.87½, thus making a profit of $2.62½ on every unit of space filled.

In the second zone, if Mr. Hanson's figures were used, the department would receive $6 from the publisher and pay to the railroads $4.62½. He thought that in view of the fact that 85 per cent. of newspaper circulation moves within the first and second zones, the profit would justify the Government in adopting such rates.

LAMPOON CHAFFS MOVIES.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, April 16.—The motion picture industry received the attention of the editors of the Harvard Lampoon today with an issue of a "Photoplay" number, a burlesque on the motion picture magazine by that name.

The Lampoon's effort closely resembled the magazine itself. Five hundred copies were sold in less than an hour, and 1,000 more were distributed to news dealers tonight.

The photographs, which take up considerable space, were for the most part those of the editors themselves dressed in costumes. "Bob," The Lampoon caretaker, appears dressed in Hindu fashion, and is designated as "George Artless." A janitor of The Crimson also posed for a photograph, a burlesque on a well-known picture star.

From the Founder's Writings

To Make These Little Top Cornerpieces Compliment Ourselves

is farthest from our intention. Indeed, to be frank about it, the writer would regard it as an impertinence upon the public if such were a fact.

Plainly speaking, while there may be a touch of selfishness in everything that most of us do, in this particular matter of store making and keeping the theory and practice observed here is off the beaten track, and, though original with ourselves, can be copied and imitated anywhere and everywhere.

If what we are doing entitles us to distinction, it is because we are doing something more than the commonplace. Copyists of Raphael or Murillo were often disappointed in their efforts because they only copied what their eyes saw, and could not catch the spirit of the master painter.

It is not difficult to see figures and imitate colors of a picture, but the other something in the painting is often beyond analysis or possibility of transfer.

NEW GOLDEN SPECIALS TODAY

Crocheted Straw Hats, $9.85

FOR THE $12.50 TO $16.50 GRADE

An event of tremendous importance and scope, for Paris has inspired every one of them and there are no less than twenty-five models in the collection.

The smart small hat is many, many interpretations from the reproductions of Rehoux's Casquette—we place it first, for hats of the beret genre outnumber all other hats in Paris—to hats with high square crowns, the type Madame Agnes creates and wears so well. Then, too, there are the hats with the wider brims which become more and more important as the warmer days draw near.

The straw—imported from Italy—is of a very fine quality and as light as a feather. Green, beige, gray, bois de rose, red, brown, navy blue and black.

GIRLS VIE WITH BOYS IN ORATORY CONTEST

They Win Seven of Fifteen Places in Five Boroughs of the City.

DIVIDE MANHATTAN HONORS

FORTY COMPETITIONS HELD

Westchester, Long Island, Other Parts of State and New Jersey Report Keen Interest.

High school girls ran a close race with the boys in the more than forty borough, county and district contests held yesterday afternoon and last night throughout New York City, New York State and New Jersey in connection with the National Oratorical Contest on the Constitution conducted by THE NEW YORK TIMES.

They divided honors in Manhattan, carried Brooklyn and lost in the Bronx, Queens and Richmond. Of fifteen places in competition in the five boroughs, the girls captured seven. In the other contests at large they fully maintained their pace as the returns continued to come in at a late hour last night.

Most of the contests were well attended, with the supporting students' delegations from the participating schools contributing their cheers to enliven the proceedings. Music also formed a conspicuous part in the programs, and Miss Eva L. Bennett of Julia Richman High School and Paul Martin, organist, who is a member of the musical faculty of Boys' High School, Brooklyn, were responsible for much of the success of this feature at the Manhattan and Brooklyn contests.

Leading Men as Judges.

The judges throughout formed a notable background for the enterprise last night, and prominent figures from the bench and bar, church and educational institutions generously contributed their time to help in the general purpose of civic betterment. One of the dramatic features of some of the larger city contests was unconsciously supplied through their agency.

It was noticeable that some of the more proficient orato held these eldest without a break throughout their ten-minute discourses, and frequent comment was made afterward that they succeeded better than they knew in gaining and keeping the interest of such figures. Indeed, the look upon some of the judges' faces appeared to express surprise at their own interest in the efforts of the youthful oratorical aspirants.

The contest was held under the auspices of Columbia alumni to foster public speaking in the secondary schools. Professor William E. Weld presided, and the judges were Robert Cresswell of The New York Tribune, Hugh O'Donnell of THE NEW YORK TIMES and S. Archibald Smith, headmaster of Friends' Academy.

SAYS WESTCHESTER CAN PAY FOR PARKS

Macy Tells Commerce Chamber County's Present Debt Is Far Within Limit.

V. Everit Macy, President of the Westchest County Park Commission, addressing the Westchester Chamber of Commerce at its annual dinner at the Biltmore last night, said that the mere knowledge that extensive parks and parkways were being planned by the Park Commission had largely contributed to the $200,000,000 increase in real estate values in the county in the last three years.

Progress, parks and planning of the county were the principal topics discussed at the dinner. Mr. Macy praised the Board of Supervisors for approving the plans and appropriating millions of dollars for the proposed parks and parkways.

"The fact that every one realizes the necessity of these parkways and the improved conditions that will result," he said, "is shown by the rapid and phenomenal rise in the value of land throughout the county, ranging from 100 to 700 per cent. If in some miraculous way the commission could have acquired all the necessary land in one day, the county could have saved at least $5,000,000.

"In fact, to be frank, the commission is now seriously studying how the proposed parkways can be cut down in width, the parks reduced in size, and may even be forced into abandoning certain projects in order to keep within the $27,000,000 appropriated by the Board of Supervisors for the purchase of land.

"The commission is fully conscious, however, that what rights-of-way are not obtained now never will be, for the future costs will be unbearable. In all probability the land for the parkways will cost five times as much as the land purchased for parks, but they are essential to every day life and growth of the county.

"While the statutory debt limit is 10 per cent. of assessed values, the existing debt is 2.5 per cent. It would seem, therefore, that Westchester can well afford these expenditures so necessary for its future development."

Representative Ogden L. Mills, reviewing the accomplishments of Congress, told how local States, counties and municipalities had built up an enormous tax burden while Congress was getting the Federal tax burden into manageable proportions. He urged insistence upon the same kind of economy at home that the Federal Government was providing.

Government Alleges Back Income Tax Payments Are Due.

LOS ANGELES, April 16 (AP).—Lon Chaney, motion picture actor, and Lou Tellegen, film and stage star, were made defendants in two tax lien actions by the United States Revenue Department yesterday.

Taxes alleged to be due on Chaney's 1920 income amounting to $1,600 are sought. In Tellegen's case the action asks $2,072 on his 1918 income and the second $2,154 on his 1923 income.

Wants Policemen to Be Quicker on Trigger; Judge Urges Carrying Pistols in Plain Sight

County Judge George W. Martin, Chairman of the Kings County Board of Judges, proposed yesterday that policemen carry their pistols outside their uniforms. He said this would deter criminals and would give policemen a better chance in battles with gunmen. As an example of the handicap under which policemen work, he cited the shooting of four policemen, one fatally, by Paul R. Hilton, the Queens County radio burglar, who has just been caught.

"With their revolvers concealed in their back pockets, out of easy reach, the policemen are at a great disadvantage in meeting the gun-toting bandit and burglar," Judge Martin said. "The gun-carrying criminal has his weapon ready at hand. Either it is concealed in his sleeve, ready to be drawn quickly into action, or it is right in his grasp in his side pocket. With the criminal there is no lost motion in bringing his revolver into play.

"Before the police officer can bring his pistol into play the burglar can riddle him with bullets or make a safe getaway. The 'radio burglar' in Queens would have been dropped in his tracks had pursuing officers had their guns at hand instead of having to fumble around for them in a back pocket.

"Moreover, the sight of police officers openly armed, with a weapon ready at hand, would, I am satisfied, serve to deter some of these bandits prowling about looking for victims. Recently on Fifth Avenue we had three young bandits who tried to shoot their way out of the grasp of three policemen. Just the mercy of God saved these officers, who felt two rounds of bullets whiz past their heads before they could bring their own weapons into play.

"Give the policeman at least an equal chance with the gunman in his fight for life entered into in the performance of his duty."

MOTHER IN ADJOINING ROOM

He Was Ill Several Months and Had Nervous Break-Down—Faced Prospect of Going to Hospital.

A. Leonard Beekman, a member of the old New York family of that name, died yesterday in a plunge from a window on the eleventh floor of the Hotel Rockefeller, 33 West Fifty-first Street. He had been ill for several months and for the last three days his condition had been worse.

Mr. Beekman came to the hotel shortly before Easter. He was suffering from a servere nervous breakdown. He had been living in Philadelphia, at the Princeton Club, to be near his business, Paul & Beekman, metal stampers, at 1,734 North Fifth Street, Philadelphia. When his illness became aggravated he moved to the hotel so as to be nearer his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Beekman, whose home is in Bronxville.

When his condition gave alarm his mother took a suite at the hotel and a classmate at Princeton in 1918, A. B. Carver of Yonkers, for the last two nights had been sitting at the patient's bedside.

Early yesterday morning Mrs. Beekman came to her son's rooms to inquire as to his condition. He appeared to be about the same and while Mrs. Beekman and Mr. Carver were conversing, the sick man leaped from the bed and ran into the bathroom. He locked the door. A second later there came a scream. He had forced his way through the narrow window in the bathroom and either fell or leaped.

The plunging form, turning and twisting, struck several window ledges as it sped down the shaft to land on the glass roof of the mezzanine. The force cracked the glass. Mrs. Beekman threw open a window in her son's suite and saw his form lying eleven stories below. She ran to inform her husband, who had called at the hotel to ask how his son felt.

Meantime the telephone operator at the Rockefeller, Miss Irene Auken, whose switchboard is located under the mezzanine roof, was startled by the fall and informed the management. Bellboys found the body. A surgeon from Reception Hospital pronounced Beekman dead.

Beekman, who was 30 years old, had been under treatment by Dr. C. J. D'Alton of 123 East Fifty-third Street. At 9 o'clock yesterday morning he was to have been examined by Dr. D'Alton to determine whether it would be necessary for him to go to a hospital, or to a sanitarium. Conscious of the dreary outlook before him, Beekman had been increasingly despondent lately.

The funeral will be at 2 P. M. tomorrow from the home of an uncle, C. Griffith Young, at 981 Madison Avenue. Beekman participated in many tennis tournaments up to 1924 and was ranked ninth in 1921 and thirteenth in 1922 in the metropolitan ratings. He first showed promise on the courts in 1914 when he captured the interscholastic tennis championship and entered Princeton. In 1923 he was ranked seventh in the Middle States Division. He has played little during the last two years.

ILLINOIS POWER'S NET UP.

Year's Earnings, $3,068,589, Equal to $2.63 on Common.

An increase of $585,230 in net income for 1925 over that for 1924 is reported by the Illinois Power and Light Corporation. The earnings last year after depreciation, interest and Federal taxes were $3,068,589, equivalent, after preferred dividends of the corporation and subsidiaries, to $2.63 a share earned on 400,000 shares of no par common stock. The income in 1924 was $2,583,330, or $2.24 a share.

Gross income last year totaled $39,234,996, while in the previous year it was $20,124,326, both items including other income. Expenses, taxes, depreciation, interest, &c., in 1925 were $36,216,406, against $26,620,948. Preferred dividends of the corporation and subsidiaries and common dividends totaled last year $2,812,668, while in 1924 they were $2,333,721. Surplus in 1925 was $255,931, against $190,615 in the year before.

Belgian Minister's Home Fired Upon.

GHENT, Belgium, April 16 (AP).—An unknown person fired three revolver shots today at the door of the home of Minister of Railways Edouard Anseele, who is in Italy, and then threw the head of a cannon shell into one of the windows. The shell failed to explode. No one was hurt. The police believe the shooter is mentally unbalanced.

Magnus Johnson Seeks Governorship

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 16 (AP).—Magnus Johnson, former United States Senator, filed today for the Farmer-Labor Gubernatorial nomination in the June primaries. He will be opposed by Tom Davis, Minneapolis lawyer.

HILTON ARRAIGNED; VICTIMS FILL COURT

WEEK'S STAY IS GRANTED

Evidence Goes to Grand Jury Next Tuesday—Alleged Fence in Jail in Default of High Bail.

The court room in Jamaica was heavily guarded yesterday when Paul E. Hilton, the radio burglar, who killed one policeman and shot three others in the Woodhaven sections of Queens in recent burglaries, was arraigned before Magistrate James J. Conway.

Twelve uniformed policemen accompanied the prisoner from the Queens County Jail in Long Island City in the Jamaica court room, and later took him back to the cell. Two policemen stood at each side when he was arraigned before the bar. Others were stationed at every door and window of the room, while detectives were scattered among the spectators in the crowded court room. Many persons whose homes had been robbed by the radio burglar were present. It was feared that Hilton might try to make a break or that gunmen might attempt to free him.

Appearing pale and haggard, the burglar was not represented by counsel. Assistant District Attorney Pasta requested an adjournment of one week so that the prisoner might try to get counsel. If he fails the Court will assign a lawyer to defend him. Hilton has no money but friends may provide funds for his defense. When Magistrate Conway read the charge, accusing Hilton of homicide in shooting Patrolman Arthur Kenny on March 25 resulting in a wound which caused Kenny's death on April 6, and asked the prisoner if he had anything to say, Hilton replied:

"No, your Honor."

Asked if the adjournment for one week was satisfactory to him, the prisoner said:

"Certainly, Your Honor."

Assistant District Attorney Dayton said that the evidence against Hilton would be laid before the Queens County Grand Jury next Tuesday and that if an indictment was returned he probably would be put on trial in the Queens County Court on April 26.

The case of Morris Reiff, 32 years old, proprietor of the Star Radio Shop, at 134 Third Avenue, accused as a fence to whom the radio burglar sold his loot, was adjourned by Magistrate Albert Vitale in the Yorkville Court yesterday until April 21. Bail of $25,000 was continued, and Reiff was sent back to prison in default of bail.

DRUNKEN DRIVER GETS STATE PRISON TERM

Joseph Cassidy, 29 years old, of 128 West Kingsbridge Road, a chauffeur, was found guilty of manslaughter yesterday by a jury before Judge Cohn in the Bronx County Court. He was sentenced to from twenty-one months to seven years in Sing Sing. Cassidy, under the influence of liquor, drove his automobile into a milk wagon driven by John Powers at Cortlandt Avenue and 161st Street, on June 3, 1925. Powers, the father of five children, was thrown out and died soon afterward of his injuries.

It was the first time a conviction of the kind had been obtained in the Bronx County Court. Judge Cohn, in imposing sentence, declared that a drunken driver was "more dangerous than a bandit with a gun."

It was the second trial of the manslaughter indictment against Cassidy. The jury in the first trial disagreed. Records of the Magistrates' court revealed that Cassidy had been fined $50 in July, 1923, for driving an automobile while intoxicated.

NO NEW MILK COMMITTEE.

Mayor, Praising Mrs. Hearst's Work, Won't Compete With It.

Mayor Walker denied yesterday that he intended to appoint a committee of women to succeed the Mayor's Committee of Women which flourished during the Hylan Administration and which was active in free milk distribution and other philanthropies under the leadership of Mrs. William R. Hearst.

"I understand," said the Mayor, "that Mrs. Hearst has organized an independent women's committee to care for the free milk distribution, and I should not wish the City of New York to seem to place itself in competition with any organization which is already doing good work in a good cause."

When he was asked whether he proposed appointing women to membership in the various committees which, as yet to be organized, such as his projected city planning and housing committees, the Mayor replied that he would probably name several women to serve on each of these committees.

HOLD-UP MEN SHOOT TWO IN FIVE THEFTS

Loot in Daylight Robberies Is $3,000 in Cash, $7,000 Gems and Three Automobiles.

JEWELER ROBBED IN STREET

Shot Down by Thugs, Who Overlook $18,000 Jewelry—$3,000 Seized in Payroll Theft, Another Fails.

Armed men committed five holdups in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx yesterday morning. They shot two men, stole more than $3,000 in cash, $7,000 worth of jewelry, and three automobiles valued at more than $3,000 and all escaped.

Joseph Flyer, 40 years old, a jeweler, who has a platinum setting shop at 104 Chrystie Street, was shot in the head and side by four robbers who held him up at Grand and Chrystie Streets at 9:30 A. M. They got platinum settings worth $7,000, which he carried in a brief case, but missed $18,000 worth of the same kind of jewelry which he had in an inside coat pocket. Flyer told detectives that he had been held up six months ago and since then had made a practice of carrying the larger part of his jewelry in an inside pocket and the smaller part in the brief case.

Flyer's office is on the third floor of the Jewelers' Building, which is equipped with a burglar alarm and tear-gas bombs. The police think the bandits were professional jewel robbers who knew the layout of the building as well as Flyer's movements, and accordingly took care to wait until he got outside the building before they waylaid him.

Crowds at Hold-Up Scene.

Crowds were passing in front of the building as Flyer stepped out of the vestibule to go to the Jewelers' Exchange at the Bowery and Canal Street. As soon as he reached the sidewalk three men stepped up to him. A fourth was at the wheel of an automobile at the curb.

"The three men all had guns in their hands," Flyer said. "One grabbed my right arm and another my left arm. The third came up in front of me and stuck his gun to my chest.

"'Hand over that brief case,' he said, 'or I'll put a hole through you.'

"I pulled my right hand away and tried to knock down the gun at my chest. Then I heard some shots and felt the shock of the bullets in my head and side. I dropped the brief case and fell. When I got up they were getting into the automobile and one had my brief case."

The wounded man was taken to Gouverneur Hospital and then to his home at 1,105 Fifty-third Street, Brooklyn.

Captain Sullivan and detectives of the Clinton Street Station began an investigation. They learned from witnesses that the license number of the bandits' car was the same as that of an automobile stolen on March 27 from Jennie Berkow at 1,009 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn.

The car was found yesterday afternoon, wrecked and abandoned, at Sheriff and Second Streets, Manhattan.

Payroll Theft Fails.

Five minutes after an armored car had delivered an $1,800 payroll from a bank at the office of the Dunbar Box and Lumber Company, at 551 West Twenty-eighth Street, at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, six robbers with pistols in their hands rushed into the office, yelled "Hands up!" and started shooting into the floor and ceiling.

They seized a "dummy" briefcase and began to retreat. A dozen employes, who had heard the noise rushed in. The robbers shot their way out, wounding John Fink, 65 years old, a sawyer, of 517 Garden Street, Union Hill, N. J.

Just before noon yesterday three armed men in an automobile held up John Delaney of the plumbing firm of Coyne & Delaney, 826 Kent Avenue, Brooklyn, who was in another automobile on Ellery Street, near Sumner Avenue, Brooklyn, and stole $2,000 in cash from him without firing a shot.

While a traffic policeman was standing at Prospect and East Tremont Avenues, the Bronx, about 10 o'clock yesterday morning, two robbers held up the Liggett drug store at 761 East Tremont Avenue, at the corner of Prospect, and got $100 in cash. One bandit stayed at the door as a lookout, while the other went inside with a pistol in his hand and forced the assistant manager to bind two employes, wait on two girl customers without giving an alarm and then open a safe and four cash registers. They disappeared before an alarm could be given.

Three armed men stole three automobiles from Frank's Garage at 1,651 Sixty-third Street, Brooklyn, about 8 o'clock yesterday morning after holding up an employe. They entered with pistols in their hands and forced Walter Schardleburg, a negro man washer, into a side room, which they locked. Then they drove out in a Cadillac, a Buick and a Studebaker. Schardleburg telephoned the police.

Two men robbed the box-office of the Stadium, motion picture theatre, at Third Avenue and 119th Street last night of $106 and escaped.

The two men, who, the police were told, were shabbily dressed, engaged the ticket seller in an altercation and while one held the employe's attention the other, it was said, grabbed up the money, whereupon both ran and disappeared before employes of the theatre could follow them.

Three armed robbers held up Samuel Weiss and Jacob Jackier in their shoe store at 32 Avenue B last night. They forced Jackier to open the cash register, from which they took $500.

LINK UP BIG JEWEL THEFTS.

Police Find Same Methods in Wurts-Dundas Case as in Hayward Robbery.

Detectives investigating the disappearance of $40,000 in gems from the apartment of Miss Muriel Wurts-Dundas, at 71 Park Avenue, said yesterday they believed the window cleaner suspected was the same man who early last year robbed the homes of Colonel William Hayward at 1,061 Fifth Avenue and Adelaide Phillips at 173 East Sixty-fourth Street of jewelry valued at $40,000.

As in the theft at the Wurts-Dundas apartment, the jewelry disappeared after a visit from a window cleaner who, acting in the same manner as he did at 71 Park Avenue, left his cleaning equipment behind when he departed. The detectives have obtained a fairly accurate description of the man and hope for an arrest.

Noel C. Scaffa, a private detective under indictment for his part in obtaining the return of $800,000 in jewelry to Mrs. James Donahue, from whose apartment at the Hotel Plaza they had been stolen, visited Police Headquarters during the day and it was reported that he called in connection with the disappearance of Miss Wurts-Dundas's jewelry. He denied this, however.

Hindenburg Like Washington, Mexican Guest Tells Germans

POTSDAM, Germany, April 16 (AP).—President von Hindenburg was likened to George Washington today by the head of a group of Mexicans visiting the historic places of Potsdam as the guests of the Prussian Government.

Proposing the President's health, Chairman Hernandez said:

"Of von Hindenburg it will one day be said, as of Washington: 'First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen.'"

SENTENCED IN THEFT OF $1,116,000 GEMS

PRISON FOR COMPANIONS

Three Promised Aid in Recovering Loot, but $176,000 Is Still Missing, Says Prosecutor.

Harry Cohn, formerly an accountant, and two confederates in a conspiracy which led to thefts of gems aggregating $1,116,000, from jewelry brokers in this city, received prison terms yesterday from Judge Koenig in General Sessions on their pleas of guilty to grand larceny indictments.

Cohn, who pretended to be a jewelry salesmen when he obtained the gems on memoranda in 1925, received a sentence of from three and a half to eight years in Sing Sing. Alexander Arnow, an itinerant jeweler, whom Cohn accused of having originated the plot which led to the disposal of the gems in pawn shops, or to others, for less than half their value, was sentenced to the same prison for from twenty months to three and a half years, and his brother, Harry, whose glib talk was alleged to have induced Cohn to enter the theft plot, received from fifteen months to three years in the prison.

Eight indictments charging grand larceny were returned against the trio when Assistant District Attorney Richard C. Murphy had finished an investigation of the plot last February. Cohn had been apprehended under a Federal bankruptcy warrant in Newark a few weeks before, and he immediately implicated Harry Arnow. Cohn, who is 33 years old, and lived at 581 Edgecombe Avenue, revealed that the Arnows, a little older than he, had been living in luxurious circumstances at 1,085 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, but Alexander Arnow fled to California when he learned that creditors had thrown Cohn into bankruptcy.

With the arrest of Harry Arnow on Cohn's confession, Alexander came back, and was taken into custody. Then through information received from the plotters the prosecutor recovered $340,000 in money from Cohn, $500,000 of the gems, which they had disposed of to others, and $160,000 in jewels were held under an attachment issued by the Court, pending the outcome of litigation. Cohn and the Arnows had promised to aid the authorities in the recovery of all the loot, but Assistant District Attorney Murphy told Judge Koenig yesterday that they had not furnished any information that had not already come into his possession.

The prosecutor had agreed to allow the three conspirators to plead guilty to one indictment to cover the eight against each of them in the belief that the three would aid him in recovering the remaining $176,000 in gems. This indictment was based on the complaint of David I. Rogow, a wholesale jeweler, that on Sept. 23 last, Cohn obtained from him on memorandum two emeralds and 403 pearls, valued at $90,000.

Benjamin F. Spellman, counsel for Cohn, and Abraham Goodman, counsel for the Arnows, in pleading for clemency dwelt on an agreement they said had been made by the prosecutor when their clients consented to aid him in recovering the stolen gems. The lawyers asserted that the trio had not profited through their thefts. Cohn, they said, became impressed with the belief that he could take advantage of low prices in the jewelry trade at the time by obtaining the jewelry on memoranda and selling it before payments became due for much more than he had bought it for. It was further asserted that the Arnows had agreed to pledge the jewels for loans as Cohn obtained each batch and use the money as advance payments for new batches.

Assistant District Attorney Murphy told Judge Koenig that, while the defendants had not complied with their agreement, he felt that they were entitled to some consideration from the Court because of what they had done in aiding him to obtain indictments against others as receivers of some of the gems. He added, however, that the trio had repudiated testimony which they had given at the Grand Jury investigation, which led to these indictments, when the men accused of being receivers were about to be called for trial. This, he said, forced the prosecution to recommend that the indictments against these men be dismissed.

N. Y. U. GIRL IS MISSING.

Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Sepe of 2,111 Quentin Road, Brooklyn, reported yesterday to the police that their daughter, Rose, 17 years old, a student of New York University, has been missing since Thursday morning.

Miss Sepe, it was said, left home to attend her classes, but did not arrive at the university. Her family said they were at a loss to account for her absence, because she always had discussed her plans with them. She was described as 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighing 115 pounds, having brown bobbed hair and brown eyes and wearing a green serge dress, a black fur-trimmed coat, a black hat with white trimming, white stockings, black pumps, a diamond and a ruby ring, a wrist watch and a cameo pin.

An Acknowledgment.

THE NEW YORK TIMES acknowledges receipt of an anonymous contribution of $10 for the relief of a widow and three children of a man, who was drowned on April 6, and for whose family an appeal was made recently by the Brooklyn Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

DEMOCRATS ATTACK GERMAN CLAIMS BILL

PROPOSALS ARE CRITICISED

Treadway Insists Committee Has Not Acted—Minority Seeks Changes.

MELLON DEFENDS THE PLAN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—A bitter fight on the Administration bill introduced in the House by Representative Ogden L. Mills of New York, providing for an adjustment of claims with Germany and German nationals arising out of the war, was foreshadowed today, when Representatives John N. Garner of Texas, one of the Democratic leaders, speaking on the floor, denounced the measure as a "stupendous steal," and described it as "the most important piece of legislation outside of the tax bill that will come before this Congress."

Mr. Garner, who charged that an examination of its provisions would demonstrate that the plan embodied in the Mills bill would cost the American people $190,000,000.

"It has four provisions," said Mr. Garner. "One is to return all of the alien property now in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian to the German nationals. The second is to pay the mixed claims, the third is to pay the German nation for damages that occurred by reason of our taking their property and the fourth is for an issue of $250,000,000 in bonds to meet the indebtedness."

Declares Texas Is Premature.

Representative Allen T. Treadway replied to Mr. Garner:

"I think the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Garner) is very premature in the statement that he is making to the House," Mr. Treadway said. "So far as I know, the Ways and Means Committee has not acted on the bill with the view to reporting it. To my knowledge the bill has not come before the Ways and Means Committee for a vote. Therefore the gentleman from Texas is very premature in saying that it will be on the floor of the House within a week."

Efforts have been made in committee by Democratic members to force the adoption of amendments which would bar American insurance companies that suffered losses during the war period from securing benefits under the Mills bill. Awards have been made by the Mixed Claims Commission of claims made by insurance companies, and their payment is provided for in the bill.

Consideration of the bill has been marked by stormy sessions in the Committee on Ways and Means, but indications are that the bill will be reported to the House in the form presented by Mr. Mills. The bill has the approval of President Coolidge.

Mellon Explains the Measure.

Secretary Mellon believes the plan is the only practical method of dealing with that problem. His views are contained in a letter which he sent to the Senate today.

The Secretary stated that German owners of property involved and the American War Claimants' Association had been consulted, but not the German Government. Chandler P. Anderson, American Commissioner on the Mixed Claims Commission, advised the Treasury that Dr. Wilhelm Kiesselbach, the German Commissioner, and Dr. Karl von Lewinski, the German agent on the commission, represented as individuals a group of the private German owners.

There is no legislation introduced to cover the subject as a whole and, finally, Mr. Mellon wrote:

"Litigation is pending against the United States for compensation for ships of German citizens taken during the war and which are still undisposed of. The Mixed Claims Commission set up between Germany and the United States to determine American claims against Germany is approaching the completion of its work.

"There is, however, no provision for the payment of awards of the mixed claims commission which adequately compensates the private American claimants. The advice of the Treasury has been sought by Frederick C. Hicks, the former Alien Property Custodian, in reorganizing his office and from its study of the situation the Treasury believed that it was uneconomical, both from the standpoint of the owner and of the United States, to continue indefinitely the operation of the trusts by the Alien Property Custodian.

"If it is right that we should reaffirm the American policy that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, then there se

TOPICS OF INTEREST TO CHURCHGOERS

'LOST' CANDIDATES SOUGHT

Names of Over Fifty Young Men Who Gave Up Their Studies for Presbyterian Ministry Announced.

A suggested "Ministers' Code of Ethics" has been submitted to the Moderator's Council of the Presbytery of New York by the Rev. Dr. George Stewart Jr., one of the two associate pastors of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, at Seventy-third Street. This announcement was made by the Rev. Dr. Harlan G. Mendenhall, Stated Clerk of the Presbytery, as part of the report of the Moderator's Council, which was submitted to the Presbytery at its meeting last Monday in the First Church. The proposed "code" itself was not divulged. But on the recommendation of the council the Presbytery voted that the Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, the Moderator, should appoint a committee to discuss the code and report at the next meeting of the Presbytery.

The names of between fifty and sixty young men who had been under the care of the Presbytery in the last fifteen years as candidates for the ministry, but who had failed to go through with their plans, were read to the Presbytery at the meeting on Monday. In most of the cases no further word had been heard from the men, Mendenhall reported that some had entered the ministry of other denominations, but most of them had not been traced. The rule of the Presbytery is that if a man is not heard from for three years his name is stricken from the roll. The time was extended for those whom there was still a chance of locating.

Three young men will be ordained deacons this morning in the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street. The officiating Bishop will be the Right Rev. David L. Ferris, Bishop Coadjutor of Western New York. The candidates are Jesse Herbert Smith of Independence, Kan.; Ernest Victor Keenan of Chicago and Henry Scott Rubel of Milwaukee. The ordination sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. H. Percy Silver, rector of the Church of the Incarnation.

A Spring breakfast will be given in honor of Bishop William T. Manning next Wednesday at 12:30 o'clock in the Hotel Roosevelt. Mrs. Henry Gansevoort Sanford will be toastmistress. Bishop Manning will speak and then the program will be given over to the Committee on Army Posts, of which Mrs. William Codman Sturgis is Chairman. She will outline a plan for a memorial chapel to be erected at Plattsburg for the New York soldiers who fell in the war. There will be addresses by Channing Pollock, Colonel De Lancey Jay, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt and Colonel Archibald Thacher. The Chairman of the Breakfast Committee is Mrs. Charles Gilmore Kerley.

There will be two receptions at the Five Points Mission, 59 Madison Street, to welcome the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. George W. Grinton. The minister, who had been pastor of the Methodist church, Tarrytown, was elected by the trustees as superintendent of the mission, which is under the Methodist Church. His election was ratified last Monday by Bishop Francis J. McConnell of Pittsburgh, at the closing session of the annual New York Methodist Conference. The first reception will be given by the English congregation at the mission next Thursday evening, and the second will be given by its Italian congregation the evening of April 26.

There will be a dinner Monday evening in the Hotel Astor for the one hundred clerical and lay members of the staff of the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society. The hosts and hostesses will be the members of the Board of Managers and their wives. The speakers will be Bishop Manning, the Rev. Dr. Milo H. Gates and the Rev. Dr. L. Ernest Sunderland. The toastmaster will be Robert L. Harrison.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel Trexler, President of the Lutheran Synod of New York and New England, will go to Rochester tonight to preach and administer holy communion tomorrow morning in the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, that city, in connection with the farewell of the Rev. H. Branses Richards, the pastor. Mr. Richards has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Lutheran Church, Athens, N. Y.

A reception will be given next Thursday evening to the Rev. Dr. George M. Baker, formerly of Schenectady, by the congregation of the Washington Heights Baptist Church, West 160th Street and Convent Avenue. Dr. Baker began his ministry here last Sunday.

A luncheon will be given Monday by the Episcopal Church Club at its rooms, 7 East Forty-eighth Street, in honor of the Rev. Dr. Robert Norwood, new rector of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church.

"Does Education Without Christian Education Educate?" will be the topic at a dinner of the New York Presbyterian Social Union on Monday evening in the parish house of the West 82d Presbyterian Church, 106th Street and Amsterdam Avenue. The speakers will be Dean Herbert E. Hawkes and the Rev. Walter M. Howlett of the Greater New York Federation of Churches. Mr. Howlett is the chief promoter of the plan for a week-day religious school in every Protestant church.

In appreciation of the services of M. S. Levinson as sexton for the last twenty-five years the trustees and members of the Congregation B'nai Jeshurun, Eighty-eighth Street and West End Avenue, have subscribed a fund to cover the expenses of a trip for him and his wife to Palestine.

The sum of $60,150.76 has been subscribed in cash and pledges toward the $100,000 endowment fund being sought for Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, Central Park West and Sixty-fifth Street, of which the Rev. Dr. Paul Scherer is the pastor.

Methodist young people from Connecticut, New Jersey and New York will attend a dinner next Tuesday evening in Grace Methodist Church, 104th Street, between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues, under the auspices of the Epworth League of the New York Methodist Area.

The Rev. Dr. John L. Davis will begin tomorrow his third year as pastor of Grace Methodist Church. Last year Dr. Davis received 654 new members.

FOUR TRUSTEES NAMED BY CALVARY CHURCH

Board Fills Places of Those Who Resigned—Reports Progress on Building.

Following a secret meeting of an hour and forty minutes yesterday afternoon of the Board of Trustees of Calvary Baptist Church it was announced that four new members of the board had been elected and that "the matter of the new building was taken up and progress was made on it."

At the meeting at which Dr. Straton was present, the following were selected to fill the places of resigning trustees:

H. A. Van Opstall, Manager of the National Piano Manufacturing Company of 15 East Fortieth Street; Adolph Lindewall, a realtor; C. C. Hoffman, a commission broker, and Stephen A. Bradford, a public accountant.

Justice William Harman Black, President of the board, received the resignations last Monday of Benjamin J. and A. B. Miller, brothers and business men; W. A. M. Martin, a publisher, and Robert B. Buxbee, an attorney.

Mr. Martin was one of several plaintiffs in an action about a year ago against the Rev. John Roach Straton; the pastor, and others to enjoin the church from erecting a combined church and apartment house. They also brought a successful action to prevent Dr. Straton as a member ex-officio of the board from voting. The plaintiffs also disapproved of paying a salary to Dr. Straton for February and March while he occupied a Winter pastorate in Florida.

DEAN TREDER RESIGNS AS AID TO STIRES

The Very Rev. Oscar F. R. Treder has resigned as Dean of the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, L. I., where has has been for ten years. His resignation was announced yesterday. It had been accepted at a meeting of the Vestry Committee of the Cathedral last Tuesday.

The meeting was called by the Right Rev. Ernest M. Stires, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Long Island, whose See church the cathedral is. Bishop Stires read the resignation to the committee and announced that he had finally decided to accept it.

The Dean gave as his chief reason for resigning a desire to free the Bishop of any "embarrassment in carrying out his visions, hopes and plans," for which, he recalled, the Bishop was, after all, responsible. He said the Bishop should share the burden of accomplishment with helpers, but they should be helpers of his own selection.

Bishop Stires expressed to the committee his appreciation of the service of the Dean and of "his manly, generous and helpful spirit."

Shortly before the consecration of Dr. Stires last November, Dean Treder was in an automobile accident and was badly shaken up. He has not been well since.

Dean Treder is a chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Masons of New York. Before coming to the cathedral he was rector at Easthampton, L. I. He is married and has five children.

FINAL APPEAL BY CARDINAL.

Prelate to Open Catholic Charities Drive in Cathedral Tomorrow.

Seven thousand persons are expected in St. Patrick's Cathedral at 4 o'clock tomorrow when Cardinal Hayes will open the Catholic Charities campaign at vesper service. Among those in the cathedral will be 300 priests. The Rev. Joseph C. Fleming will deliver the sermon, and the Cardinal will address the workers.

The campaign will get formally under way on Monday when 15,000 workers start a house-to-house canvass. Last year $1,017,674 was raised.

Seeks $500,000 for Methodist Home.

Speaking yesterday at a luncheon at the Aldine Club, at which prominent Methodists were his guests, William J. Stitt, Chairman of the Committee on Special Gifts of the Methodist Episcopal Church Home, said to be the oldest home for elderly people in the city, announced that the home was seeking an endowment fund of $500,000. The drive will be made in connection with the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the institution.

Clergymen to Discuss Crime.

Under the auspices of the Brooklyn Juvenile Protective Association, clergymen of all denominations will discuss the crime situation at a meeting on Monday afternoon at the St. George Hotel in Brooklyn. Among those cooperating with the association in calling the meeting are the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the Rev. Father John L. Belford and the Rev. John Howard Melish.

Mrs. T. P. Shonts Improved.

The condition of Mrs. Theodore P. Shonts, widow of the former President of the Interborough, who is at the Polyclinic Hospital suffering from pneumonia, was said yesterday to be improved.

Mrs. Shonts was taken to the hospital late Wednesday night in a critical condition, and is registered there as "Mrs. Stratton," Dr. Rafael Ernesto Lopez of 320 West Eighty-fifth Street is her attending physician.

To the Jews of New York

SIXTY MILLION DOLLARS

By the Jews of America through the

JOINT DISTRIBUTION COMMITTEE

OVER seven million Jews were helped and helped until we thought they could care for themselves.

In this we were mistaken, for the hope of a new and better day for the Jews of Europe was rudely shattered.

Peace had come to battle-scarred Europe, but not for the Jews. Hate was still rampant in many European countries.

Boycotts, special legislation, special taxes, limitation of activities, restriction of labor—all were aimed at the Jew, with the result that a new economic crisis overwhelmed them.

In Poland, in Esthonia, in Galicia, in Roumania, in Bessarabia, in Lithuania, in Latvia, in Austria, in Germany, in Hungary and in Russia, the Jewish situation is worse than it was at any time during the terrible years of the War.

CENTRAL RELIEF COMMITTEE
PEOPLE'S RELIEF COMMITTEE

DEATH stalks in every Jewish home, Death from hunger, death from disease, death self-imposed, is the daily lot of the Jew in those countries.

Orphan asylums are closed for lack of food. Schools and religious institutions are closed for lack of support.

Thousands of hungry children roam the streets in search of bread.

Hundreds of thousands of men and women pray that they may be spared the fate of those who have already died miserable, unnatural deaths.

This message is for every Jew in Greater New York who feels keenly the suffering of his people.

It is a message that must and will be answered!

There is one hope for the Jews of Eastern Europe, and that hope is in the Campaign of

FIFTEEN MILLION DOLLARS

Now being raised throughout America through the United Jewish Campaign

Without showing any increase of activity, a good part of yesterday's stock market recovered more of the ground lost in the professional attack on values last Wednesday and Monday. The movement of prices was irregular, however, advances in some of the industrial and railway shares being offset by declines in others of the same group. The advances were clearly attributable to repurchases by the speculative sellers of those earlier days; there was no evidence of outside interest in the market. What the action of prices seemed to indicate was such inertia on the part of the non-professional constituency that real holders of stocks are just now as reluctant to sell as they are to buy. Put in another way, the market appears to be itself disposed to halt; awaiting presumably some tangible development in the general situation, good or bad.

No change occurred in the money market; at present quotations, rates at New York and London are at parity with one another. Outside of the financial markets, the only noteworthy incident of the day was a decline on the grain and cotton markets, less important in itself than as reflecting the general tendency of prices. Cotton sold yesterday at the low price of last year and nearly down to this year's lowest. The puzzle of the cotton trade is not the decrease in Europe's purchases--that was inevitable, as soon as the shortage of stocks on hand had been made good--but the unprecedentedly large takings of home mills, in the face of a textile trade that is generally described as "slow."

The weekly statement of "brokers' loans" by New York member banks of the Federal Reserve shows further decrease of $55,699,000, bringing the total reduction from the high point at Feb. 17 to $651,372,000. The only change shown from the recent drift was a slight increase in such New York loans for account of out-of-town banks; the week reported on being the first since the middle of February in which they have not been substantially reduced. Since these reports of loans to brokers were only begun in January, it is impossible to compare the reduction since the stock market turned in February with the movement for the corresponding period in other years.

That comparison is possible, however, in the Reserve Board's statement of loans on Stock Exchange collateral made to any kind of borrowers by all the reporting member banks. Those loans, which have been reported weekly during many years, reached their high point at the end of December; between then and April 8, the date covered by yesterday's statement, they have been reduced $409,706,000. In the corresponding period of 1925 they were increased $57,352,000, but they decreased $200,201,000 in the same weeks of 1924 and $148,770,000 in 1923. This would indicate that, although the present season's reduction has been exceptionally large, the normal tendency is toward substantial curtailment in the first quarter of the year.

The week-end review of mercantile trade lay stress on one factor in the situation which has caused some perplexed suspension of judgment in other quarters. There has been a good deal of questioning as to probable result of the prolonged spell of unseasonable weather in the present Spring. That it means an unusually late start for the cotton and Spring-planted grain crops appears inevitable, and the mercantile agencies find that consideration operating to check business activities. It can hardly be said, however, that this enforced agricultural delay has yet been greatly reflected in wheat or cotton, unless it be assumed that it has checked a decline which otherwise might have gone further. Experience has taught that in this country a bad start to the crops will often be fully overcome by return to favorable growing weather, also that, in so wide-spread an area as the agricultural United States possesses, adverse conditions in one section will be offset by opposite influences in another.

NEW YORK STANDARD PLANS STOCK ISSUE

Oil Company Stockholders Asked to Approve Addition of 2,500,000 Shares.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Standard Oil Company of New York has been called for May 17 to approve an increase in the company's capital stock from 15,000,000 to 17,500,000 shares of $25 par value. Part of the increased capital will be used to acquire the capital stock of the General Petroleum Company of California. Stockholders also will be asked to approve a contract between the two companies, under which Standard Oil of New York would issue two shares of its own capital stock for one share of General Petroleum. Under these terms, Standard of New York will issue 2,500,000 new shares.

In connection with the consolidation General Petroleum will retire all of its outstanding preferred stock at par and accrued dividends. On June 30, 1925, a total of $2,212,200 of $25 par value preferred stock was outstanding.

Herbert L. Pratt, President of the Standard Oil Company of New York, in a letter to stockholders points out that the directors believe the acquisition of General Petroleum "will be advantageous to both parties and that the terms are fair. It therefore respectfully recommends that the stockholders approve the agreement submitted to them."

Aims at Lower Returns.

Mr. Pratt further says: "Standard Oil Company of New York and its subsidiary, the Magnolia Petroleum Company, have created intensive distributing facilities throughout New York and the New England States, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, parts of New Mexico, Kansas and Louisiana. They have in these localities an established good-will and a reputation for their brands which is a business asset of great value, and have built up these physical distributing facilities at large cost. This company has also developed widespread distributing facilities in China, Japan, India, Philippine Islands, Java, Straits Settlements and the Near East which represent a large investment, with a demand for its products in these thickly populated areas, which promises rapid increase.

"While the company has created and operates this extensive marketing organization and has the major part of its investment in these facilities for distribution, it has neither sufficient crude production nor adequate refining capacity to furnish all the petroleum products which it markets. Further, it has no crude production or refining capacity whatever on the Pacific Coast, which is its natural source of supply for the extensive operations in the Far East in which this company is engaged. As a result it is practically dependent on purchases from other companies to meet the needs of its distributing facilities in Eastern Asia.

General Has Crude Output.

"General Petroleum Corporation, on the other hand, has extensive producing properties in the California field which in 1925 produced approximately 10,000,000 barrels of crude oil, and also purchased approximately 15,000,000 barrels from wells in these fields served by its pipe line. It does an extensive business in selling oil for fuel to railroads, steamship lines and industrial plants in the States on the Pacific Coast. It has refineries at Los Angeles which handled in 1925 a total of approximately 18,000,000 barrels of crude oil. It has marketing facilities for refined products in California, Oregon and Washington, but not in foreign countries or in any States except those on the Pacific Coast.

"The business of the two companies is therefore complementary. The acquisition of the properties of the General Petroleum Corporation, with their substantial crude production, refining capacity and terminal facilities at Tidewater, will make their surplus over and above Pacific Coast requirements available and lessen the present disproportion between the needs of the widespread distributing facilities of this company and the supply of crude and refined products produced by it."

ANDES PETROLEUM STOCK ISSUE BOUGHT

Group Takes Up 300,000 Shares of Common—Atlantic Refining to Acquire Half Interest.

A new issue of 800,000 shares of common stock of the Andes Petroleum Corporation has been bought by a group headed by Henry Zuckerman & Co. and Jerome B. Sullivan & Co., it became known yesterday. This follows closely the information that the Atlantic Refining Company of Philadelphia has contracted to acquire an undivided one-half interest in all the Andes Petroleum property in South America.

Contract to purchase from Andes and Atlantic Refining jointly, 12,500 acres checkerboarded in the Mara District, Maracaibo Basin, Venezuela, was made by the Venezuela Gulf Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Gulf Oil Corporation of Pittsburgh. Terms of the purchase are an amount in cash, a payment in oil and a royalty.

The Andes Petroleum common shares will soon be offered to the public, it was said, the proceeds of the sale to be used in paying 50 per cent. of the cost of drilling undertaken with the Atlantic Refining Company and to provide additional working capital.

Andes Petroleum has an authorized issue of 2,000,000 shares of the common stock without nominal or par value, and the acquisition of the 800,000 shares by the bankers leaves outstanding 1,607,910 shares.

Amerada Gets Oil Lease.

The Amerada Corporation has acquired leases on 960 acres of proved oil land in the Panhandle field of Texas and 7,000 unproved acres in the Seminole field of Oklahoma from the Douglas Oil Company of Oklahoma, it was announced yesterday.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

A successive record low for all time in the French franc, and new bottoms for the year in the Chinese exchanges, while sterling, pesetas, the Scandinavians and the Japanese yen all developed strength and higher prices, featured the trading in the foreign bill market yesterday.

The fresh slump in the franc carried it to 3.36½ cents, 1¼ points under the previous low established on Thursday, and an overnight loss of 4 points. Belgian francs also gave up 3 points to 3.67½ cents. Nothing new appeared in the situation to account for the reaction, although local dealers are vexed that Paris should be surprised at the action of the franc here, for it is from this quarter chiefly that selling orders originate. Good buying of Spanish pesetas lifted it 2 points to 14.29 cents, the year's high previously touched last Tuesday. Sterling gained a small fraction to $4.85¾.

The break in the Chinese exchanges dovetailed with record lows in silver both here and in London. Losses ran from one-quarter to one-half cent, and followed the virtual throwing over of Chinese currency with which to buy the Japanese yen on its ride to parity. Yesterday the yen jumped ¼ cent, to 46.63 cents, highest in three years.

Anaconda Head Goes to Europe.

C. F. Kelly, President of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, has sailed for Europe to confer with German officials on the company's option on the Von Gelsches Erben property. Mr. Kelly would not discuss the nature of his trip, however. Anaconda obtained a six months' option last November to buy the property, which is the largest non-ferrous mining company in Europe.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

Weakness in the automobile stocks during the last hour of trading on the Stock Exchange unsettled the entire list and resulted in most issues ending the day below the high levels. At the close, however, the net changes among the active shares were about evenly divided between gains and losses. The railroad stocks, as indicated by the averages, closed higher, and the industrials closed lower, owing chiefly to the reaction in the motors and specialties. Steel common, one of the leaders, ended the day with a fractional gain. During the early hour of trading the market was firm, and net gains were noted throughout the list. As the day progressed more attention was given to the proposed tariff revision on motor car imports into Canada, and this caused considerable professional selling of these stocks, especially General Motors, Dodge, Hudson and Studebaker. Ford Motor of Canada also dropped to a new low record for the year. Trading was on a much reduced scale, except in the motor shares.

The Canadian Auto Tariff.

Wall Street jumped to hasty conclusions yesterday regarding the proposed reduction in the Canadian tariff on motor cars. According to dispatches received from across the border, some of the American plants have been shut down, but this was believed to be only a temporary condition until the various managements can ascertain their position under the new schedules. Wall Street was of the impression that the proposed revision would result in ruining the American motor car industry in Canada. In conservative quarters, however, there was reluctance to accept this view. The proposed reduction, according to one opinion, would result merely in a lowering of profits for American companies with plants in Canada, as the duty was passed along to the public, despite the fact that the American plants could operate more cheaply than Canadian manufacturers, because of quantity production. The opinion prevailed that even if the proposed revision were adopted, the American companies could still do a profitable business across the border.

More Instalment Buying.

The increase in instalment sales has been a frequent subject of comment in the past few months, and views pro and con have been freely expressed. It is generally conceded that the plan shows no sign of losing popularity. Automobile acceptance organizations are many, and now another field has been added to the lists of those where this method of stimulating sales is permitted. A large public utility has announced the formation of an acceptance corporation for financing the purchase of appliances sold to increase demand for electric power.

Drives at the Market.

It takes very little in the way of news to start the bearish fraternity off on a fresh drive at the market, and although in most cases within the last few days, these drives have not been successful, nevertheless, they are repeated again and again. Yesterday's drive was centred on the motor shares immediately upon publication of the news that some of the American companies operating in Canada had shut up shop pending a clearer interpretation of the tariff ruling which has been made.

Treasury 3¼s at New High.

United States Treasury 3¼ per cent bonds, the issue that was sold to the public on March 15 of this year, touched a new high point yesterday, with sales at 100 27-32, which represented an advance of 11-32 of a point over their original offering price of 100%. Other United States obligations also were firm, furnishing about the only feature of interest in the bond market. Most price changes in the general list were limited to small fractions and were not indicative of any distinct trend. French bonds were slightly higher, despite the continued pressure on the franc, and most other foreign bonds were about steady. Standard domestic investment securities were inactive.

Record Low Price for Silver.

The belief in many quarters, and particularly in the Orient, that Japanese exchange will be restored to dollar parity some time this year was one of the contributing causes of the establishment of a record low price for silver yesterday. Chinese merchants and exchange operators, overstocked with silver, have been selling the metal for some time and purchasing Japanese yen, and another factor has been the recent lifting of the Japanese embargo against the export of silver, which has put large supplies into the world market. Talk of a gold standard for India has exerted a sentimental effect on the market, though Indian interests have been buyers rather than sellers of silver. They have been getting it at very low prices, however, and have not been in any sense supporting the market. Coincident with the low record for silver, Japanese yen reached their highest price since before the earthquake of 1923, and the belief was strengthened that the Tokio Government would announce a return to the gold standard before the end of the year.

Competition in the Southwest.

An evidence of the active competition among the railroads of the Southwest is disclosed in the annual report of the National Railways of Mexico in which the Executive President informs stockholders that both the Missouri Pacific and the Southern Pacific have approached the company with offers to purchase the Texas Mexican Railway which connects Laredo and Corpus Christie, Texas. Both offers were rejected, he reports. The economic possibilities of this territory and the profitable traffic it furnishes are forwarding railroad unification there faster than in any other section.

How Money Was Sent to Cuba.

Although the banking disturbance in Cuba has ended, the financial machinery that was called into play to check the run is worthy of attention. The basis of the transfer of currency to Havana was the use of the gold settlement fund of the Federal Reserve system. This fund amounts to $800,000,000 and is held in Washington, with various amounts credited to the individual Reserve Banks. When a bank in New York desired currency for its branch in Cuba, it applied to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and stated its requirements. The bank here relayed the information to Washington, which in turn notified the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, which has an agency in Havana. The Atlanta Bank sent the currency. The New York Bank arranging the credit was debited on the New York Federal Reserve Bank's books for the amount obtained, and settled through the usual machinery. A similar amount was transferred in the gold settlement fund from the account of the New York Federal Reserve Bank to the account of the Atlanta Bank. The chief effect of the transaction would be an increase in discounts of the New York Federal Reserve Bank and an enlargement of the note issue of the Atlanta Bank, with a corresponding increase in the latter's gold holdings in the settlement fund.

MONEY.

FRIDAY, APRIL 16, 1926.

Stock Exchange call money continued easy at 4½ per cent., which coincided with the rate on Thursday. Business in the outside market was done at 3¾ per cent., but in neither place was the demand strong. Trading in fixed period market was quiet, in which the interest of borrowers has been curtailed in the face of the supply. More appeared on offer for 60 to 90 days at 4¾ per cent. than previously, but business in these and the later maturities was small. Commercial paper and acceptances were unchanged.

AUTO SHARES DROP AT CANADIAN BLOW

ASSEMBLY PLANTS CLOSE

Heavy selling of automobile shares on the New York Stock Exchange and Curb markets resulted yesterday from the proposal of the Canadian Government to reduce the tariff on automobile imports, which has been in force for several years. As a result of this tariff, many American companies have established assembling plants in Canada, and it was assumed in stock market circles that these plants would be effected by any tariff revision. The selling of stocks also was influenced by news from Canada that some American plants have been shut down.

Ford Motor of Canada which has been weak for several days, dropped to a new low record for the year. The stock sold at 606 earlier this year, but dropped to 470 yesterday. The net loss yesterday was 31 points, following a 68-point drop on Thursday.

General Motors, which was firm during the early trading, dropped to 115¾, and closed with a net loss of 1¾ at 116. Hudson Motors declined from an early high of 66¾ to 62, and closed with a net loss of a point at 63¾. Studebaker was down ¾ of a point net, and other automobile stocks also closed lower.

The financial district received news that the General Motors Canadian plant at Oshawa was closed yesterday, affecting about 3,000 men. Workers, it was reported, found the following notice posted by the company:

"On account of tariff changes, the entire plant is closed indefinitely until the company is able to arrive at an intelligent conclusion as to what future course may be considered advisable."

The Ford Motor Company of Canada has not yet taken action. This company employs approximately 5,000 men.

P. W. Gladden, Secretary, is quoted as saying: "We have not analysed the report. It was a sudden blow and we can't form any opinion until we have considered further the Government's proposals."

In conservative quarters, where Canadian industrial developments are watched closely, the opinion was expressed that the proposed reduction in the Canadian automobile tariff, if adopted by Parliament, would not necessarily mean the end of the manufacture and assembling of American automobiles in Canada. The only direct result of such a change, according to the opinion, would be to reduce their profits.

Assembled American cars, it is explained, have been sold to the Canadian public plus the tariff, thus adding to the profits of the Canadian subsidiaries of the American companies.

Doubt is being expressed that the rates will be reduced to a level which would invite competition for American cars assembled in this country. Such a procedure, it is asserted, would harm the Canadian manufacturers more than the system now in force.

Regarding the operations of the Ford Company of Canada, it is claimed that this company can continue to carry on operations in a profitable basis because of the reciprocal trade agreements between Canada and other British colonies. The Ford Motor Company of Canada, besides the Canadian markets, has the exclusive sales rights for the British Empire, exclusive of Great Britain and Ireland.

SILVER AT LOWEST HERE IN TWO YEARS

JAPAN EXCHANGE A FACTOR

Many Believe Japanese Soon Will Return to Gold Standard and Are Buying Yen in Silver.

The price of silver in New York broke to its lowest level in two years yesterday. London quotations were the lowest in more than ten years, principally as a result of pressure originating in China. The situation is traceable to the belief held in many quarters, and particularly in China, that Japan is likely to return to the gold standard some time this year, restoring her exchange to parity with the dollar. This belief has caused large interests in China to sell silver currency and accumulate yen exchange. One of the results yesterday was the establishment of the highest rate on yen since the period preceding the earthquake of 1922.

Silver was quoted in New York yesterday at 63¾ cents per ounce, a decline of about half a cent from the previous day and a drop of almost 5 cents from the present year's high point of 68⅝ cents recorded on Jan. 4. The latest quotation was the lowest in this market since the week of April 12, 1926. The London quotation on silver yesterday was 29½ pence, the lowest since the early days of the war. This year's high point in London was 31 15-16 pence, established on Jan. 4.

Exchange operators and merchants in China for some time have been heavy buyers of yen and have released large holdings of silver. The supplies of the latter metal in the world's market also have been augmented by a recent decision of the Japanese Government to lift the embargo against the export of silver, which had been in effect since the war period. Discussion of a possible establishment of a gold standard by India, which has a large circulation of silver currency and also uses the metal extensively for ornaments, has had a sentimental effect on the situation. An Indian commission is now in London discussing tentative plans for a gold standard, but bankers believe that the country is not yet ready for one and will not be for a long time. At present Indian interests are buyers, rather than sellers, of silver, but they have been picking it up at very cheap prices, and their demand has not been in any sense a support of the market.

As a result of the buying by Chinese interests and other exchange operators throughout the world, the Japanese yen yesterday advanced 3-16 of a cent and closed at 46.63 cents. The upward movement that has taken place in the yen is illustrated by the fact that a week ago it was quoted at 46.19 cents and a year ago at 42 cents. The par of yen is 49.80 cents, only a trifle more than 3 cents above its present level. Exchange operators consider significant the recent revision of quotations on the yen by the Yokohama Specie Bank. Up to a short time ago this bank had quoted the yen at 45 cents, but it recently advanced the price to 45½ cents, then to 46 cents and finally to 46½ cents. While this had little actual effect on the exchange market, it was taken as an indication of the official value which the Japanese Government has placed on its currency.

There have been reports for months that Japan was contemplating a return to gold, and the Government is understood to be in favor of such a step, but has announced repeatedly that precipitate action would be avoided, in order to prevent the trade disorganization that would result from a violent movement of exchange. The yen has moved steadily upward, however, and the market has been supported at times by the shipment of gold under Government permits.

WANTS A DIVIDEND ON ST. LOUIS COMMON

Walter E. Meyer, an attorney with offices at 50 Pine Street, made clear yesterday that he is not opposed to the Loree plan for merging the St. Louis Southwestern, Missouri-Kansas-Texas and Kansas City Southern railroads, but is seeking the initiation of dividends on St. Louis Southwestern common stock.

Mr. Meyer authorized the following statement:

"Referring to recent press reports on the St. Louis Southwestern situation in which my name has been mentioned, and in behalf of my friends and myself who own a considerable amount of stock of the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Company, I desire to state that we are of the opinion that the minority stockholders are not adequately represented, if at all, on the Board of Directors of the company as at present constituted.

"The laws of the State of Missouri under which the St. Louis Southwestern was organized allow, as I am advised, for representation of minority stock interest by cumulative voting. With this in view we are securing proxies of stockholders for the purpose of electing a number of directors to represent the minority interest on the board, such directors to be without affiliation with any road with which it is proposed to merge the St. Louis Southwestern, and to protect and foster the interest of St. Louis Southwestern stockholders.

"Inasmuch as we have not been informed of the details of the plan, if any, for the merger of the St. Louis Southwestern with the Missouri-Kansas-Texas and Kansas City Southern, there can be no truth in the current published reports that we are opposed to such plan.

"As experience has shown that consolidations, though proposed, may take considerable time to be carried into effect, and as it seems to be admitted by all that the common stock of the St. Louis Southwestern is to be regarded as capable of paying a dividend, we are in favor of the immediate initiation of dividends on the common stock."

Representative Companies' Lists Increased This Year.

A steady increase in the number of stockholders in representative corporations was made this year, ending with March, according to a survey which has been made by Dominick & Dominick. The companies reporting increases in stockholders are as follows:

American Telephone and Telegraph Company, an increase of 2,531 between Feb. 1 and March 15; Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, 3,032 during March; New York Central Railroad, 3,241 between Feb. 1 and March 26; the Studebaker Corporation, 2,000 between Jan. 1 and April 1; Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, 446 during February; Armour & Co., 2,859 during January, February and March; Pennsylvania Railroad, 444 during February; Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, 18,085 between Nov. 25 and Feb. 25; Eastman Kodak Company, approximately 500 during January, February and March.

The Magma Copper Company reports for the quarter ended March 31, 1926, net earnings of $422,824, before depreciation, which compares with $518,356, before depreciation and interest, in the initial quarter of last year. During the quarter Magma produced 7,115,386 pounds of refined copper at a cost of 7.89 cents a pound, after deducting gold and silver credits and before depreciation, but after all fixed and general expenses. The average price obtained for copper during the period was 13.833 cents per pound.

$78,155,000 BONDS OFFERED THIS WEEK

BIG FOREIGN LOAN COMING

$30,000,000 Uruguay Issue to Go on Market Soon—Prices Are Generally Firm.

New bond offerings this week amounted to $78,155,000, against $124,747,000 last week, and $140,240,000 in the corresponding week a year ago. Railroad financing and a wide variety of domestic corporate issues featured the activities of the present week. The offerings, by groups, of this and last week, were as follows:

	This Week.	Last Week.
Railroad	$23,930,000
State and municipal	17,684,000	$82,047,000
Industrial	16,625,000	11,940,000
Public utility	8,916,000	19,550,000
Foreign	6,000,000
Miscellaneous	5,000,000

The largest individual issue of the present week was a $17,030,000 offering by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of Pennsylvania Railroad equipment trust certificates bearing 4½ per cent. interest, and priced to yield an average return of 4.67 per cent. for all maturities. A similar issue of Southern Railway certificates was brought out by Drexel & Co. and amounted to $6,900,000, making the present the largest week in railroad financing since the middle of January, when the Baltimore & Ohio sold a $30,000,000 bond issue.

There was a wide range of State and municipal offerings, the largest being an issue of $7,500,000 of State of Missouri bonds. Los Angeles, with two separate issues; Utica, N. Y., and Miami Beach, Fla., were among the other municipal borrowers. Prices continued firm in the municipal list, and most of the new offerings carried yields ranging from about 4 to 4.40 per cent. Dealers continue to report an inadequate volume of new municipal bonds available in comparison with the broad investment demand.

The only foreign issue of the week consisted of $6,000,000 of Department of Antioquia, Colombia, bonds underwritten by a Blair & Co., Inc., group. Other financing of the week included a $15,000,000 issue of Loew's, Inc., debentures offered by Dillon, Read & Co., a $5,000,000 investment trust issue and several good-sized public utility offerings.

Final details are being completed for a $30,000,000 Uruguayan Government loan, the award for which was made this week to a syndicate headed by Hallgarten & Co. It is expected the bonds will be placed on the market early next week. Several large public utility offerings also are scheduled for next week.

Bond prices were generally firm all this week and showed little tendency to follow fluctuations in the stock market. Although the volume of trading fell off at times, good support was in evidence for high grade investment issues, and also for the more speculative issues. United States Government obligations continued to move upward in price, and there was evidence of accumulation of these securities by large institutions.

The issue of $15,000,000 Loew's, Inc., fifteen-year 6 per cent. sinking fund gold debentures, with stock purchase warrants, offered by Dillon, Read and Company and the National City Company, has been sold and the subscription books closed, according to announcement by the former company.

A net profit of $207,288, after interest, depreciation, &c., is reported for 1925 by the Pierce Petroleum Corporation and its subsidiaries. This compares with a net loss in 1924 of $377,481.

PAN-AMERICAN OIL HAS BIGGEST YEAR

EQUAL TO $9.95 A SHARE

Net profits of the Pan American Petroleum and Transport Company for 1925 established a new high record, it was announced yesterday. Gross profits for the year aggregated $41,971,195, against $29,721,191 in 1924. After all charges and reserves for depreciation, depletion and taxes the company reported a balance of $27,333,094 available for the capital stock, or $9.95 a share on the average amount of Class A and B stocks outstanding.

In 1924 the net amounted to $18,183,079, or $5.85 a share. The increase of $12,150,000 in net available for the stock was equal to 80 per cent.

The earnings for 1925 do not include the returns from the California properties sold last year to Edward L. Doheny and his associates, who organized the Pan American Western Petroleum Company. In 1922, when this company operated the California properties, gross profit aggregated $46,049,787 and net profit $31,870,527.

The consolidated balance sheet on Dec. 31, 1925, showed current assets of $63,497,794 and current liabilities of $16,607,731. The current assets included $21,963,685 cash, $11,303,378 accounts receivable, and inventory, carried at cost, of $19,908,340. Total assets amounted to $189,119,435. The statement says production amounted to 36,600,000 barrels in 1925, a gain of 2,000,000 over 1924.

F. H. Wickett, Chairman of the Board of Directors, in a statement to stockholders said:

"The balance sheet shows an investment in the Lago Oil and Transport Corporation on Dec. 31, 1925, of $6,999,928, representing the cost of 497,860 Class A shares and 1,000,000 Class B shares of the capital stock of the company. The present market value of these stocks, based on exchange market quotations of the Class A stock, is approximately $28,000,000. As a result of options exercised early in 1926, your company has acquired a majority of the capital stock of the Lago Oil and Transport Corporation and has assumed the management of the company as well as its operating subsidiaries.

"The management feels that the results for the year and the present financial condition of the company are highly satisfactory. It further believes that through acquisition of control of Lago Oil and Transport Corporation, previously mentioned, the already strong and satisfactory crude oil position has been materially strengthened, and it looks forward with confidence to the continued prosperity of the company."

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY ON AN UPWARD TREND

Industrial activity throughout the United States maintained a distinct upward trend during March, according to the current issue of Electrical World. During each of the first three months a substantial gain was noted.

Basing its computations upon the consumption of electrical energy by the large central station power customers of the country which is "a sensitive indicator of industrial activity," Electrical World concludes that the gain in March for the country at large was 13.8 per cent. above the average monthly industrial activity for the past three years. In February the gain was 7.5 per cent., while in January it was 9.6 per cent.

In making out the report the statisticians used consumption figures of 1,500 large manufacturing plants which consume approximately 5,000,000,000 kilowatt-hours of energy per year.

"The metal industries taken as a group and for the nation as a whole report activity in March of 12.7 per cent. above the monthly average for the last three years," says the publication. "The transportation industry, including automobiles and shipbuilding, went up to 21.3 per cent. above the average, while the textile industry reported 2.6 per cent. above.

"March activity in the leather industry was 7.2 per cent. below the average, as was also that of the lumber industry, which was 5.9 per cent. below. In the clay and stone industries the activity was reported as 10.4 per cent above the average."

Fisk Rubber Stocks Increase.

Stocks of manufactured goods of the Fisk Rubber Company have shown a slight increase, despite the fact that the company has been among those to abandon the "Spring dating" practice, and also that Fisk's March sales were 10 per cent. above those of a year ago and profits have risen slightly in proportion. Indications at present are, officials of the company said, that April sales and profits will show up as well if not better than those of March.

Buys Interest in Westland Oil.

An interest in the Westland Oil Company, which has oil and gas permits on Sans Creek and Shafer Creek domes in Southern Utah, was purchased yesterday by the Associated Oil Company. The sale price is said to have been more than $100,000.

LOANS TO BROKERS HIT LOWEST POINT

Federal Reserve Board Reports Decrease of $85,699,000 Here in a Week.

Loans of New York City Federal Reserve member banks to brokers and dealers reached their lowest point of the year during the week ended April 7, the Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday. The total loans, secured by stocks and bonds, was $2,487,352,000, a decrease of $85,699,000 from the week of March 31. The week's total represents a reduction of $653,773,000 from the high point of the year, which was $3,141,125,000, for the week ended Jan. 6.

The latest reduction in brokers' loans marked a continuation of a trend that has prevailed almost uninterruptedly since the first of the year, but the recent ratio of loaning between out-of-town and New York banks was reversed. During most of this year the loans of out-of-town banks have been declining steadily, while the New York banks' loans have been gradually increasing. The decline in the week of April 1, however, was accounted for entirely by the New York banks, an increase having been shown by the others.

Detailed figures for the last two weeks reported follow:

	April 7.	March 31.
New York banks' loans for own account	$968,366,000	$1,047,784,000
For account of out-of-town banks	1,018,156,000	1,006,411,000
For account of others	510,810,000	518,456,000

The week of April 7 marked the first time that the New York banks' loans to brokers had fallen below the billion-dollar mark. The period under review took in the days early this month when the money market was affected by the results of the quarterly settlements and sharp advances in the rates on call loans. As was the case on most occasions when money rates stiffened recently, out-of-town banks sent funds in large quantities to be loaned here.

The reduction in the aggregate of brokers' loans reflected further liquidation in the stock market, a process that has been in progress over a large part of the present year.

Gabriel Snubber Earnings.

Net earnings of the Gabriel Snubber Manufacturing Company for the first quarter after depreciation, taxes and all charges were $397,517.

FINANCIAL NOTICES.

Notice of Redemption
To the Holders of
CONTINENTAL POWER & LIGHT COMPANY
Three-Year 6½% Gold Notes

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned, PENNSYLVANIA GAS & ELECTRIC CORPORATION (formerly known as Continental Power & Light Company), intends to redeem, on May 1, 1926, all of its Three-Year 6½% Gold Notes then outstanding under the Trust Agreement dated October 1, 1924, between Continental Power & Light Company and The Equitable Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, and that on May 1, 1926, there will become due and payable at the principal office of The Equitable Trust Company of New York, Trustee, No. 37 Wall Street, New York, N. Y., and in the City and State of New York, upon each of such Notes the principal amount thereof and accrued interest to such redemption date, together with a premium of 1½% of such principal amount.

Upon presentation and surrender as aforesaid on or after May 1, 1926, of such Notes, with all interest coupons maturing subsequent to April 1, 1926, attached thereto, payment will be made of the aforesaid principal amount and premium of 1½%, together with accrued interest from April 1, 1926, to such redemption date; but any holder of such Notes may, upon such presentation and surrender, between April 1, 1926, and May 1, 1926, obtain payment of the aforesaid principal amount thereof and premium of 1½%, together with accrued interest from April 1, 1926, to the date of surrender. The accrued interest represented by coupons maturing prior to such redemption date shall continue to be paid in the usual manner. The interest on said Notes shall cease on such redemption date.

Notes registered as to principal must be accompanied by proper instruments of assignment and transfer in blank.

PENNSYLVANIA GAS & ELECTRIC CORPORATION,
By H. M. Blanchard, Secretary.

NORTHWESTERN LINE GAINS IN NET INCOME

C. & N. W. Reports $10,784,578 for the Year, an Increase of $3,000,000.

PASSENGER REVENUE OFF

Southern and Missouri Pacific Offer to Buy National Railways of Mexico Declined.

The pamphlet report of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company, made public yesterday, shows total operating revenues of $148,558,289, compared with $145,454,584 the year before, but net income of $10,784,578, or an increase of more than $3,000,000 over the $7,871,324 in net reported for 1924. Surplus for the year was $3,410,828, against $297,574. Earnings of $8.35 on the common stock compare with $4.20 the year before.

Revenue from the transportation of freight advanced from $105,516,754 in 1924 to $104,888,463 in 1925, while passenger revenues declined from $28,872,-858 to $26,789,126.

"Careful analysis of the cause of the passenger decrease," says President Frederick W. Sargent, "has been made and it is interesting to know that the percentage of decrease is all in the short haul business in substantially the same ratio as the increase in registered motor vehicles in the States served by the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Company's lines."

The Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway, which is wholly controlled by the Chicago & Northwestern, reports net income of $813,-165 and a balance, after payments of dividends on the preferred stock, of $250,200.

Report of the National Railways of Mexico for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1925, discloses that the Southern Pacific and the Missouri Pacific approached the management of the Mexican railways separately and jointly with a proposal to purchase the Texas Mexican Railway, which operates in Texas between Laredo and Corpus Christi.

"As the execution of such a transaction required the trustees' authorization due to the mortgages affecting all the company's properties," says President Leon Salinas, "it was resolved to ask for their opinion in order to undertake said transaction, which, according to the judgment of the expert consulted by our local board at New York, seemed to be in the interest of the National Railways.

"The conditions proposed by the trustees meant an obligation as burdensome as it was unjustifiable, and our Board of Directors considered it best to abstain from dealing in those terms and wait for a favorable change in the company's situation that might enable it to carry out a convenient arrangement regarding the Texas Mexican Railway under more advantageous conditions."

The balance sheet at the close of the fiscal year discloses current assets of 11,377,016 Mexican gold pesos, and current liabilities of 248,238,942. Of the latter 237,266,192 represented interest coupons paid and unfunded.

C., B. & Q. PROSPECTS GOOD,

Net earnings of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad in 1926 will equal those of 1925 and may exceed them if present prospects are realised, according to an estimate by Hale Holden, President.

"Our estimated March gross revenues were about $784,000 more than the gross of $42,129,250 earned in the previous March, and the surplus after charges for the first quarter of the year, with March estimated, was $4,880,287, an increase of $1,638,835 over the surplus of $3,221,452 in the corresponding quarter of 1925," he said. "We earned our dividend requirements and about $560,000 more in the first quarter. Weather conditions were unfavorable for maintenance work, and we spent substantially the same amount on maintenance as in the first quarter of last year."

OFFICERS SHIFTED IN CHASE NATIONAL

OTHER PERSONNEL CHANGES

R. L. Clarkson Vice Chairman of Directors—Vice Presidents Are Transferred.

The list of officers of the consolidated Chase National Bank, which formally absorbed the Mechanics and Metals National Bank last Monday, was announced yesterday and showed several important changes in personnel. Albert H. Wiggin, who has been doing double duty as Chairman of the Board of Directors and President of the Chase National Bank, becomes the senior executive of the consolidated institution, with the title of Chairman of the Board of Directors. Gates W. McGarrah, formerly Chairman of the Mechanics and Metals, becomes Chairman of the Executive Committee of the consolidated bank, and John McHugh, formerly President of the Mechanics and Metals, becomes the President of Chase.

Robert L. Clarkson, who last Summer resigned as Vice President of the Chase Securities Corporation to become assistant to the President of the Chase National Bank, now becomes Vice Chairman of the Board of Directors. Frank O. Roe, Harry H. Pond, Samuel S. Campbell, William E. Lake and M. G. B. Whelpley, formerly Vice Presidents of the Mechanics and Metals, become Vice Presidents of the Chase. William P. Holly, who joined the Chase Bank in 1901 and was made assistant cashier in 1915 and cashier in 1921, has been elected Vice President and cashier.

All former assistant Vice Presidents of the Chase Bank become second Vice Presidents and the title of Assistant Vice President is dropped. Alexander S. Webb, Frederick W. Gehle and George W. Simmons of the Mechanics and Metals and Arthur M. Aiken, formerly cashier of that bank, become Second Vice Presidents. Ernest W. Davenport, Clifton Stanton, Robert W. Kiesling, Alexander F. Bryan, George W. Dusenbury, Samuel S. Towne and Harry E. Churchill, formerly assistant cashiers of the Mechanics and Metals, become assistant cashiers of the Chase.

Edward S. Dix, George J. Runge, Vincent L. Banker and Frederick Pleasant of the Mechanics and Metals become assistant trust officers, and Oliver B. Hill, formerly in charge of a division in the Chase Trust Department, also becomes an assistant trust officer. Carl Schulz, manager of the Mechanics and Metals foreign department, becomes a manager of the foreign department of the consolidated bank, and Ernest H. Kuhlman and James A. Macilvaine are made assistant managers of the foreign department.

Alfred W. Hudson has been appointed Second Vice President in charge of the branch at Forty-first Street and Madison Avenue and Miss Constance M. Craigie becomes manager of the women's department of that branch. Vernon P. Baker, formerly assistant manager of the Madison Avenue branch, becomes assistant cashier in charge of the new Park Avenue branch at Park Avenue and Sixtieth Street, and Miss Harriet H. Sheppard will direct the women's department. Henry L. Nichols, formerly assistant manager of the Hamilton Trust branch, Brooklyn, becomes manager of the Chase Safe Deposit Company, Park Avenue Branch.

White Rock Earnings Decrease.

The White Rock Mineral Springs Company reports net earnings for the initial quarter of this year of $175,644, after depreciation, Federal taxes, &c., which is a decrease of $29,905 under the net income of $205,449 for the same period in 1925. The 1925 earnings are equal, after dividends on 7 per cent. first preferred stock, to $2.80 a share (per $100) earned on $1,000,000 second preferred, and to 58 cents a share on 200,000 no par shares of no par common stock. The 1924 earnings equaled $3.40 a share on second preferred and 68 cents a share on the no par common.

USE OF GASOLINE SHOWS 20% GAIN

FLORIDA LEADS IN INCREASE

Advance of 80% There Reported by Petroleum Institute—Oklahoma Second.

Consumption of gasoline in the United States in the first two months this year gained substantially over that of a year ago, according to the American Petroleum Institute. The gain was especially large in Florida and other Southern States as a result of the land boom there.

According to the Institute, thirty-three States which compile figures of gasoline consumption, reported a total of 581,228,000 gallons consumed in January and February, an increase of 97,-774,000 gallons, or 20.2 per cent. compared with the same period a year ago.

Florida led all States in the percentage gain. Gasoline consumption in Florida in January and February was 82,654,000 gallons, against 29,159,000 gallons in the same months a year ago, a gain of 80 per cent. The total consumption for this State alone was equal to 4 per cent. of the consumption for the entire country in the same period.

Oklahoma, which ranked second to Florida in the percentage gain, consumed 31,800,000 gallons in the first two months, or 50 per cent. more than in the same period in 1925. North Carolina reported a gain of 39 per cent. in consumption. Mississippi 33 per cent., Missouri 28 per cent., Minnesota 27 per cent., Georgia 23 per cent. and North Dakota 26 per cent.

FINANCE LEADERS IN ANNUAL DINNER

HE TELLS AIM OF RAILROADS

Mayor Walker Says City Will Treat Financiers and Labor Unions Alike.

Several hundred representatives in the field of finance in Wall Street and throughout the country gathered at the Hotel Astor last evening for the annual dinner of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms.

Election of officers held in conjunction with the dinner resulted in the return of Colonel Henry Rogers Winthrop to the Presidency and the choice of the following: Vice-President, Edward Allen Pierce; Treasurer, Jules S. Bache; Secretary, Frederick F. Lyden. Governors chosen for the term ending in 1929 were Edwin M. Chapman, Chauncey P. Colwell, Herbert L. Foster, John W. Hanes and Charles A. Morse; and, for the terms ending in 1927, Joseph L. Lilienthal.

Senator Lenroot Speaks.

Senator Irvine L. Lenroot of Wisconsin, in an address dealing largely with the farmer's attitude toward corporations and big business, discussed the belief that railroads "are not run primarily for service either to the public or their stockholders, but for the benefit of what he terms 'Wall Street'; that they are used like chips in a poker game, and that they are sometimes deliberately wrecked for the purpose of making huge profits out of reorganization."

"To what extent there may be foundation for this belief I shall not discuss," he said, "but I do wish to take this occasion to say that a railroad, being a public utility, must have but two objects—service to the public and a fair return to its stockholders. To insure this is the object of Government regulation, and unless there is to be more instead of less of such regulation it is to the interest of all having to do with railroad stocks and securities to do what they can to see that railroads shall serve the purposes that I have indicated."

The issuing of stocks in classes, some of which provide no voting power, was attacked by Senator Lenroot as an evil.

He said he had no criticism of men who thought securities were offered below their true value and bought for a rise in their market quotations, "but feverish, uninteligent speculation, whether in Florida real estate or upon Wall Street, is an unmixed evil," he said. "Great buying booms led to speculation and to inflation of prices of stocks, bringing inflation of prices of commodities, taking money from legitimate channels of trade, distracting minds of persons from their regular business and injuring the country as a whole," he asserted.

"Here, I believe, is a distinct duty of the Government to control this situation through discount rates of our Federal Reserve Banks," he said, "but it is also a distinct duty of every line of business, including that in which you are engaged, to do what can be done to secure stable prices and a normal prosperity."

Mayor Walker Applauded.

Mayor James J. Walker was loudly applauded when he rose to speak, and even more loudly at the conclusion of his address, which was largely humorous and contained many references to Mayor Hylan's attacks on Wall Street and the "interests."

"I realize that it is a long time since you have had a Mayor of the city in your midst," he said. "I do not consider you as men of Wall Stret—rather as men of New York. For that matter, no street is more than any other street with the present Administration. Fifth Avenue means the same as First Avenue or Tenth Avenue and will get just as much or just as little. Wall Street will be treated just as the labor unions will be treated, for on Nov. 3 politics ceased with me. The people in the City Hall are there to provide a sensible, sober, sane government without discrimination.

"You people have a great responsibility in helping me administer the affairs of this world city, for you do important work. I want your assistance and cooperation. You people mean a lot in this city, but whenever you become too conceited remember that you are residents of a city that has the only 125 pound Mayor in the country."

Judge Lovett Says Present Statutes Virtually Bar Big Mergers.

Except for intra-system combinations, few if any important railroad consolidations can be effected until Congress alters the present law, it was said yesterday by Judge Robert S. Lovett, Chairman of the Union Pacific Railroad. He has just returned from Santa Barbara, Cal.

"Congress should confer the requisite powers on existing corporations, as contemplated in the Cummins bill now pending in the Senate, although the compulsory features in that bill are objectionable," he said. "Many States have corporate limitations which retard or prevent consolidations and a Federal law superseding these is needed."

Judge Lovett said that the clerk of the Southern District Court of California was preparing the record of the Union Pacific's action to set aside the Los Angeles & Salt Lake valuation for submission to the United States Supreme Court, to which the Interstate Commerce Commission has appealed from the California Court's decision. Argument is expected to begin in Autumn.

GRAHAM BROS. EXPLAIN.

DETROIT, Mich., April 16.—Acting in response to many requests for information regarding their plans and the situation existing between themselves and Dodge Brothers, Inc., Ray A. Graham, on behalf of the Graham Brothers, issued today the following statement:

"Graham Brothers left the Dodge organization entirely upon their own volition. The friendliest feeling exists between the new administration and ourselves.

"We have disposed of our entire holdings in Graham Brothers Truck Company and have no plans for the future other than that we intend to take a rest."

DUBIOUS ON BERLIN LOAN.

Bankers Here Say No Such Deal With German Bank Is Contemplated Now.

A cable dispatch from Berlin yesterday, saying that the Renten Kredit Bank intended shortly to borrow an additional $25,000,000 in New York, surprised bankers here, who said that negotiations for such an advance had been opened. It is understood that no loan to the bank is imminent, but that a bond issue may be floated later in the year. Previous issues by the bank have sold successfully here, and it enjoys good credit.

A bond issue of $25,000,000 of the Renten Kredit Bank was underwritten last August by a syndicate headed by the National City Company. It was understood at the time that an additional loan of a similar amount would be made about the first of the year, but economical improvement in Germany and the accumulation of funds there made it possible for the bank to obtain its financial requirements in the home market. The bank recently obtained 250,000,000 marks from the Gold Discount Bank in Germany, but this was a relatively short-term loan, the first third falling due in 1929.

The Renten Kredit Bank last December complied with all technical requirements for a new American loan. Recently it amended its by-laws by adopting a rule to limit mortgage loans to 40 per cent. of the assessed valuation of the properties.

BANK HERE ASKS CHARTER.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Applications to organize have been received by the Controller of the Currency from the Central Park National Bank of Central Park, L. I., N. Y., capital $50,000, through Stephen J. Madden of Central Park; the First National Bank of Ireton, Iowa, capital $25,000, and the Fogelsville National Bank of Fogelsville, Pa., capital $25,000.

A charter has been issued to the Citizens National Bank of Muskogee, Okla., capital $100,000. The title of the National Bank of Winter Haven, Fla., has been changed to the American National Bank of Winter Haven.

HAS BIGGEST OIL TANKER.

Gulf Refining Soon to Place the Gulfcrest in Operation.

A new oil tanker, the Gulfcrest, a 13,500-ton Diesel engine driven vessel, was delivered to the Gulf Refining Company yesterday by the American Brown Boveri Electric Corporation.

The Gulfcrest is the largest craft of its type in service in the United States, having a cargo capacity of 4,500,000 gallons and a dead-weight tonnage, fully loaded, of 19,425 tons. The Gulfcrest will make her initial voyage to Port Arthur, Texas.

Four dredges were launched yesterday by Brown Boveri and will be delivered within a week to the American Dredging Company of Philadelphia.

Stone & Webster Buy Building.

Stone & Webster, Inc., announced yesterday that the company had purchased the Massachusetts Trust Building at Franklin, Federal and Devonshire Streets, Boston, for main offices. The building is ten stories high and has a ground area of 23,000 square feet. The company will occupy 60 per cent. of the space in the building within a year.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Robinson & Co. have opened an uptown office in the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company Building under the management of J. S. Mackintosh.

Nelson A. Merceresu, who was yesterday made Assistant Secretary of the American Trust Company, and W. F. Mulley, also an Assistant Secretary, will be in charge of the company's new Staten Island office.

Dudley Biddall has been appointed to succeed the late Woodman Morrison as manager of the Eastern office of George Harrison Phelps, Inc.

UNIONS ASK CHANGE IN RAIL LABOR RULES

PARLEY HERE IS PUT OVER

Conferences between the Committee of Managers representing the railroads, of which John G. Walber is Chairman, and the Executive Committee appointed by the Order of Railway Conductors and Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen were adjourned yesterday afternoon to permit each side to prepare such data as will be necessary to reach a decision on wage demands.

W. G. Lee, President of the trainmen; L. E. Sheppard, head of the conductors, and other members of the unions' committee will meet railroad officials of the Southern District on April 26 and those of the Western District on May 3. Conferences in New York will be resumed after the conclusion of the western meeting, but it was said yesterday that no date had been set as yet.

Discussion at yesterday's meeting and that of the day before concerned the changes proposed by the workers in rules governing their hours and pay.

In addition to the wage demands which run from $1 a day to $1.64 in the case of the baggagemen handling both express and dyname the following stipulations are made:

All rates of pay in excess of standard rates and all mountain, desert or other differentials to be maintained—that is, the same amount of money now paid in excess of standard rates to be paid in excess of the rates agreed upon.

The adoption of the rates suggested shall in no case operate to bring about a reduction in compensation now paid.

Literal application of the following language: "In all cases of service, trainmen's time will commence at the time they are required to report for duty and shall continue until the the time they are relieved of duty."

A through freight train is one that gets clear and off main tracks up cars nor loads or unloads freight en route nor does station switching. On all other freight trains trainmen shall be paid not less than local or way freight rates.

Not less than one brakeman shall be assigned to every passenger train of two or more cars or on other passenger trains of less than two cars that carry either baggage, mail or express matter for distribution.

All rates and rules herein enumerated to be effective as of Jan. 1, 1926, except where agreements in effect have been made to a later date.

Strenuous objection is found among railroad officials to the above demands—particularly to the clause which asks the definition of a through freight train. As the trainmen are paid on a mileage basis the employes on trains classified as local receive a higher rate than those on through trains.

National Carbon Buys Corliss.

P. P. Huffard, Vice President of the National Carbon Company, told yesterday of the purchase by the company of plant, inventory and good-will of the Corliss Carbon Company of Bradford, Pa., maker of industrial carbon brushes and other products. J. F. Kerlin, President of the Corliss Company, becomes a Vice President of National Carbon, having charge of sales of all carbon products.

FIRE AFFECTS OIL POLICIES.

Cancellation of insurance policies held by several oil companies in California by certain fire insurance companies has been reported as a result of the fire which destroyed several million barrels of oil on the Union Oil Company property at San Luis Obispo and La Brea, Cal.

No definite information was obtainable but it is believed in oil circles that the canceling companies had decided the business was unprofitable upon the rate scale now in effect.

The cancellation has not become general and the general belief is that most insurance companies will leave existing policies in force until they expire and then demand a higher premium rate. The problem of raising the rates will be taken up soon by the Insurance Rate Making Board of California, at which time it is believed the board will deliberate at length before making any drastic changes.

WARNS OF RAIL COMBINES.

BOSTON, April 16 (AP).—The United States should consider carefully before taking steps toward amalgamation of large railroad systems, Sir Henry Thornton, head of the Canadian National Railways, said in an address before the Chamber of Commerce today. He added that it might help New England to consolidate some of her rail lines, but that large scale amalgamation had many disadvantages.

The consolidation of British railroads had not been entirely successful, Sir Henry said. He believed the wiping out of human contacts made necessary in the larger system was a loss, and said the expected economies had not been effected by unification. It was not "humanly or practically possible," he said, to eliminate shops or stations by amalgamation.

BANK ENLARGES BOARD.

William L. Kavanaugh, Joseph Cohn, William F. Donnelly and J. W. Miller have been added to the Board of Directors of the Century Bank, it was announced yesterday. Professor Michael I. Pupin, scientist and electrical expert, who has been President of the bank since its organization, resigned, in order to make a trip around the world. B. L. Rankovic, Vice President, was elected to the Presidency. He is President of the Belgrave Press. The other directors are Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins, D. B. Tripp and Charles Vorisek.

Newsprint Production Increases.

United States production of newsprint during March totaled 145,910 tons, as compared with 129,622 tons in February, according to reports from the producing companies. Shipments reached 142,066 tons, as compared with 128,635 tons. Canadian mills report total production of 154,093 in March, as against 135,663 tons in February, while shipments were 153,187 tons, against 136,505.

Loans and Deposits Down; Investments Up In Member Bank Weekly Report of April 7

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The Federal Reserve Board's weekly condition statement of 709 reporting member banks in leading cities as of April 7 shows a reduction of $20,000,000 in loans and discounts, and an increase of $26,000,000 in investments. These changes were accompanied by reductions of $140,000,000 in net demand deposits and $47,000,000 in borrowings from the Federal Reserve banks.

Member banks in New York City reported declines of $83,000,000 in loans and discounts and $151,000,000 in net demand deposits, and increases of $19,000,000 and $18,000,000 respectively in investments and in borrowings from the Federal Reserve Bank.

Loans on stocks and bonds declined $53,000,000 at all reporting banks, and $39,000,000 and $17,000,000 respectively at reporting banks in the New York and Boston districts.

"All other" loans and discounts were $36,000,000 less than a week ago, declines of $45,000,000 in the New York district and $8,000,000 in the Atlanta district being offset in part by increases of $16,000,000 in the Boston district and $6,000,000 in the Richmond district.

Total loans to brokers and dealers, secured by stocks and bonds, made by reporting member banks in New York City declined $56,000,000, loans for their own account being $90,000,000 less than a week ago, loans for out-of-town banks $12,000,000 above, and loans for the account of others $6,000,000 below the amount reported the previous week.

Holdings of United States securities were $43,000,000 larger than a week ago, the principal changes including increases of $20,000,000 at reporting banks in the Chicago district, $19,000,000 in the New York district and $15,000,000 in the Boston district. Holdings of other bonds, stocks and securities declined $7,000,000, only relatively small changes being reported for any of the Federal Reserve districts.

Net demand deposits were $140,000,000 lower than reported for the previous week, reductions of $170,000,000 in the New York district and $11,000,000 in the San Francisco district being partly offset by increases of $41,000,000 and $11,000,000 in the Chicago and Boston districts respectively. Time deposits increased $38,000,000, principally in the Cleveland and Chicago districts.

The principal changes in borrowings from the Federal Reserve banks were reductions of $32,000,000 and $7,000,000 in the Chicago and St. Louis districts respectively, and an increase of $11,000,000 in the New York district.

BARS SALE OF STOCK IN VICTOR PAGE CO.

NO AUTOS YET ON MARKET

Concern, Founded in 1921, Lays Its Failure to Produce to Agents Who Have Been Discharged.

Supreme Court Justice William B. Carswell, in Brooklyn, has granted the motion made by Deputy State Attorney General William H. Milholland temporarily to enjoin the Victor Page Motors Corporation of Stamford, Conn., from further sales of its stock, or other activities. The injunction will remain in effect until the trial of the action, date for which has not been set. Justice Carswell granted the motion Thursday and his action became public yesterday.

The Page Motors Corporation has been under investigation both in Connecticut and New York. In Connecticut the case was dismissed after it was said, an agreement of some sort had been arrived at out of court. Some weeks ago, Mr. Milholland, accompanied by State troopers and office assistants, temporarily broke up a meeting of the concern's stockholders when he demanded that Victor W. Page, its President, who was then presiding, take an oath and submit to questioning.

Threats to throw Mr. Milholland out were made, a newspaper photographer's overcoat was torn from his back and the stockholders finally voted that Mr. Page refuse to answer questions until the following day when he could have an attorney with him. Testimony was taken for several days at Mr. Milholland's office and when the case was first presented in court a stay was granted pending the decision reached Thursday.

It is alleged by the State Attorney General's Anti-Stock Frauds Bureau that the Page Motors Corporation, although organized in 1921, has not placed a single motor or automobile on the market, although it has admittedly produced several experimental motor cars.

The action to enjoin the company is directed also against Mr. Page, Charles Freeman, Chairman of the corporation's Production Fund Committee, and John Paige Knox, its attorney secretary. Mr. Page has testified that the corporation's failure to produce automobiles has been due to misrepresentations made by agents who have since been discharged, but whose statements caused investigations that have taken up the time and money of the corporation. It was admitted that the corporation had received for its stock about $500,000.

TO ABSORB RANGE COMPANY

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 16 (F).—A million dollar transaction whereby Albert Pick & Co. of Chicago will acquire the John Van Range Company of this city has been virtually completed, it was learned today. Ira Krupnick, Vice President of the Pick company, conferred here with representatives of the Range company and confirmed reports of the proposed sale.

Negotiations are expected to be concluded in about thirty days, when stockholders of the Range company meet to consider plans to dissolve the company and distribute its assets.

The deal involves the main manufacturing plant of the Range company in Cincinnati, sales branches in Atlanta, Cleveland, Chicago and other cities, and several warehouses here.

Incorporated in 1883 to manufacture large ranges for hotels, restaurants, &c., the John Van Range Company was said to have done an annual business of approximately $3,000,000. The Pick company, a $25,000,000 corporation specializes in the outfitting of hotels, restaurants and large institutions.

Reorganizes Sales Department.

Reorganization of the Graybar Electric Company's sales department, including the creation of several new activities, was announced yesterday by G. E. Cullinan, Vice President, in charge of sales. The company was organized to take over the merchandise business of the Western Electric Company. Under the reorganization, M. A. Curran, formerly manager of the central station department, becomes assistant to the Vice President and J. L. Ray, formerly manager of the supply and equipment department, becomes general supply sales manager.

Morgenthaler Assets $30,080,489.

In the annual statement of the Morgenthaler Linotype Corporation it is shown that assets of the company on March 31 totaled $30,080,489, as compared with $30,084,953 on Sept. 30, 1925. Profit and loss surplus on March 31 was $11,320,935, as against $10,816,042 on Sept. 30, 1925. Among the assets were: Cash, $655,627; bills receivable, $9,871,005; accounts receivable, $3,682,880, and inventories, $4,032,223. Liabilities totaled $18,759,554, including bills payable, $600,000; accounts payable, $108,739, and reserves, $5,360,815.

Acquires Savannah Utility.

C. W. Kellogg, President of the Northern Public Service Company, announced yesterday that the plan for acquisition of the Savannah Electric and Power Company had become effective through the deposit of 95 per cent. of the common stock of the latter company. The acquired company does an exclusive electric light, power and traction business in Savannah and its suburbs. Its power stations have 18,300 kilowatt capacity and its railways have sixty-seven miles of single tracks.

Servel Company to Reorganize.

Plans for recapitalization of the Servel Company under a Delaware charter were approved by stockholders at a meeting in Richmond, Va., yesterday. Under the plans, holders of the old company's Class A shares will receive stock of the new company on a share-for-share basis. The new company will have fifty one-liters of stock and all of it will have voting power.

RECEIVERS NAMED FOR EMPIRE FARMS

New Jersey Concern's Assets Are Put at $3,000,000 and Liabilities $1,000,000.

Equity receivers have been appointed, it was learned yesterday, for Empire Farms, Inc., operators of hundreds of acres of truck farms at Great Meadows, Warren County, N. J. The corporation's assets are put at $3,000,000 and liabilities at $1,000,000.

Robert Walker, who has been manager of the farms for fifteen years, and William L. Dill, State Motor Vehicle Commissioner, were appointed receivers by Federal Judge William N. Runyon in Newark on Monday.

The corporation controls the stock of the Alphano Corporation and the Moorsland Farms Corporation. The New York offices are at 2 Rector Street. John N. Hoff of Bogota, N. J., is President, and H. Clay Lint of New York, Secretary.

Isador E. Ostro of Brooklyn, a stockholder, brought the action to preserve the assets, through Furst & Furst, attorneys, of Newark. Several suits, the nature of which was not disclosed, are expected, it was said, and Ostro sets forth in his application that ready cash to meet judgments is not available.

BUYS ARROW BUS LINES.

Newark Public Service Reported to Have Paid $500,000.

Announcement was made by the Public Service Transportation Company in Newark yesterday that it had purchased the Arrow Bus Company, which operates three lines, one between Paterson and Newark, another between Paterson and Midland Park and the third between Paterson and Suffern.

Although the price was not made known it is reported that it was approximately $500,000. Fifty buses operate on the lines, with forty-two operating permits. Twenty-four permits are on the Newark-Paterson line, six on the Paterson-Midland Park line and twelve on the Paterson-Suffern line.

Prior to March 5 the lines were operated by John H. Stoddard, but on that date they were incorporated as the Arrow Bus Lines, Inc., with an authorized capital stock of 100,000 shares. Besides Mr. Stoddard, the incorporators were: C. A. Stoddard, a brother, and R. T. Wilson, a brother-in-law.

WHEAT OPENS FIRM, BUT ENDS WITH LOSS

EXPORT DEMAND BRISKER

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 16.—Wheat opened firm, with May and July selling at a new high on the present movement, but an overbought condition was disclosed, and with heavy general local and commission house profit-taking prices declined and the close was at net losses of ⅞@2¼ cents, May leading. The recession in the latter delivery was accelerated by the purchase of a cargo of 122,000 bushels of Duluth No. 2 Northern for shipment here by May 20 at a price equal to 1½ cents over old May.

A leading local professional was credited with having gone out of his line during the day, and many of the Pit element who have been heavily long on May sold on the early bulge, which put it to $1.60.

Export demand was brisk, with Winnipeg messages claiming that the pool had sold 2,700,000 bushels during the last two days, while the seaboard reported 800,000 to 900,000 bushels sold in all positions, including two cargoes to Portugal and a cargo to Brazil. There was also some business in durum and in new crop Winters via the Gulf.

Liverpool was weak and unchanged to 1¾d lower, with May in that market only ¼ cent over Chicago at the time it closed. Buenos Aires declined 2¾@3 cents.

Crop Observers Kinyon and Le Count have taken the field again and are in Nebraska. Advices from the Southwest indicate that sentiment there is distinctly bearish both on the old and the new crop situation.

There are said to be possibly 500,000 bushels of wheat at Duluth that might be moved to this market. Late in the day it was understood that the 122,000 bushels bought during the day were for delivery purposes, although the price paid failed to show any profit to the buyer.

The market shows an advance of around 18 cents in May from the recent low point. The July is commencing to feel the effect of the increased interest in new crop Winters for shipment via the Gulf. Foreigners bought both May and July wheat here early.

Primary arrivals were 385,000 bushels; week ago, 484,000; last year, 1,000,000. Shipments were 353,000 bushels; week ago, 806,000; last year, 408,000.

Primary arrivals were 377,000 bushels; week ago, 419,000; last year, 814,000, and shipments, 511,000 bushels; week ago, 401,000; last year, 904,000.

Oats closed ¾ cent lower, with scattered liquidation in the May. Cash interests bought May and sold July at ⅝ to ¾ cent difference. Weather conditions in the West were favorable for field work and the bulk of the seed is in the ground in parts of Iowa. Nothing was heard regarding export demand.

There was a halt in the reaction in crude rubber yesterday, prices advancing from half a cent for the active positions to more than 1 cent in the distant months under the influence of short covering on the theory that the decline had been too drastic and the re-entry of factory buying, attracted by levels which represent a cut of about 50 per cent. from those which prevailed just about three months ago.

Business was a good deal quieter than that staged on Thursday, 319 contracts changing hands, compared with 479 on the previous day. May at 46.30@46.45 cents were up 60 and 70 points, respectively. August and December, the only other months dealt in, made gains of 110 and 130 points. Prices on the London market were a pence to a pence and a quarter higher at the close. According to cable advices from London, all deliveries from April to December were quoted at 22¼d. This is the first time in history that delivery rubber eight months hence was quoted at the same price as spot deliveries.

	High.	Low.	Close.	Thursday's Close.
August	48.00	46.10	46.10@	45.30
December	48.00	45.50	45.30@	44.00

N nominal. B bid.

Other months closed—June, 46.60; September, 45.60; October, 45.40; November, 45.40; January, 45.00; February, 44.80; March, 44.50. Spots, smoked ribbed sheets, were quoted at 49.00.

The outside market also developed an undertone of strength, with resultant advances in all grades. In spot sheets this amounted to 3 cents, at 49 cents, and in first latex crepe the gain was fully as much at 50 cents. Other grades followed this lead and closed higher. The turnover revealed a contraction from the volume sold on Thursday.

	Spot.	May.	July-Sept.
Ribbed smoked sheets	.49	.47	.46
Amber No. 3	.46	.45	.44
Para, upriver	.43	.42	.41

$5,000 for Rubber Exchange Seat.

Three seats on the Rubber Exchange of New York changed hands yesterday at prices ranging from $4,800 to $5,000, which compare with a previous sale price of $4,500. The seat of W. S. Dowdell was sold to T. K. Evans and that of J. J. Carles to Clarence H. Heaume for $4,800 each. F. R. Henderson President of the Exchange, paid $5,000 for the seat of H. Hollesen, which was purchased for the General Rubber Company.

Niagara Power Income.

Net income for the first quarter of 1926 of the Niagara Falls Power Company was $721,594 after all charges, as compared with $708,182 in the corresponding period of the preceding year. The 1926 quarterly earnings are equal, after preferred dividends, to 89 cents a share on 721,152 shares of common stock, as compared with 88 cents a share on 714,984 shares of common in the same period of 1924.

HEAVY SALES CAUSE DECLINE IN COTTON

NEW ORLEANS THE LEADER

Increased Pressure Causes Southern Market to Head the General Movement Downward.

Less rainfall occurred in Southern States than for some time and predictions for fair, warmer weather developed yesterday the heaviest selling movement experienced in cotton in several weeks. After holding comparatively steady for several hours, pressure of liquidation forced quotations off one-quarter of a cent, with final prices 17 to 27 points lower than Thursday. Though the covering demand for May contracts furnished resistance, buying failed to counteract improvement in weather prospects, and all new crop positions went into new low territory for the year. January sold below 18¾ cents, while both October and December changed hands at lower quotations than were reached during the decline the early part of March.

New Orleans led the day's downward movement as a direct result of increased Southern pressure at that centre. The recent lowering of differences of high grades reflected a desire on the part of holders to secure a market at a lower price basis. With planting operations under way as far north as the Carolinas, Southern advices have reported increased offerings of cotton still on hand from last season's production. Dealers have bought lower grades in the interior, and in many instances have been selling contracts as hedges against at least 50 per cent. of the cotton purchased.

The demand for May, as obligations in that month were reduced, proved the main support of the market. Scale orders in the new crop were on a diminished volume compared with the buying for both domestic and foreign account at the same price level six weeks ago. After December orders at 17 cents had been filled, persistent weakness in New Orleans carried quotations steadily lower the last hour and caused lowest prices of the session in closing dealings.

Week-end figures showed 112,000 bales in sight, against 82,000 last year, making 15,129,000 for the season against 14,021,000 last year. Spinners took 208,000, against 220,000 last year, bringing the total for the season to 12,151,000, against 11,671,000 a year ago. The visible supply decreased 96,000, as against 137,000 last year, leaving the world's supply of American 4,161,000, compared with 3,302,000 a year ago.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Previous Day.

Falling Prices and Keen Competition the Present Ruling Influences.

BOSTON, April 16.—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say: "The Eastern wool markets continue very quiet. Apparently there is nothing in the immediate outlook to give anyone much confidence. Business at the mills is slow and generally unsatisfactory. All alone the line. Buying is hand-to-mouth and consequently competition is all the keener with narrower profits and frequently mills sell without profit to keep their organizations intact.

"In the West, buying has been less general and a smaller volume of wool has been sold. In Montana, 36 cents has been paid, partly on manufacturers' account for bulk half-blood clips, although most growers have been firmly asking 40 cents. In other sections there has been little change. One or two choice clips in Nevada and Texas have been purchased at a half-cent advance in the grease, but probably at satisfactory clean costs. Some buyers have withdrawn virtually from the market, quoting lower prices.

"The foreign markets were fairly steady on merinos and fine crossbreds, while medium to low crossbreds are easier, prices being down a half cent on tops."

HULSWIT QUITS SUPERPOWER

Frank T. Hulswit, who resigned as President of the United Light and Power Company following a failure in market operations involving the company's stock, has resigned from the Board of American Superpower Corporation, it was learned yesterday.

Mr. Hulswit also had resigned from the presidency of the Brooklyn Borough Gas Company and from the boards of other utilities controlled by the United Light and Power Company. He has retained his controlling interest in the American States Securities Corporation, which he organized in December for general investments.

LITERARY FOLK TILT ON COPYRIGHT BILL

IMPORT BAN STORM CENTRE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Book publishers, librarians and university men sparred back and forth today in the hearing before the House Patents Committee over the merits of the Vestal Copyright bill and the restriction it would impose on the importation of foreign prints of books on which American publishers own rights. When the librarians insisted that they should have English prints for their particular uses, the publishers assailed such ideas as "snobbish" and not in good faith.

Dr. M. L. Raney of Johns Hopkins University, appearing on behalf of the American Library Association, wanted to revise the sections involved so as to leave the law as at present.

The publishers then assailed the proposed revision, and the day's session ended with the bill receiving a few more endorsements from the literary world.

Gene Buck, President of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, endorsed the bill, saying that the music writers were enthusiastically in favor of the automatic copyright provision and the plan to enter the International Copyright Union.

Others who appeared to endorse the bill were Clifford P. Smith of Christian Science Publications, Frederick G. Melcher of New York City, Eustace Seligman, representing counsel for the National Association of Book Publishers, and Karl W. Kirshwey, representing the Hearst interests.

Melcher Attacks Cost Plea.

Mr. Seligman said that the clause to which the librarians objected would not prevent them from obtaining English copies.

Mr. Melcher said there was little or no difference in the cost of English and American prints when the 25 per cent. discounts given by American publishers were considered. The plea of exorbitant prices was unreasonable, he maintained.

The educators painted a picture of young America's education being neglected, scientific research being hampered and development being impeded if the bill were to pass in its present form.

"The buyer for libraries and the student are interested in the original copies and not reprints," Dr. Raney declared.

"Do you mean to say," asked Representative Sol Bloom, Democrat, of New York, "that libraries in this country would prefer to buy their books abroad to purchasing works produced by the people of this country when those libraries themselves are supported by these people?"

Dr. Raney insisted that the libraries and classical students must have the originals. He added that it would be a physical impossibility for the New York customs to handle the volumes imported from England, check them to see if American copyrights were held and ascertain whether there was a stock of them on sale in this country.

Dr. William Mather Lewis, President of George Washington University, appearing on behalf of the Association of Urban Universities, including Columbia and the College of the City of New York, also said there would be difficulty in administering the importation clause.

Dr. Lewis Sees Science Injured.

Dr. Lewis declared that 75 per cent. of the world's research in science was being done by scientists supported by the universities of this country, and that any restriction such as the importation clause, through the delays involved, would deprive them of an opportunity to keep abreast of developments which foreign research workers would enjoy.

Objection to the automatic copyright provision was voiced by Dr. Harrison E. Howell, representing the American Chemical Society. He said that this feature presented an important problem, particularly in the preparation of scientific magazines, in the editing of which he is engaged.

The Archaeological Institute of America, the College Art Association and American Philosophical Association were represented by Dr. David M. Robinson.

"The importation clause would prove a great impediment to education," he asserted. "Students and university professors always want the English edition to see exactly what the author says. In the American reprints there might be typographical errors."

Dr. R. M. Curtis, representing the President of Goucher College and the Association of American Colleges, also opposed the proposed restriction of purchases abroad.

"We have various views on diplomatic isolation, but I do not think we want a policy of intellectual isolation," said Dr. Curtis.

Others who appeared were Truman Michelson, representing the Linguists' Society; John C. French of Johns Hopkins University, representing the Modern Languages Association; Dr. Henry G. Doyle, representing the American Association of University Professors; Henry B. Leonard of the American Historical Association; Joy E. Morgan of the National Educational Association and Charles R. Mann of the American Council of Education.

UNIONS PLEDGE $50,000.

Daily Forward Promises $10,000 in Jewish Campaign.

The United Jewish Campaign announced yesterday that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America had pledged $50,000 of the $6,000,000 to be sought here between April 25 and May 9. The Jewish Daily Forward pledged $10,000.

The unionists took their action after a speech by David A. Brown, Chairman of the campaign, who told of the plight of workmen in Poland and elsewhere in Europe. Other speakers were Jacob Billikopf, Colonel Herbert Lehman, Joseph Schlossberg, B. C. Vladeck and Abraham Beckerman. Five additional industries were organized yesterday.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday—2¼ per cent. for the best names. Thursday—2¼ per cent. for the best names. The quotations are for six months' paper.

Garment Activity Still Lacking.

The ready-to-wear market continues to maintain a rather quiet pace. Reordering by retailers has continued restricted in comparison with the improvement that was expected. Much of the Spring business that has been lost is permanently gone, according to some cost and suit wholesalers, who agree that concessions in Spring merchandise at both wholesale and retail will shortly be the order of the day. The distinct Summer season plan, which will be inaugurated by the Fashion Show at the Hotel Commodore on Tuesday night is expected to make for a more stable market than otherwise would prevail, but its application will be confined more to the stimulation of purchases of new and specialized offerings of silk dresses, silk coats and accessories for distinct Summer wear.

Printed Cottons Still Selling.

Although the refusal of the weather to warm up has taken some of the edge off the demand for printed cottons in this market, a nice business in them, especially in percales in small patterns, is still being done. The individual orders are smaller than they were, but in the aggregate the jobbers are buying freely enough to keep the facilities of the printers well engaged. The break that has taken place in printed silks for the current season has apparently not affected cotton goods of this kind as yet, and there seems to be no great fear in the trade that it will. In some quarters the temporary slowing up in buying of printed cottons has not been altogether unwelcome, in that it affords an opportunity for the printers to catch up a little on deliveries.

Gray Goods Were Inactive.

Not a great deal was done in the local gray goods market yesterday. Printcloth sales were largely confined to spots, although there was some buying for May 39½-inch 64-60s at 7⅝ cents. Spots of that construction brought an eighth more. Other spot printcloth sales included 39-inch 68-72s at 8⅝ cents, and 39½-inch 60-48s at 6⅝ cents. Not much was done in the sheetings, so far as the different constructions traded in were concerned, but a nice business in May-July deliveries of 36-inch 6.15-yard sheetings was reported at 6 cents. The fine-yard cloths lacked snap and feature, and the same was true of the heavier goods sin1 specialties.

Silk Market Marks Time.

The reasoning advanced for delayed openings of Fall broad silks continues to gain ground and there will be few, if any, openings of important lines until the end of this month. While the later demand that was anticipated for Spring silks has not yet made itself felt strongly, wholesalers continue to express confidence in the outlook for a concentrated demand when the weather becomes more settled. The overstocked condition of the market in prints has been corrected somewhat by both liquidation of goods on hand and curtailment of production so that, if there is even a fair later call for prints, the season is expected to wind up with "clean" stocks of these goods.

Neckwear Demand is Active.

Neckwear continues to be one of the most active items in men's haberdashery. Re-orders from retailers have been coming through steadily for new patterns and colorings. Foulards lead in the fabric preferences of most retailers, although failles and crepes are also selling well. Bright colors which, however, are not quite as vivid as those of last Spring, hold most interest, with stripes and neat figured effects leading in the patterns. A nice business in Fall tie silks has been booked by the tie silk mills.

Added Attention to Camel's Hair.

Featuring of camel's hair weaves as women's wear sports fabrics for Fall by one of the leading style mills is considered a significant development. The adaptability of the cloths to sports and travel wear is beyond question, as they possess qualities of durability, softness and warmth that entitle them to rank high. Their introduction by this mill will serve to give them more attention than they have received in the past, although one well-known producer of camel's hair cloths has been selling them to the women's wear trade for a number of years. It is predicted that, with the example set, a number of other mills will also offer such materials, with the indications being that "camel's hair" is likely to be the sports watchword for Fall.

Topcoat Sales Show Up Better.

With more favorable selling weather during the past week, the demand for men's topcoats has taken a spurt. This has been felt to some extent in the re-order business coming from retailers, but manufacturers believe the bulk of such business is yet to come. The straightline topcoat is the style that is selling best in the larger cities. It was said, with the soft-finished cloths and, to some extent, tweeds bearing consumer preference. In many garments the large plaid or check of a bright contrasting color on a bluish-gray ground has taken well in the patterns.

Short Skirts Hit "Boot" Hose.

The continuance of the vogue for short skirts is having a noticeable effect on the demand for "boot" hose in this market. It is especially marked in rayon goods, which, because of the attractive prices at which they can be sold over the counter, have a wide distribution. It was said yesterday in the trade that hose made with less than a 20-inch "boot" are now dragging badly, and a case was cited in which one 17-inch "boot" number had lately been reduced from $2.50 a dozen to $1.95 without jobbing buyers making much effort to get them. As these goods are in the gray, to be dyed any colors the buyer may specify, it is apparent that their failure to sell at the original figure was not due to the colors being wrong. Twenty-inch "boot" hose are having a fair demand, but the best call is for the 22-inch numbers. Even the latter have not been in overwhelming demand, by any means, as is shown by the cut that was recently made in standard goods of this type from $3.35 a dozen to $3.15.

Burlap Market is Very Dull.

The local market for burlaps has been duller during the last few days than for some time past. Although, statistically, there is plenty of reason for firmness of prices at present, actually there has been a decline of a quarter of a cent a yard in both light and heavy standard burlaps in the last week or so. Buyers are holding off in anticipation of still lower prices, and important bids are altogether lacking. Futures, especially are neglected, as important users of burlaps can see no need of buying goods for distant shipments at prices similar to those asked for spots. Cables from Calcutta yesterday reported that market very quiet and off about 25 points from the week's opening quotations. Standard 40-inch spot burlaps were quoted in the local market by C. E. Rockstroh & Co., Inc., at 7.05 cents for 8-ounce goods and 9½ cents for 10½-ounce cloths. April and April-June shipments from Calcutta were quoted, respectively, at 7 and 9½ cents.

No Great Rush for Coal.

Nothing like the usual Spring rush for the domestic sizes of coal has yet appeared in the anthracite market, Seward's Journal will say today. Company coal continues to move in full volume, but the large producers are not sold so far ahead as they normally are at this time of the year. The result is that dealers are getting relatively prompt shipments on their orders and are not bidding against each other for outside tonnage. This has caused the independents to lower their quotations gradually, until now they are obtaining premiums of only 25 to 50 cents a ton, as a rule, over the circular. Even this small margin is offset by the necessity of accepting very low figures for their steam sizes. The cleaning up of distress coal at tidewater has progressed to a point where the tonnage standing at the local bituminous piers is little, if any, above what may be considered normal for this season of the year.

THE WEEK'S PRICE TREND.

One Striking Advance Put Potatoes Up to $10 a Barrel.

Although there was again such a large excess of declines over advances in Dun's list of minimum wholesale commodities prices that there were almost two of the former to every one of the latter, there was a notable shrinkage in the number of changes in this week's list as compared with that of a week ago. Then there were 72 revisions, including 54 declines, while this week there were 32 declines in a total of 49 changes. One of the features was the upward tendency of prices for the more important foodstuffs. A notable advance was that in potatoes, which now stand at $10 a barrel.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.

Of the seventeen changes in the foodstuffs this week, ten were advances. In the local market for provisions all of the changes in flour were upward. The fancy grade of Minnesota family flour led with a rise of 30 cents a barrel, while Spring patent and Winter soft straight flour each advanced 25 cents a barrel. Middle Western lard was lower here, but there was again no change in terms of bacon. At Chicago, meats, pork, short ribs and the sheep showed no change, while live steers and hogs were higher.

Changes in the dairy products were few and unimportant. Extra creamery butter dropped a cent a pound, but there were no changes in the listed varieties of cheese. Fancy near-by eggs did not change, while fresh-gathered "firsts" were slightly lower. Prices all through this part of the list are now not very much different from those of a year ago, a spread of 4½ cents a pound on extra creamery butter being the largest margin between the two.

Changes in the listed fresh fruits were lacking this week, and the only revision in the dried ones was a drop in "40-50" California prunes in 25-pound boxes. In the vegetables the only decline was in choice white kidney beans, and the only advance was one of 50 cents a barrel in potatoes. This brought the price of the latter to $10 a barrel, against $3.25 at this time last year.

No. 7 Rio and No. 4 Santos coffees were both lower this week, but there were again no changes in the teas. Fluctuations in the spices consisted of declines in Zanzibar cloves, nutmegs and black Lampong pepper. There was a rise in 96-degree raw sugar, but fine granulated did not change.

Malting barley showed the only decline in the grains this week, with advances indicated in wheat, corn, oats and rye. The leather list was again quotably unchanged, and in hides the only change was a rise in Chicago city calfskins. Tallow went down.

No changes were seen in lumber this week, while in the building materials the only revision was a decline in Eastern spruce lath. In the metals the changes were evenly divided, with two each way. The advances occurred in zinc and tin, while the declines took place in valley furnace basic and Bessemer pig irons.

The combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils produced only seven advances and three declines. A slight break was seen in menthol, in case lots, which now costs only about half as much as it did at this time last year. The other changes in these lists were without feature. Turpentine declined, but there were no other revisions in the naval stores.

Both the best Brazilian and best plantation crude rubbers declined again this week. A drop of 30 cents a ton in foundry coke put it back where it was a year ago. Furnace coke has been at last year's level for several weeks. Hemp was lower, and the trend of wool was downward.

The week in the textiles was devoid of important features, although a leading line of wool sport fabrics for Fall was opened at reductions averaging 5 to 10 per cent.

ORDERS IMPORTS CERTIFIED.

Czechoslovakia Bans Entry Unless Endorsed by Consulate.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, April 16 (AP).—Beginning April 21, the Czechoslovakian customs authorities will refuse entry to cereals, flour, vegetables and malt unless they are accompanied by certificates issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the exporting country endorsed by the Czechoslovak Consulate.

The measure is directed especially against Argentina and Canada, which countries have imposed extra duties on Czechoslovak manufactures.

For the time being transatlantic consignments arriving without certificates will be referred to the Ministry of Commerce, which will decide whether they will be admitted or excluded.

DOMESTIC BUSINESS CONTINUES TO GAIN

COAL OUTPUT IS LARGER

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Continued gains in domestic business and industry for the first two weeks of April over the same period of the previous year are shown by figures reported to the Department of Commerce. The volume of distribution during the first half of April as seen from carloadings and check payments was larger than in any other comparable period.

The output of bituminous coal and beehive coke during the first week of April was larger than a year ago, while lumber production and the volume of new building contracts awarded recorded similar changes from the corresponding week of 1925. Receipts of hogs at the principal primary markets during the first week of April were larger than a year ago, while the receipts of cattle and wheat recorded declines.

Cotton receipts in sight during the first two weeks of the current month were larger than during the corresponding period of 1925. The production of crude petroleum during the first week of April also recorded an increase over the corresponding period last year.

Receipts of wool at Boston during the first two weeks of April were about twice as large as during the same period of 1925. Exports of corn were running more than three times as heavy as a year earlier. Exports of wheat and wheat flour on the other hand were running considerably below their respective movements of the preceding year.

Prices of stocks on the New York Exchange during the second week of April recorded an advance from the low points of the preceding week of the average almost 10 per cent. above the corresponding week of the previous year.

Average prices for corporation bonds were higher than in any previous week during the last three years with the exception of the week ending Feb. 27, 1926, which equaled the current average quotation. The volume of shares sold on the New York Stock Exchange during the first two weeks of April was about 80 per cent. larger than during the same period of 1925, while bond sales during the same period were smaller in volume than a year ago.

Interest rates on New York call loans were higher than last year, while time money rates ruled easier than a year earlier. Wholesale prices continued to average lower, being about 5 per cent. below a year ago. The number of firms failing during the first two weeks of April was 4 per cent. smaller than a year ago.

MERCHANTS TO GREET FOREIGN EDITORS

Will Go to Philadelphia to Meet Visitors—Mayor Will Also Welcome Them.

More than one hundred owners and editors of newspapers in twenty countries in Central and South America and the West Indies are scheduled to arrive here on Monday as guests of the Merchants' Association. The newspaper men have been attending the first Pan-American Congress in Washington. They will remain in New York City until Friday.

Special Pullmans will be awaiting the visitors in Philadelphia, where members of the General Reception Committee of 240 persons, headed by Lincoln Cromwell, will meet them. They are due at the Pennsylvania Station at 6 P. M. and will go to the Commodore. At 9 P. M. the journalists will be guests at a reception, vaudeville show and supper in the hotel ballroom.

Mayor Walker will address them on Tuesday at the City Hall, and then they visit the station of the Radio Corporation of America and the Stock Exchange. A luncheon by The Associated Press will be held in the Waldorf at noon; the visitors will visit the Hispanic Museum in the afternoon and at night will be the guests of the publishers of the New York daily newspapers at the Park Lane.

On Wednesday morning they will visit the plant of The New York Times and will be guests at luncheon of Adolph S. Ochs, going later to attend the annual meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association at the Waldorf. After the performance at the Hippodrome the Latin-American journalists will visit the plant of The New York Herald Tribune. A breakfast to be given by the American Association of Advertising Agencies and a luncheon by the Pan-American Society of the United States, both at the Commodore, will fill the forepart of Thursday. In the afternoon the visitors will go around Manhattan Island by boat. On Thursday night a dinner in their honor will be held by the Merchants' Association in the Biltmore. Friday morning the delegates will go by motor to the West on a trip arranged by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Serbia Decorates General Bliss.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The King of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes has awarded to Maj. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, retired, the Grand Order of St. Sava in recognition of "eminent service" rendered to that country. As an officer of the army, General Bliss is prohibited from receiving any decoration or medal from a foreign Government. Secretary of War Davis, however, has directed that notation be made on his army record. General Bliss is now serving as Governor of the Soldiers' Home in Washington.

Jewelry Peddler Acquitted.

Joseph Jaffe, 39 years old, a jewelry peddler, was acquitted yesterday by a jury in Judge Mulqueen's part of General Sessions on a charge of criminally receiving $2,000 in antique Spanish jewelry which had been stolen from the home of Mrs. William Astor Chanler at 141 East Nineteenth Street. Frank Gorsky, a window cleaner, arrested for the theft, was alleged to have involved Jaffe as the man to whom he sold the jewels for $30. Jaffe contended that the jewelry was not worth the value put on it by Mrs. Chanler and said he purchased it from Gorsky in good faith.

BUSINESS RECORDS

FAILURES FOR THE WEEK.

BRADSTREET'S reports 339 failures for the week in the United States as compared with 295 for the previous week and 365, 401, 396 and 367 for the corresponding weeks in 1925, 1924, 1923 and 1922, respectively. In the Middle, 91; Western, 82; Northwestern, 22; Southern, 73; Pacific Western, 30; Canada had 44 failures in the week as against 39. Statistics show 74.5 per cent. of the concerns failing had $5,000 capital or less and 16.5 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

118,000 MURDERERS FREE, SAYS JURIST

METAL TRADES MEET HERE

There are at large in the United States 118,000 men and women murderers who have never been brought to justice, Marcus Kavanagh, Judge of the Superior Court of Chicago, declared last night at the annual dinner of the National Metal Trades Association at the Hotel Astor. There were in this country last year, he said, more than 10,000 criminal homicides as compared with 100 in England. Speakers at the meeting preceding the dinner were Representative Ogden L. Mills, whose subject was "The Real Tax Problem in the United States"; John W. O'Leary, President of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Dr. William J. Spillman of the Department of Agriculture.

Judge Kavanagh declared that the lawlessness in this country today was unparalleled in the history of civilization. "There is no mystery as to why we have so much crime," he said. "Evil-minded men in the United States have no respect for the law, because their experience has been that they need have little fear of its penalties.

"The time has arrived when precedents, forms of practice, pleading and procedure must no longer be allowed to shield the criminal."

Representative Mills criticised sharply Governor Smith's program of borrowing for State improvements as contrasted with the "pay as you go" plan. Comparing the economies of the Federal Administration with those of the State and local Governments, he declared that the Federal Government had reduced taxes at the rate of $1,000,000,000 a year. He said this saving to the taxpayer was virtually wiped out by the action of States and localities, which have been increasing their expenditures at the rate of $1,250,000,000 a year.

Mr. O'Leary, speaking on the contribution of management to American industry, declared that scientific principles of business management had vastly increased production and facilitated distribution, largely through their application to labor problems. "To transfer the viewpoint of labor from that of opposition to the employer," he said, "into one of cooperation and enthusiasm for the product is not only possible but is being realized daily."

The remedy for the problems confronting agriculture is through a balance of production to the market demand, said Dr. Spillman. Overproduction of corn, oats, hay and beef, he declared, is the real reason for present agitation by the farmer. The Department of Agriculture, he pointed out, is attempting to give farmers advance information on market conditions at the time of planting.

Mrs. Margaret E. Benson of the Women's Department of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, speaking on "Women in Industry," asserted that a number of women's organizations had become the dupes of international socialistic propagandists, and have directly or indirectly become agents for communism in schools, churches and social groups throughout the country.

Other speakers included W. Irving Bullard, Vice President of the Merchants National Bank of Boston, whose subject was "The Problems of International Finance"; Dr. Clarence H. Robertson, who spoke on "Scientific Advance in China," and Virgil Jordon of the National Industrial Conference Board, speaking on "The Nub of the Agriculture Situation."

SENATORS ASSAIL BUILDINGS MEASURE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The $165,000,000 public buildings bill, which is believed to have the approval of President Coolidge, replaced the Italian debt settlement in the Senate today. A fight on the measure was started by Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi and other Democrats, who criticised it as "political" in character.

Senator Fernald of Maine, in charge of the bill, declared the proposed expenditure of money was intended to save the Government from paying out annual rents aggregating nearly $25,000,000. He asked unanimous consent to consider the measure, but Senator Harrison made objection and the motion was then made to set aside the debt settlement on which there has been an agreement to vote next Wednesday.

The last Public Buildings bill of a general character was passed in 1913. Senator Fernald called attention to the enormous growth since that time of the public business in post offices and other Government branches.

Rents in the District of Columbia amount to more than $1,000,000 and in the country at large to more than $25,000,000. Not all of these would be saved, he said, but the money would be applied where emergencies exist.

Of the total carried by the bill $80,000,000 would be for buildings in the District of Columbia and $115,000,000 outside. Of the latter sum, $15,000,000 is for the purpose of completing projects authorized in 1913.

Democratic objectors complained that the remaining $100,000,000, which is in the form of an omnibus bill, would not be apportioned fairly.

"If we continue renting much longer," said Senator Fernald "the realtors of the country will own the country."

Asked by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, how the sum carried in the bill was determined upon, Senator Fernald said it was "about all that the President would stand for."

"The Senator said it was all the President would stand for?" asked Senator Harrison.

"About all," Senator Fernald replied. "And as to the method of spending," asked Senator Harrison, "is that the only method the people would stand for."

He asked why the long practice of having Congress, instead of the Treasury Department, direct the places where the money was to go should be abandoned.

Senator Fernald replied that $15,000,000 of the sum carried out the plan worked out by a Democratic President, a Democratic Administration and a Democratic Secretary of the Treasury. This would take care of sixty-five buildings.

"Certainly in view of that it cannot be charged we are playing politics," added Senator Fernald.

SUBURBAN ACREAGE A FEATURE OF SALES

WESTCHESTER ESTATE SOLD

Long Island and Westchester acreage took a prominent place in suburban transactions yesterday. Long Island buyers showed a preference for tracts in the vicinity of the Hamptons, where there has been much activity of late.

In the west end of the incorporated Village of East Hampton the East End Development Company has purchased for $90,000 a forty-five-acre tract formerly owned by E. C. Potter. The property is near the Atlantic Ocean and Georgica Lake. The buyers plan a residential development in keeping with the homes and estates surrounding the tract. R. C. Payne & Co. negotiated the sale.

"The same brokers also sold for Charlotte Thiele a large plot fronting 400 feet on the Montauk Highway and 200 feet on the Town Line Road, Wainscott. John Montgomery and others were the buyers. The reported price was $12,000. The same brokers also sold a tract of thirty-one acres in Queens for A. B. Hallock to Harry A. Bonuck.

In West Hampton Theodore D. Berman, President of the Berkel Realty Company, purchased a tract of twenty-two acres at a reported price of $5,000 an acre. The property adjoins the holdings of the Berkel Realty Company at Brooklyn and Eagle Avenues, Lakeview.

There was also a good demand for large vacant parcels in Nassau and Queens Counties. In Mill Neck the estate of Gabrielle W. Murdock sold through the office of Warren Murdock a tract of three and one-half acres improved with a remodeled Colonial farmhouse and outbuildings. The plot is on Beaver Lake, opposite the Beaver Dam Winter Sports Club.

Edward and Louis Schacher have purchased the block at Malba Drive and Twenty-first Street, Malba, L. I., adjoining the Malba Station of the Long Island Railroad, where they will erect five stores and seven apartments. Samuel S. Pollick, architect and builder of Woodmere, has been engaged to start work immediately. The erection of these stores and apartments will give to Malba its first stores.

The Twentieth Century Holding Company, Reuben R. Krefets, President, purchased from the Camet Construction Company for improvement fifteen lots on the north side of Bay Twentieth Street, Bensonhurst, with a frontage of 212 feet, upon which it will erect fifteen two-family houses. Morse & Flicker acted as brokers in the transaction.

Cruse & Brown Co. sold the block front on the north side of Polk Avenue, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets, Jackson Heights, to a New York builder, who intends to erect a high-class six-story elevator garden apartment covering the entire plot. Construction is to be started at once.

The Morrose Holding Corporation sold the business plot, 100 by 125 feet, on the southwest corner of Greenpoint Avenue and Carolin Street, Long Island City, to a New York investor, who has resold to a local builder for improvement with stores and apartments. The Hub Realty Company was the broker in both transactions.

Van Rensselaer Estate Sold.

Stephen Van Rensselaer has sold his twenty-seven acre estate in Briarcliff-Ossining Hills to a client of Yates & Gary, the brokers who negotiated the sale. The property is improved with a Colonial farmhouse built before the Revolution. There are also a gardener's cottage, garages, greenhouse and other outbuildings on the property. The estate joins the property of Miss Jeanne Eagles.

The Owner's Equity Bonds, Inc., have purchased a plot 400 by 175 feet between Palmer Avenue and Pondfield Road West, overlooking the Bronx River Parkway and within three minutes' walking distance of the Bronxville station. The site will be improved immediately with a high-class elevator apartment house laid out in suites of from three to six rooms.

The Briarcliff Realty Company has sold seven lots at Briarcliff, in the Valentine Development, to Florence S. Jackson, one on Larch Road, three on Simpson Road and three on Jackson Road, which fronts on the new Briarcliff-Peekskill Parkway Route. Sarah E. Putney has purchased a one-half acre site on Birch Road, two lots on Oak Street and one on State Road in the same development.

Mary S. Fisher sold her residence, on a large plot on Walworth Avenue, Greenacres, Westchester County, to a New York business man, who will occupy immediately. George Howe, Inc., were the brokers.

CITY BREVITIES.

The Lotos Club has issued invitations to a Ladies' Day entertainment at the clubhouse, 110 West Fifty-seventh Street, on Thursday afternoon, April 29.

The International Trade Exhibition, which opened its Eastern offices yesterday at 200 Fifth Avenue, will remain at Forty-sixth Street. Charles W. Frey, Chairman of the board of the publishing house, has had his offices on Park Row for forty years.

The State Board of the Daughters of the Revolution, meeting at the Astor yesterday discussed plans for the convention which will be held at the Sesquicentennial Exposition at Philadelphia. The D. A. R. will have a room in the Educational Building from June 1 to Oct. 1.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 16.—The disturbance that has caused much rain in the Ohio Valley and Tennessee in the last few days, with an associated cyclonic circuit to North Carolina, Denver, Quebec, reports the lowest pressure, 29.14 inches, over Southern Manitoba. The weather will be generally fair east of the Mississippi River Sunday, but the eastward advance of the western disturbance will be attended by rain in the Southern States on Sunday and showers are probable by Sunday night as far as the Middle Atlantic Coast and southward to the Northern portion of the Gulf States, Lake and Gulf States.

The temperature will be lower in the upper Ohio Valley, the lower lake region and the North Atlantic and over the North Atlantic States and slightly higher in the Southern States Saturday, and it will not change materially Sunday except in the Carolinas and Southern Virginia, where cooler weather will prevail.

Comparisons With Weather Conditions.

In the following record of observations at United States Weather Bureau stations yesterday, the temperatures given are for 8 A. M. and 8 P. M. and the highest during the preceding twelve hours from 8 P. M. to 8 A. M.; the barometer reading and condition at 8 P. M. are also recorded, and the total rainfall in for the twenty-four hours ended at 8 P. M.

SPAIN TO OPEN NEW SERVICE

José Luis Albarrán, personal representative of the Conde de Guell, President of the Spanish Royal Mail Line, announced yesterday at the offices of the Committee of Information Pro España, 41 Broad Street, details of the new monthly service between New York and Seville which will be inaugurated the first week of June.

The Manual Arnus, a new ship of 12,000 tons displacement, will start the service. Two other ships, slightly larger, are now under construction. The first of these will be ready in 1927.

The new service has been made possible by the recent completion of the Cadiz-Seville Canal, which was opened on the return of the Spanish airmen from South America on the Argentine battleship Buenos Aires. This canal makes Seville a seaport only three hours' sail from the ocean. According to Mr. Albarrán, much encouragement to the line's plans for attracting Americans to Spain was given by former Ambassador Alexander P. Moore.

A New Mark in Value!

Men's Spring Suits

Approved Styles!

New Weaves! New Colors!

Kirschbaum Tailoring

It is really surprising how much quality can be concentrated into a man's suit at forty-five dollars. It can be done. We made a vigorous effort to excel all previous value-giving accomplishments at the price, in these spring suits produced by the Kirschbaum craftsmen.

And we succeeded in a measure that is quickly reflected in the clothes. The result is a new mark in value-giving. Styles, fabrics, patterns and needle-work, admittedly worthy of a higher price. Rich virgin wool weaves; many exclusive patterns, and colors in tune with the season.

Men's Spring Topcoats, $35, $40, $45

1 What LLOYD GEORGE thinks of MUSSOLINI

2 What is the Worst Crime in the World?

"It is capital punishment," says Kathleen Norris. 'Present methods might well make Torquemada, the famous torturer of the Inquisition, turn enviously in his grave," she declares, and paints a stark picture of the brutal practices in vogue today. Read this thundering denunciation in tomorrow's Sunday American by

The former assistant chief of the United States Air Service graphically visualizes an attack on Alaska by Far Eastern powers—and tells how the Mongols can be quickly and successfully repulsed. He takes his readers on a flight with the defending aerial fleet, showing just what course must be pursued to withstand this foreign invasion. Read this vivid account of the Asiatic menace in tomorrow's Sunday American by

GENERAL MITCHELL

4 Are Morals a Matter of state lines?

"What justice can there be in some of the evils of the present day confusion? In one state a marriage is dissolved in a few minutes on any one of seventeen accepted grounds; in another state no divorce can be obtained on any ground." Read this highly interesting digest of divorce conditions in tomorrow's Sunday American by

RUPERT HUGHES

5 IS THE ERA OF THE "FLAPPER" PASSING?

Is the pendulum of youth swinging back to a more old fashioned standard? How many things point to such a movement sounding the death knell to "necking," "petting" and "looping" parties is told in tomorrow's Sunday American by the noted novelist and dramatist—

JESSE LYNCH WILLIAMS

—And then, too, there are many other fine features—humorous articles by George Ade, Montague Glass and Ed Wynn—"The Potters," by McEvoy—"The Dumb Waiter," by Bruno Lessing—pictures by McCutcheon—eight pages of comics—the weekly magazine section—and a host of other good things—all awaiting you in your copy of
